About Mortelito.
Open Mind, Courage.
Doctors Should Advertise.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ANTHONY MORTELITO, name of grim omen, is dead in Sing Sing prison, where he had been for ten years. Often punished with solitary confinement, bitter in his moods, he believed that one keeper had a grudge against him, and killed the keeper.

TWO NIGHTS AGO, lying on his cot in the death house, where a sentinel paced back and forth, to prevent suicides, Mortelito tied a towel around his neck, drew it tighter and tighter and choked himself to death, without a groan. He had written, in Italian: "I am going to die." He did die, and cheated the electric chair.

AN UNDERSIZED man, 32 years old, weight, 115 pounds, he was starved mentally and starved physically. And, since he is dead, and civilization is satisfied, the remaining question is, will he have a chance anywhere else, outside of his Sing Sing cell?

WHICH ARE the important qualities in a man?

Two are COURAGE and ABILITY TO RECEIVE NEW IDEAS.

Thomas Lipton, 81 years old, will come back to try for the cup again.

He will take with him to Europe a silver cup, weighing 50 pounds, representing admiration and affection in the United States.

But he wants the cup that he came to get. That shows courage.

HIS NEXT YACHT will be equipped with the new mechanical mast, which Lipton says enabled Harold S. Vanderbilt to win with his Enterprise, in four straight heats. This proves that Lipton, at 81, is open to new ideas.

WHEN HARVEY in the reign of Charles the First discovered the circulation of the blood, all doctors past 40 rejected the discovery as absurd.

They continued bleeding patients first on one side, then on the other, "to keep the blood evenly distributed on both sides of the body."

DR. WYNNE, chief health officer of New York, says good doctors should advertise, "ethically," of course and thus offset advertising by quacks. The suggestion is sound.

If you have what the people want or need, you should LET THEM KNOW THAT YOU HAVE IT. That is advertising.

It is an outrage, for instance, that a great diagnostician should be compelled to practice medicine generally, wasting his time on details that a good doctor might attend to. Diagnosis should be his only work.

CHARLES DANA GIBSON'S little girl, who has since made him a grandfather, was on the operating table having her appendix removed, when a medical student looking on remarked: "That child has scarlet fever, not appendicitis," which was true.

They removed the appendix while they were about it, sewed up the incision, cured the scarlet fever. That medical student should have been trained as a diagnostician.

EUROPE WORRIES about possibilities of 1931, with wars threatening, business depression and unemployment making the masses restless.

If that happens, it is safe to predict unpleasant Mussolini counter-activities.

Germany and Poland are described as suffering from "Failure of parliamentary government."

Europe's hope is based on hatred of war among the masses. They have not forgotten the mud of the trenches, the sound of enemy airplanes, and bursting bombs, and next time will not be so willing to fight when told that "patriotism" demands it. The distance "to Tipperary" has increased since 1914.

FATHER FADDEN, assistant rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, says "Cleaner plays will come. The public is tired of watching filth."

The public, like the average pig in its sty, would like to be free from mud.

But it takes intelligence to make clean plays interesting, as it takes agricultural intelligence to house pigs in cleanly fashion.

The worst man in the worst dive changes his attitude, sits a little straighter, shows signs of what we call "a soul," when a decent woman, a Salvation Army girl for instance, enters the place.

THE COMMUNITIES that wisely adopt "daylight saving" during the months of long daylight, changed back last night to winter hours. He who always gets up at seven can sleep an hour longer and still get up at seven.

If you could know exactly how much or how little use each daylight saving American made of the extra hour, through the summer months, you would know just what each one amounts to.

WALL STREET conditions remind the middle aged of the "chills and fever" days, when malaria was nearly everywhere. One day it was a chill, with

BOB ROUTS HOMANS IN FINAL, 8-7

Marines Fight Off 15,000 Fans Endangering Players At Finish; Records Fall.

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—On the famous East Course of Merion, where as a shock-haired youthful phenomenon of 14 he first appeared in national championship competition, Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., today completed the greatest march of conquest in golf history.

By the one-sided margin of 8 up and 7 to go, Jones brushed aside 22-year-old Eugent Vanderpool Homans, of Englewood, N. J., to win the United States amateur championship and score his fourth straight national victory for the year—the "grand slam" of golf.

There are no more golfing worlds left to conquer for this 28-year-old citizen-lawyer of Atlanta, Ga., who made his final triumph look so ridiculously easy that the wonder is he hasn't been doing this sort of thing every year since he first began to scale the height.

Bobby's triumph today after a solid week of competition was by far the easiest of any of the quartet he scored to sweep everything in sight for the campaign of 1930. It was just a breeze by comparison with the battles he waged earlier to capture the British open, the British amateur and the American open.

15,000 SEE FINISH

There was drama and a surging, rushing, and at the finish an uncontrollable crowd of perhaps 15,000 spectators running wild as they sought to see golfing history made such as may never be recorded again, but there were few if any competitive thrills to a final match that was just another big parade for the all-conquering son of the South.

The end was in sight when Jones ended the morning 18 holes

Clocks Set Back To Winter Time

Daylight saving in Pittsburgh and most other urban sections of the country was to end officially at 2 o'clock this morning.

The clocks, which were turned ahead the last Sunday in April, were set back last night before the populace retired, to conform with Eastern standard time.

Railroads that changed their local schedules to meet daylight saving have announced new schedules.

SAFETY MEET OPENS MONDAY

Prepared for more than 7,000 visitors, Pittsburgh today began to welcome early arrivals to international delegates to the nineteenth annual National Safety Congress, formally opening tomorrow.

"Stay Alive" banners and Safety Week signs heralded the mammoth convention throughout the downtown district with many commercial windows exhibiting special displays for the promotion of safety. Special sermons were being delivered from more than 100 local churches in observance of Safety Sunday.

AUSTRALIAN BROADCAST

The congress' initial program is scheduled tomorrow morning with an international two-way broadcast between Station KDKA and Sidney, Australia, at 7 a. m.

Opening with the Australian national anthem, the program will

DONORA STAND FALLS, 50 HURT

DONORA, Pa., Sept. 27.—Collapse of the grandstand at the American Legion Stadium during the Kennedy High-Donora High football game this afternoon precipitated 500 occupants to the ground and caused injuries to at least 50 spectators, mostly students.

After the injured had been taken from the wreckage and their hurts bandaged, the two teams waged a 0-0 tie game.

Upward of 500 people, including the Donora High School Band were in the stand when it crashed with a roar. Several were trampled.

Among those reported most seriously injured are Esther Wiseberg, William Jones and Arnold Hirsh. The former suffered a broken leg, it is reported.

Calls were sent for physicians and Dr. M. H. Heatter was first to respond. He bandaged up numerous cuts and bruises.

It was the first time the bleachers had been used, the stadium having been the scene of its first football game today. They were of metal and wood, and the school board called a special meeting at once at which an investigation of the accident was ordered.

Bobby Jones, 50-1 Shot, Wins Backers $125,000

LONDON, Sept. 27—(AP.)—Any London financiers who may have laid odds of 50 to 1 against Bobby Jones' chances of winning four major golf titles in 1930 refrained from making much noise about it after news of Bobby's victory in the American Amateur spread tonight.

Such odds never were officially quoted by Lloyds, because Lloyds does not conduct an insurance business as a corporation. This is done by individual member firms.

Lloyds' offices are said to have received inquiries from Atlanta asking for "insurance" against Jones's sweeping all the greens of golfdom this year.

Individual members of the firms wanted to live up to the tradition that an individual can get insured at Lloyds against anything from twins and seasickness to earthquakes and avalanches.

These members are understood to have accepted the American proposition as a private deal. Admirers of Bobby in Atlanta are reported to have put up $2,500.

This would mean that $125,000 is due them from London tonight.

Bobby knew nothing about the deal this summer, nor had he any idea who were the Atlantans backing him.

Rockne Now Broker, Continues Coaching

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Knute Rockne, the football coach, has decided to embark in the stock brokerage business, it was announced here today. He has not planned to give up his duties as athletic director at Notre Dame University, however.

Effective October 1, Rockne will become associated with R. H. Gibson and Company of this city as a special partner. The firm is opening an office at South Bend, Ind., home of Notre Dame.

KILLER SUSPECT AT BAY SHOOTS TWO, ESCAPES

Troops Join Chase Over Mountains for Fugitive In Mt. Washington Holdup.

By FRANK J. SHENKEL,
Staff Correspondent.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Sept. 27.—The biggest man hunt in the history of Clearfield and Centre counties is on tonight for George C. Skidmore, alleged Pittsburgh killer, who shot two men escaping police near Moshannon this morning.

Skidmore, Mt. Washington youth, wanted in connection with the slaying of Charles P. Hammond, gas station attendant, in Pittsburgh last Saturday night, was trailed to a hunting camp on Rattlesnake mountain and when three state highway patrolmen, and William Fox, beacon light keeper, approached, opened fire. J. G. Olmes, highway patrolman, was seriously wounded and Fox was shot in the right arm.

300 SEARCH HILLS

Tonight 300 men are engaged in beating the dense mountains in search of Skidmore. Included in the posse are members of two State Constabulary troops, cavalry detachments from Tyrone, and Bellefonte, county detectives, sheriff's deputies and detectives from Pittsburgh in addition to more than 100 armed farmers.

The fugitive's brother, Leonard Skidmore, 18, Bellefonte Academy student, and William Dutton, 25, of Duquesne Heights, are held incommunicado in the Bellefonte County jail. It was on a tip furnished by the younger Skidmore that George's hideout, a mountain cabin, was located.

Young Skidmore and Dutton were picked up by state police Friday night, en route to Bellefonte for provisions for the fugitive, police said. In their automobile, police say, were 5,000

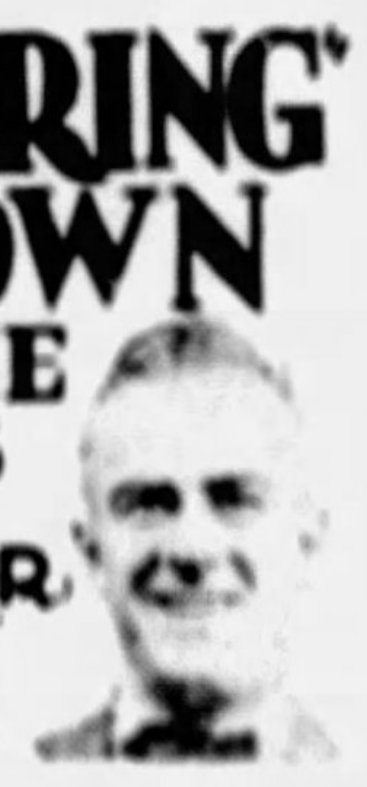
'BAERING' DOWN ON THE NEWS WITH ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER



It has been said of tyrants that their names shall be written in water and their deeds in sand.

And then your name shall be written on thousands of silver cups and your deeds on the front pages of the world's card index.

When Bobby Jones dropped that last putt into the final bird bath on the ultimate plaza he accomplished a stunt on which Lloyd's paid off to the tune of a thousand to one.

Lloyd's bet a thousand to one in the spring that Bobby wouldn't grab himself the four major golf citations. He did that very thing and had enough left over to win a backgammon contest and two hoss races.

All golfers have bowed their heads to Bobby. But they looked up too quick!

When Mr. Jones is not golfing he is a lawyer. We know that because he has a diploma that says so.

And any client who engages Lawyer Jones may lose the case but he will see a darned good golf match.

We celebrate with Bobby and only wish that the eighteenth amendment was already repealed so that the whole nation could get in his cups.

World Notables Will Pay Tribute To Westinghouse

Unveil Monument in Schenley Park October 6.

HOLD BANQUET

Secretary Mellon to Head Leaders of Industry.

Pittsburgh will be host to what probably is the most representative group of industrial and financial leaders in the world on October 6, when a memorial to George Westinghouse, Pittsburgh's engineering genius, who founded the great enterprise which bears his name, will be unveiled in Schenley Park.

BANQUET—BROADCAST

Following the unveiling ceremony in the afternoon, the out-of-town visitors will be honor guests at a banquet in Hotel William Penn. Both programs will be broadcast on a nation-wide radio hookup.

If his health permits, Thomas A. Edison has promised to be here.

A. W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury; Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company; Samuel Vauclain, chairman of the board, Baldwin Locomotive Works; James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation; Secretary of Labor James J. Davis; B. C. Forbes, of Forbes Magazine; Gov. John S. Fisher; M. S. Sloan, president, New York Edison Company, and David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, have sent their acceptances.

OTHER NOTABLES

Others who have accepted are: Congressman James M. Beck, Pennsylvania; Rt. Hon. Lord Southborough, director of the Westinghouse Brake and Saxby Signal Company, London; Senator David A. Reed, Jerome J. Hanauer,

Scan Shore of Erie For Plane Victims

CONNEAUT, O., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Scores of men and boys, Coast Guardsmen, and sheriff's deputies spent today searching the shore line of Lake Erie from Conneaut to Ashtabula, but failed to find the bodies of William McNulty, Columbus salt manufacturer, and Willard Parker, of Cleveland, his pilot, whose wrecked plane was found a mile west of here this morning.

Coste and Bellonte Los Angeles Guests

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Lieut. Maurice Bellonte, French aviators, landed at the Municipal Airport at 3:40 p. m. today in their trans-Atlantic plane Question Mark. The fliers will remain until Tuesday. They came here from San Francisco taking off at 12:30 p. m.

Uruguay Guarding Against Uprising

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 27.—(Universal.)—According to reports received here tonight, the republic of Uruguay was taking widespread precautions, similar to those taken in Argentina, against a threatening revolutionary outburst.

Details are not available, due to a partial censorship established in the republic this afternoon.

Pitt and Tech Easy Winners; Jones Triumphs

While Bobby Jones was completing his sweep of the major golfing titles yesterday, the collegiate football season was getting under full swing.

The University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Tech elevens both won their opening game, Pitt defeating Waynesburg, 52-0, at the Stadium, and Carnegie Tech downing the University of Buffalo at Buffalo, 75-2.

Grove City and W. & J. also rolled up big totals, the former defeating Morris-Harvey, 90-0, while Wash-Jeff won over Bethany, 74-0.

HEARST ON AIR HERE TONIGHT

Tonight at 10 o'clock listeners on KDKA and WCAE programs will hear William Randolph Hearst in his first radio broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company's network.

M. H. Aylesworth

Mr. Hearst is to speak on invitation of M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, who will introduce the publisher in a private studio of NBC at 711 Fifth avenue, New York.

About 75 stations in the United States and Canada will be joined for the broadcast. In addition, five short-wave transmitters will be utilized to carry the address to all parts of the globe.

The subject of Mr. Hearst's address is unannounced. He is expected to speak for about 15 minutes.

Amos 'n' Andy Kept Off Air by Travel

Because Amos 'n' Andy were not on the air at their appointed time last night is no indication that they are going to take Saturday holidays. They were eastward bound from Hollywood and were unable to make telephone connections that would have permitted them to broadcast en route. They will be on the air as usual on Monday, it was announced at KDKA.

The station was swamped by telephone inquiries when the substitute program started.

Two Policemen Held Up, Disarmed Making Arrest

Shielding himself with his 2½-year-old daughter, Doris, John Posech, 24, held up and disarmed two East End policemen early last night in his home, 6607 Apple avenue.

Patrolmen James O'Donnell and Joseph Thompson answered a call to the Posech home after it was reported Posech had threatened to kill his wife.

The policemen aver that upon entering the back door they were faced by Posech, shielded by his baby and wielding a small revolver.

He ordered the police to about face, and, when they complied, he disarmed them. He then cast aside his own weapon and flourished the larger guns of the officers, they say.

Posech, finally was induced to drop the guns and his arrest followed after a struggle, during which Thompson was cut on the right hand.

Poesch and his wife had been fighting over domestic troubles, it was learned.

LIGHT WINE, BEER SAFE FROM RAIDS

Beyond Reach of Federal Officers Unless Evidence Of Sale Can be Produced.

Woodcock Gives Immunity On Return from Tour in East; Lauds Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Wine and beer making in the home for home consumption was declared immune from Federal interference today by Prohibition Director Amos W. D. Woodcock.

The national enforcement agencies, he said, can intervene only when evidence of a sale has been obtained, as without such evidence no search warrant for a private home can be issued.

Under the law, he explained, the home brewer is liable to punishment if his product is "intoxicating in fact," a point for settlement by a jury, but in any event, he is beyond the reach of the Federal authorities unless a commercial feature is involved.

EVIDENCE DIFFICULT

Woodcock said a citizen can transport wine, manufactured in his own home and for home consumption, providing that it is not "intoxicating in fact" and that no commercial law violations are involved. He said nothing about it being allowable for a citizen to transport beer.

The dry chieftain returned today from an inspection tour of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. His survey was devoted to conditions within the enforcement organization and he

BOY TEASING FRIEND SHOT

Teasing his chum by smoking a cigaret, against the latter's wishes may cost the life of 12-year-old Carl Weismiller, of 1905 Irwin avenue, North Side, who was in the Presbyterian Hospital last night with a bullet wound through the head and not expected to live.

William Davis, 17, of 526 Taylor avenue, North Side, was being detained by North Side police while homicide detectives investigated the shooting. The tragedy occurred at the Davis home.

Carl picked up a cigaret being smoked by Davis while the latter was dressing, according to Davis' report to police. Davis told his pal not to smoke and playfully threatened to shoot him if he persisted. As Weismiller took another puff Davis drew a revolver from a bureau drawer and pointed it at his chum's head. The revolver, which Davis thought was not loaded, exploded, the bullet passing through the victim's skull.

AMTORG AGENT CALLS TRADERS SECRET POLICE

Code Messages Exposed as Congressmen Delve Into Short Selling of Wheat

Universal Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Code communications dealing with the army and naval defenses of the United States, have passed between Moscow and the Amtorg Corporation, soviet agency here it was charged yesterday by a former vice president of the corporation.

Basil W. Delgass, the witness made the charge before the Congressional committee investigating Communism in this country and holding sessions in this city.

Delgass swore he resigned as vice president of the Amtorg on the day before the Congressional committee began functioning so he could avoid giving perjured testimony such as that given later, he said, by officials of the company, including Peter A. Bagdanov, chairman of the board.

The revelations of the code messages came in response to a question as to whether anything of political character was contained in any messages passing between the company and Moscow.

IN SECRET POLICE

The information concerning the defenses was gathered by Amtorg agents, Delgass said. He added the office of business manager of Amtorg was a political job and that all business managers of the company have been closely connected with Ogpu, Soviet secret police despite their denials.

Delgass' charges came after three New York brokers who handled the Soviet short selling of 7,500,000 bushels of wheat admitted they had not reported the huge short sales to the grain future supervisor, as the Fish committee contended was required by law.

Delgass charged the Amtorg officials perjured themselves when they testified before the Fish committee that Amtorg was not engaged in Communist propaganda in this country.

TELLS OF THREATS

Delgass said he has received many threats since resigning from the Amtorg. His family, he said also has been threatened. He was ordered in May or June, he said, to return to Russia by Bagdanov, but refused to go. Because of his refusal, he has been sentenced to outlawry and his property has been forfeited by the supreme court in Moscow.

Preceding Delgass, the three wheat brokers described the Soviet short sales campaign, defended it ethically and asserted it did not depress the American wheat market. All agreed hedging was a legitimate phase of trading in any commodity.

Belitzky said the so-called textile syndicate was agent for the Chlebtorg Grain Corporation, of Hamburg, which, he admitted, was controlled by the Soviet government. He explained the syndicate is capitalized at $2,000,000 and that no Americans own stock in it. Describing the selling campaign, he said:

"We received orders from Hamburg to sell 7,765,000 bushels of wheat. This was a protective measure, for the Russian wheat crop. We were informed by a London wheat authority that the world surplus of wheat was 268,000,000 bushels. We had to hedge for protection."

Wheat Hits Lowest Price in 24 Years

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Wheat sold at its lowest price in 24 years on the Chicago Board of Trade today as brokers traded in a semi-demoralized market.

September wheat sold at 75½ cents a bushel, the lowest price since 1906, when it sold for 69⅛ cents. Lows were also recorded in December, March and May wheat deliveries.

Demoralization of the Liverpool wheat market and continued liberal offerings of Russian cash grain abroad brought the decline in wheat, market experts said.

Nye Charges Conspiracy To Discredit Farm Board

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Senator Nye (Rep.), of North Dakota, charged today that boards of trade and chambers of commerce had been operating in foreign markets in a conspiracy to depress farm prices "in order to discredit the farm board."

As a result of the recent disclosure of the selling of wheat in the American market in futures exchanges by the Soviet, Nye predicted a determined effort would be made in the next session to curb the operations of the grain exchanges in future dealings.

He also predicted that as a result of the depressed prices of farm products a movement would be revised in Congress for incorporation of the equalization fee principle of farm relief as a part of the new farm marketing act.

How George Bernard Shaw Would Act on Paris 'Sulk' Toward Hearst

LONDON, Sept. 27.

George Bernard Shaw, world-famous man of letters, in addressing to himself the question of how the United States should deal with the expulsion of William Randolph Hearst from France, writes his own answer in the following letter:

How ought the U. S. A. to deal with the expulsion of William Randolph Hearst by the French republic?

Make him President.

The United States can do no less, unless it is prepared to take the outrage lying down. Probably it will face that humiliation rather than stagger Europe by electing a man who is no respecter of nations when the truth as he sees it is at stake, least of all his own nation.

America is more afraid of Hearst than France is, or Britain; that is why I take him very seriously. But is it not deplorable that no sooner have we got rid of the silly British government than threatened to cut off the Nile from Egypt, burgled the Russian co-operative offices in London, and in an ecstasy of terror tried to suppress my seventieth birthday, than we are faced by a French government that tries to outdo the Baldwin cabinet in childishness by such baby-sulk as the Hearst incident?

And now please do not ask me to discuss the human race any more. Goodby.

(Signed) G. BERNARD SHAW.
Malvern, 15 9 30.

HOOVER SNUBS TUTTLE AS WET

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(Universal.)—President Hoover today accepted the resignation of Charles H. Tuttle, U. S. attorney for New York, who yesterday was nominated G. O. P. candidate for Governor in that state on an anti-prohibition platform. The acceptance was without comment or commendation.

At the same time the President began a search of the eligible list for an ardent prohibitionist to be named as Tuttle's successor.

It has been the custom heretofore when an official leaves the government service to seek public office for the President to write such a letter as could be advantageously used in the campaign. He has followed this course in the past. In this case, however, he not only omitted writing the usual letter, but has let it be known that he will take no part in the state campaign or in New Jersey, where Dwight W. Morrow, Republican senatorial candidate, is advocating repeal.

Instead, it was stated, such activity as he takes in the campaign will be in the states where the prohibition issue has not been raised.

PARTIES SPLIT ON DRY ISSUE

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—The Democratic state convention by almost unanimous vote today adopted a platform containing a plank favoring the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, but urging legislation to prevent the return of the saloon.

The platform also deplored a "situation of unemployment unparalleled in our country," which, it said, the party in power views "with sinister indifference." It urged a conference of employers and employes to be called by the governor to seek a solution.

With a roar of its 1,600 delegates and only two voices heard in the negative, and with former President and Mrs. Calvin Coolige, Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, and other party dignitaries looking on, the Republican state convention this afternoon adopted a platform containing a plank calling for observance of all laws including the Eighteenth Amendment.

Today

much shivering and cold pains. Next day it was a fever and perspiration.

NEW YORK STOCK brokers, including one of the biggest concerns, admit that they sold 7,500,000 bushels of wheat short, "for Moscow." Others sold cotton short for the Soviet government.

Mr. Bache, important broker, says that it was the U. S. government report, not Russian wheat selling, that broke prices.

Apparently, Russia has been trying to make a little, more or less, "honest money" as our speculators make it, by selling short when they thought prices were going down.

But Russia is not supposed to know anything about business and it offends us to see the Russians making money, as we do here in our own dear country.

W. R. Hearst Praised By Church Publication

Under the heading "CONGRATULATIONS, MR. HEARST," the Northwest Catholic Progress, official organ of the dioceses of Seattle and Alaska, printed the following editorial September 19, commenting on the action of France in expelling William Randolph Hearst because he exposed the secret Anglo-French naval treaty:

William Randolph Hearst was enthusiastically welcomed home when he returned to this country after being ordered out of France for the part he played in publishing the secret Anglo-French naval treaty. Upon his arrival Mr. Hearst issued a statement declaring he considered the action of France "conspicuous recognition by a great nation of the honorable fact that I have done my full duty to my own people and to my chosen profession."

"Whatever I learn abroad which affects the peace and safety, or any essential interest, of the United States of America, I have printed and intend to print whether European governments like it or not," continued the noted publisher.

The Progress believes with Mr. Hearst that his expulsion from France under the circumstances is a distinction richly merited by a faithful journalist and a patriotic American.

Frequently it is impossible to commend Hearst's policy in interpreting life; neopaganism too often is preached in editorial features and in the handlings of news. And this is a disservice to America and to journalism. But when international issues affecting the welfare of the United States are concerned, the Hearst policy is above reproach and entirely praiseworthy.

It is unfortunately true that many American newspapers have and do succumb to wiles of certain foreign nations persistently at work upon the vanity and cupidity of publishers and upon the impotency of their fact-finding facilities. American public opinion at times has been distorted by this foreign propaganda in our press to deplorable extent and Americans have been deluded into serving other nations at the expense of their country's most vital interests. The Hearst organization constantly and valiantly opposes efforts of foreign propagandists and frequently Mr. Hearst renders distinguished service to his country by exposing their machinations.

Lulled by a false sense of security, Americans are too little concerned with protection of their interests in the international arena. And it is a real battle arena where no holds and no blows are barred, regardless of the fairy stories prated by silly pacifists, pink internationalists and buccaneering imperialists. The need for the service performed by the Hearst organization is too little understood and consequently too little appreciated.

The French incident was fortuitous, not only in conferring honor where honor is due, but also because it will stir up some measure of interest in things that should interest all patriotic Americans.

RAID ON RADIO HITS RUM RING

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(Universal)—Secret raid on a new radio station near Coney Island as it flashed coded orders to a rum fleet at sea was revealed today. Department of Justice agents declared the station was operated by the largest rum syndicate in the United States and that the blockade-running fleet dealt in liquor, drugs and human contraband—smuggled aliens.

Two men were seized, one as he sat at a key sending orders to a vessel lying off the coast. The sender, Malcolm MacMasters, 26, expert radio operator, was discovered to be free under $30,000 bond as the operator of the huge unlicensed station seized at Atlantic Highlands a year ago.

Mexican Night Life Swells Road Gang

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Night life in this city is spoiled because the authorities arrest all persons whom they find on the streets late at night and put them to work with a road construction gang. As a result a ten-mile road between Vera Cruz and Boca de Rio is being built without any labor costs.

Because of the campaign to get free labor, theaters, saloons, dance halls, and vice centers are virtually deserted after sunset.

DAVIS ASSAILED IN W. VA. RACE

LEWISBURG, W. Va., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Former Senator M. M. Neely, of Fairmont, opened his statewide campaign for the United States Senate here today with an attack on the Republican administrations of the state and nation, asserting that West Virginia farmers are "face to face with ruin" because of high taxes, and that West Virginia coal operators are "on the brink of bankruptcy because of the Pennsylvania influence in state and national politics."

Pennsylvania coal operators, the nominee asserted, are waging a relentless war against the coal industry of West Virginia, and cited a speech made at Spangler, Pa., by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican nominee for senator from Pennsylvania, which he said supported his charge.

Neely said that Secretary Davis "encouraged" James Elwood Jones, Republican nominee for senator from West Virginia, to obtain the senatorial nomination. The Democratic nominee said a story was published in a Washington society news column quoting Mrs. Davis, wife of the secretary, as taking credit for Jones' entry in the West Virginia race.

ABANDON HOPE FOR LAKE SHIP WITH 5 ABOARD

Toll in Michigan's Gale Placed at 11; Two Men Rescued from Wreckage.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Grape baskets were being washed ashore in great numbers between Holland and South Haven tonight, believed to come from the wreckage of the fruit packet North Shore. Commander W. M. Wolff, of the Coast Guard, said this was an almost certain indication the packet went down with the five men and one woman on board.

The vessel, a steel-hulled motor craft, carried Capt. E. J. Anderson, his bride of four weeks, and a crew of four.

TWO MEN RESCUED

MUSKEGON, Mich., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Harry Smith, of Newark, N. J., one of the two men rescued this morning from the wreckage of the barge Salvor which sank in a Lake Michigan storm off here yesterday, described as "a tough fight" the efforts of the two men to prevent being swept to their death in the turbulent waters. He said:

"Our great fight was to keep from freezing in that northwest gale as the giant waves rolled over us every few seconds."

Smith revealed that in addition to Clinton Lane, who was found dead aboard the barge, a fourth man, Clarence Brunett, had sought to live through the storm by clinging to the derrick. After fighting several hours with the waves, Brunett dropped into the water.

THREE SHIPS GONE

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Eleven persons were believed to be dead, two vessels were wrecked and another was missing as the result of a terrific gale which swept over the Great Lakes yesterday.

The gale swept eastward today and at Buffalo, N. Y., small craft in the harbor were sunk, trees uprooted, electric light and telephone wires were blown down and air mail service seriously impeded.

GRIFFIN RAIDS 2 HILL STORES

Hill district constables last night arrested a confectioner accused of sale and possession of liquor and were seeking a tailor occupying the adjoining storeroom on a possession charge.

Herman Bazer, of 2318 Center avenue, was arrested on a warrant issued by Alderman Martin J. Griffin, of 2040 Center avenue. Constables Louis C. Shairing, Jr., and Carl Rubenstein, reported seizing a large quantity of moonshine. They seized a quantity in the tailor shop of Joe Fox, 2316 Center avenue, and charged the latter kept the liquor in his store and passed it to Bazer when needed. Hearings have been set for Tuesday afternoon, Bazer being released on $1,500. Bazer was indicted Thursday on a "numbers" racket charge, having been arrested by the same constables about a month ago.

British Railways Dictatorship Denied

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The London and Northeastern Railway today issued a statement denying that Sir Henry Thornton, chairman of the Canadian National Railways, would be appointed "dictator" of British railways.

"The statement concerning Sir Ralph Wedgwood's alleged visit to Canada and discussion with Sir Henry Thornton is entirely without foundation," the statement said.

"Sir Ralph Wedgwood, who is the chief general manager of the London and Northeastern Railroad has not been to Canada and has not seen Sir Henry Thornton."

Man Attacks Wife, Is Killed by Son

Matthew Jemison, 18, Negro, of 171 Devilliers street, shot and killed his step-father, Samuel Kinsey, 47, last night, according to detectives, after Kinsey had shot his wife, Mrs. Emma Kinsey, 35, in a drunken frenzy. Jemison and his mother are being held by police.

The step-father, police say, went after Jemison with a knife after the youth had disarmed him of the gun. Jemison fired four shots into Kinsey, police said.

Judge Crater Clue Sought In N. Y. Drowning Records

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Officials of cities and towns in a radius of 100 miles of New York today were requested by District Attorney Crain to send him a description of all bodies taken from the waters since August 6 in an effort to clear up the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater.

Justice Crater told friends before he disappeared August 6 that he intended going for a swim in Westchester County.

Two of Justice Crater's women friends, Miss Connie Marcus, a divorcee, and Sally Lou Ritz, a show girl, have been questioned regarding their knowledge of his whereabouts, but apparently without success.

Miss Ritz was questioned at Youngstown, O., where she is staying with her parents, and the prosecutor there said he believed she knew nothing about the disappearance.

In the meantime, the search in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland continued. The register of the hotel at Moncton, N. B., where a man answering the missing justice's description stayed for a time two weeks ago, is being sent to New York for comparison of the signature. The man registered as a "Mr. McNeil."

Girl Held as Lingle Murder Witness

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—An attractive young woman who gave her name as Gladys Sterling was being held today as an important witness in the murder of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Tribune reporter.

This became known today when attorneys for the girl sought her release on a writ of habeas corpus. The girl was taken into custody last night by a detective from the office of Pat Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney.

Passenger Hurt As Cars Collide

John Schneider, 40, of 95 Bigelow street, was hurt in a collision of two automobiles at Water and Market streets last night. Both drivers were arrested.

Schneider was a passenger in a car driven by Walter J. Cypher, of 3200 Chartiers avenue. Wayne A. Caldwell of Manor, Pa., was the other driver.

2 EAST LIBERTY STORES HELD UP

Police and detectives searched East Liberty Saturday night for two Negroes who held up two stores in Frankstown avenue, obtaining $100 from one and $50 from the other.

A short time before the same pair entered the East Liberty Luggage Shoppe, 6315 Frankstown avenue, and forced the proprietors, Philip Feldman and Benjamin Clair, into a rear room. They took $50 from the cash register.

DRUNKEN HOG ON TAXI RIDE

A Green Cab driver, summoned to Beechwood boulevard, could get no response after ringing the bell at the address given. He drove away. A few minutes later, hearing a noise in his cab, he inquired, "Where to?" Another grunt and the driver, suspecting an intoxicated passenger had climbed into his auto, drove to the police station.

As Sergt. Joseph Bradle and Patrolman John A. Deasey appeared for the prisoner, they found the hog sitting in the cab. With difficulty his hogship was escorted to a cell.

Police believe the hog was stolen and while the taxi driver sought his fare, was placed in his car.

Boy, 4, Accidentally Shoots Father Dead

MARTIN, Ky., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—A 4-year-old boy shot and killed his father in a hardware store here. The father, C. D. Fraime, 32, Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad machinist, took the boy, Chloris, to the store. While Fraime talked with the store manager the boy walked behind the counter and found a loaded pistol. While playing with the weapon he pointed it at his father. The pistol was discharged.

ARREST ENDS BANK CLERK'S WEDDING TRIP

Canonsburg Man Held in $7,200 Shortage; Claim Children's Money Taken.

CANONSBURG, Sept. 27.—A jail cell tonight separated a Houston, Pa., bride from her husband of three weeks. Clarence Mohler, 28, former clerk of the Citizens Trust Company, here, who is charged with embezzling $7,200 from school children's funds in the bank.

A wedding and honeymoon trip to St. Paul on the allegedly stolen money ended in Pittsburgh Friday night when the couple returned from the mid-West and Mohler was arrested by Washington County Detective W. B. Dinsmore. In default of $10,000 bail, Mohler was committed to jail today after a hearing before Justice of the Peace T. M. Reese.

The bride, Miss Irma Holmes, 31, whom Mohler is alleged to have married under fictitious names was at her home.

CONFESSION ALLEGED

Mohler is alleged to have admitted embezzling the funds from the bank over a period of four years, according to Detective Dinsmore. He is said to have confessed the money was taken in small amounts of about $20 until September 6. That Saturday night, he decided to make one last haul before departing on his honeymoon trip the next day, Dinsmore said Mohler confessed.

Mohler took $420 deposited in the school children's accounts, he is alleged to have admitted, and returned to the bank Sunday morning for the index cards records of the 1,800 accounts in this fund. These cards were thrown from the train window between Pittsburgh and Chicago, Dinsmore said.

60 ACCOUNTS JUGGLED

The money taken during the four years is said to have been confined to between 55 and 60 of the accounts.

The couple was married at St. Paul under fictitious names, Mohler admitted, according to Detective Dinsmore. The arrest followed questioning of Mohler's family, a brother from Detroit admitting, Dinsmore said, that he knew of the alleged embezzling.

HOME BREW NOT ILLEGAL

reported them excellent in Pennsylvania and New Jersey and poor in Delaware.

PRAISES PENNSYLVANIA

This circumstance, he said, was due to the fact that the state had been without a deputy administrator for a month, but with Harold D. Wilson, former deputy administrator at Pittsburgh, now on the job, he expected rapid improvement.

He praised Pennsylvania highly for co-operation given the federal enforcement authorities by the state and local governments, particularly by the state constabulary and the Philadelphia police.

In that city, he said, some 2,000 saloons had been closed by the city police and it was estimated only 14 remained. Sufficient evidence against these could not be obtained, he explained, but the police are still at work on them.

Cincinnati Wins In Federation Series

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Siebler Tailors, representing Cincinnati in the National Baseball Federation championship, defeated Flint, Mich., 4 to 3, in the first game of the final three-game series here today.

A doubleheader will be played tomorrow to decide the championship.

Army Sends Officer To Study Talkies

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Possibilities of the use of talking pictures in the Army will be studied by Capt. Frederick W. Hoorn, of the Signal Corps, who left here today for Hollywood. He will undergo an intensive course in the making of sound motion picture production.

Soldiers Execute 4 Mexican Bandits

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Dispatches from Aguas Calientes say four bandits who had been terrorizing sections in the state of Aguas Calientes and Zacatecas for the last 20 years have been captured by soldiers and executed.

Lipton Will Return to Get Cup He Wins for Losing

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Sir Thomas Lipton will return to challenge again for the America's cup, but before that he's coming back to New York to receive the cup the American people are buying for the "world's best loser."

Sir Thomas said he would prefer to receive the cup in the United States and would spend only a few days on the other side before returning to New York City. His passage is booked for the Leviathan, sailing today.

The cup fund, suggested by Will Rogers and enthusiastically indorsed by Mayor Walker, Gov. Roosevelt and others, now totals $3,500 and 50 pounds of silver.

The silver from which the cup will be made was offered by an organization of Utah silver miners and has been accepted by the committee.

3 Police Squads Chase Animals; Get One Dog

Three patrols of East End policemen yesterday started for an animal hunt in Highland Park, the emergency car in search of a bull, the patrol wagon seeking a mad dog, and a commandeered car in hunt for a bulldog, with a common black-and-tan mongrel the reward of their efforts.

Three separate calls to Police Operator Mike Connelly started the three crews. First a bull was reported at large, then a mad dog and then a bulldog. The patrol crew won out. The dog was in Bunker Hill avenue. Snapping jaws and barks told Lieut. William Fullerton to beware. A lasso caught the animal. A garden rake held it at a distance. The Animal Rescue League was its destination where they'll determine if it's mad.

25,000 Deprived of Vote Here by Court Decision

APPEAL TAKEN IN ASSESSMENT FIGHT TOO LATE

Judge Gray Holds Names Stand for Three Years if Entered in Proper Books.

More than 255 000 citizens of Allegheny County, whom subordinate assessors neglected to assess, will lose their vote at the November election, because a court fight in their behalf was delayed too long, according to an opinion yesterday by Judge James H. Gray.

The court made important rulings relative to assessments which it is believed, will protect citizens against a similar experience in the future.

Judge Gray held that assessments of occupation tax, or poll tax, are made for a three-year period, similar to the triennial assessment on real estate, and that persons whose names are omitted from the assessment lists may be assessed after the regular assessment period.

COUNTY BOARD UPSET

This ruling upsets the interpretation of the County Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes that court decisions last year prohibit new assessments. The board's interpretation prevented the assessment of thousands of voters seeking to take part in the November election.

Judge Gray reiterates the ruling of last year, which declared null and void the additional assessment books, on which politicians had placed lists of names in bulk, for the reason that the books were not transmitted through the County Commissioners, the county controller and county treasurer, but were sent directly to the county delinquent tax collector.

Judge Gray's opinion was handed down on the petition of Eva M. Stouffer, 425 Boulevard of the Allies, First Ward, and Charlotte Ryan, 27 Wabash avenue, Twentieth Ward. They asked for a writ of mandamus on the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes to compel their assessment on the 1930 books, alleging they had been assessed in 1928, the first year of the triennial assessment period, and had been omitted in 1929 and 1930, although having the same residence.

CONTENTION UPHELD

This contention was upheld by Judge Gray in ruling that occupation assessments continue for the three-year period and that the assessors are required to restore such names omitted during one of the two subsequent years or correct assessments where residences or occupations are changed.

The court ruled, however, that the two women were assessed in September, 1928, after the county treasurer's books were closed, and their names were listed on additional books which were not transmitted through the proper county offices, but sent direct to the delinquent tax office, held in last year's decisions to be an illegal transmittal.

It is too late for the court to order assessments to permit payment of taxes to enable a voter to register and vote in November, as the assessment must be made 60 days before the election, the opinion pointed out.

Judge Gray declared:

"If the assessments of the two women were lawful and the application had been made to us earlier, we could have granted the prayer of the petition and directed the respondents (the assessment board) to place the names of petitioners and valuation of their occupations on the list for this year, but since an occupation tax cannot be assessed against petitioner at this date, less than two months before the next general election, payment of which would entitle them to register and vote, it would be futile to grant the prayer of the petition. It would be an injustice to assess them now and compel them to pay a tax, the receipt for which would be valueless as a qualification for voting. The only relief which can be granted to them and others similarly situated is to make certain they are assessed for the next triennium."

RULE ON ASSESSMENTS

As to occupation assessments being triennial, the opinion stated:

"There can be no doubt that the triennial assessment applies to occupations as well as to other property, and as fully to one kind of property as to the other.

"While the law does not expressly authorize assessments after the final assessment is made by the tax levy, neither does the law forbid such a later assessment except that the Constitution requires that it shall be made at least two months before the election, if a tax receipt based thereon is to be used as a qualification for voting at the next election.

"Therefore, if the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes and their subordinate assessors have omitted taxable inhabitants from the lists, it would seem there could be no good reason why they should not correct their own mistakes by adding the names of those omitted, providing that the requirements of the Constitution and statutes are carefully observed."

Polling Places in 10th Changed by Judge

So that many voters of the district may be saved a mile walk, Judge George V. Moore in Quarter Sessions Court has signed an order changing the polling place of the Eleventh District of the Tenth Ward from No. 36 engine house, at Stanton avenue and Hawthorn street, to the Sunnyside School, McCandless avenue and Fifty-seventh street.

POLA NEGRI . . . "I DON'T OWE HIM A PENNY FOR IT!"

COUNTY TO GIVE IDLE ROAD JOBS

Allegheny County will aid in the solution of the local unemployment situation this week by putting on several hundred laborers in the road maintenance division.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong announced yesterday that in addition to several hundred men placed and being continued at work in the road maintenance division several hundred more will be put on the payroll this week.

Edward F. Kenna, head of the county road department, conferred with Armstrong yesterday, prior to the announcement. Applications for the jobs open will be received Monday at the roads division office in Old City Hall, Smithfield street.

Armstrong explained that through the authorization of $250,000 by the commissioners for the program of improvement of unimproved roads in the six county maintenance divisions it is possible to put the additional men at work and that there is $200,000 available to keep the present maintenance force at work until after the holidays. Heretofore the maintenance force has been laid off in the fall.

Odd Fellows Plan Big Meeting Here

A public meeting of the subordinate lodges of the First District of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Rebekah Assembly of the Southern District, both of Pittsburgh, will be held October 7 in the Moose Temple, Penn avenue.

District Deputy Grand Master John McGall and his staff will be in charge of installation services. Emma Leiph will officiate for the Rebekah lodge. Following a musical program Norvan R. Daugherty, past grand master, will speak.

PAINTER SUES POLA FOR PAY

PARIS, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—"In a way, it is true to say that I am a psychological painter, because in my pictures I try to interpret the psychology of my models. It does not matter whether I am painting a beautiful woman or a lemon. I try to make my picture speak."

This from Senor Beltran Masses the famous Spanish painter.

The artist must have used a different technique, however, when he made a portrait of Pola Negri. He evidently didn't make the canvas say anything to him, and he couldn't have said anything to the canvas. If they did talk to each other, they must have discoursed in different languages, because there certainly was no understanding regarding who was to pay for the picture.

Senor Masses now has filed a suit here against the famous actress for $5,000 which he says she owes him for the portrait.

Woman Hit by Car, Driver Arrested

Returning from a nearby store, Mrs. J. G. McGranor, of 129 West Riverview avenue, Bellevue, was hit by an automobile along the Ohio River boulevard late yesterday afternoon. She was removed to the Suburban General Hospital suffering from a broken knee-cap and possible skull fracture. Patrolman S. P. McPherson arrested Clarence Wimmer, of 241 Hazelwood avenue, Emsworth, as driver of the car.

First Frost Due Tonight in Valleys

The first frost of the season, following a long period of torrid weather, may nip late vegetation and posies tonight. Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted temperatures between 38 and 45 tonight, with possibility of frost in low-lying sections.

Police Foil 'Sure-Thing' Slot Machine Slug Plot

"We were told that Pittsburgh was a town in which we could find plenty of slot gambling machines."

That was the explanation given United States secret service operatives by William Louis Griswold, 44, of 1712 Cherry street, Toledo, O., after his arrest with two other men on the South Side with 19 pounds of metal slugs made into the sizes of nickels, dimes and quarters.

The companions of Griswold gave their names and addresses as Dave Gaster, 26, 1397 Grand avenue, Toledo, and Walter Roblin, 26, 28466 Mulberry street, Toledo. Griswold, spokesman for the trio, was said to have admitted coming here for the purpose of making raids on slot machines with the spurious coins.

Upon arrival of the three here they inquired of a boy at Nineteenth and Carson streets as to where they could find machines.

Their interrogations aroused the suspicions of the boy and he informed a policeman. The policeman searched the auto which the trio had parked nearby and found a canvas bag containing the metal slugs.

The men were taken to the police station. After they were interrogated by Secret Service Operatives Fred Gruber and John Kettle, they were held for further investigation.

LAKE CARNEGIE POOL LISTED IN JOB PLANS HERE

Officials to Determine Work Aid Schedule Within Next 2 Days; Help Pittsburghers

The construction of a $150,000 swimming pool at Lake Carnegie, Highland Park, will be one of the projects on which unemployed will be given work here this fall, according to Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang.

The swimming pool ordinance will be introduced in Council tomorrow by John S. Herron, who announced that he has been assured by city engineers that it will be completed by May 30, 1931. The plans call for a sand beach, wading pool, shallow pools and deep pools for experienced swimmers and divers, and bath house. The pool will have a capacity of 5,000.

It will be impossible to determine the number of unemployed to be hired by the city until the list of projects and financial statements are completed.

The list prepared over Sunday will be discussed at a conference tomorrow, to be attended by Lang, Mayor Charles H. Kline, City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, Controller James P. Kerr and members of Council.

APPEALS TO CONTRACTORS

It will be the second conference held on Councilman Robert J. Alderdice's proposal to have the city do street and sewer work instead of giving the jobs to contractors.

Director Lang said yesterday that he has asked all contractors to use citizens of Pittsburgh, his request following a letter to the same effect sent out by Mayor Kline.

Contractors bidding for nine city jobs, including the widening of Grant street from the Boulevard of the Allies to Water street, were urged by Lang to hire Pittsburghers.

COMMUNITY PROBLEM

"I plan to look over the jobs after the work is started to see if the contractors have granted my request," he said. "I intend to use all of the moral suasion I can to get them to employ Pittsburghers."

The Mayor, in his letter, pointed out that the national unemployment problem can be solved if each community cares for its own unemployed.

Another project on the list will be the construction of the Nine Mile Run sewer, at an estimated cost of $60,000.

KIN SUES FOR BLIND WOMAN

A writ of habeas corpus to obtain custody of Rose Roney, between 85 and 90 years old and blind, was procured in Common Pleas Court Saturday by Marie R. Victory and directed to Mrs. Margaret McKinnon, of 715 Island avenue, McKees Rocks, who has custody of the aged woman.

The petitioner alleged that she is the next of kin to Miss Roney, who has no living brothers or sisters. According to the petition, Miss Roney for many years conducted a store on Island avenue, McKees Rocks, until May 6 last, when she was taken away from the store at midnight to the home of Mrs. McKinnon.

Miss Roney is blind, is in declining health, requiring hospital care, is prevented from having visits of relatives and friends at reasonable hours, and is of different religious belief than Mrs. McKinnon, according to the petition. A hearing was fixed by Judge Joseph Stadtfeld for September 30.

When apprised of the court action, Mrs. McKinnon declared she was at a loss to understand it.

Police Seek Mother Of Dead Baby Girl

North Side police are seeking the mother of a 3-months-old baby girl who died of spinal meningitis in the Presbyterian Hospital early yesterday, shortly after being left there by Mrs. Jennie Mitchell, of 805 Moravian way.

Mrs. Mitchell had gone to notify the mother of her child's death yesterday when police called at the Mitchell home. A small daughter of Mrs. Mitchell said the baby's mother was a neighbor woman who was ill, but police had been unable to find her late yesterday. The mother's name was said to be Mrs. Esther Schretfer.

MELLONS PLAN MEDICAL BLDG.

A new medical office building will be erected at Fifth avenue and Atwood street by A. W. and R. B. Mellon, it was announced yesterday.

It will face Fifth avenue and extend from the Forbes National Bank to Atwood street on a plot of ground 160x180 feet.

It will be modernistic in design and of fireproof construction.

A feature will be direct connection from its five floors to an adjacent ramp garage.

The exterior finish will be of brick and stone. No estimate of the cost of construction has been announced. M. Nirdlinger is the architect.

FALKS EMBARK ON HONEYMOON

Starting for two month's honeymoon trip through Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Falk, of Pittsburgh, sailed yesterday on the steamship Augustus, following their secret marriage in Cleveland.

Mr. Falk, 63, of the Hotel Schenley, capitalist and philanthropist, married Mrs. Salam K. Wertheimer, 62, at the home of the latter's daughter, Mrs. Albert E. Einstein, in the Ohio city. They will reside at the Schenley on their return to Pittsburgh.

Falk is a native of Pittsburgh, and has been active in the development of many industrial and charitable enterprises here. He and his brother, the late Leon Falk, Sr., were co-donors of the Falk Medical Clinic of the University of Pittsburgh.

Recently he created the Maurice and Laura Falk Foundation, a philanthropic trust fund, in memory of his late wife, Mrs. Laura Falk.

Mrs. Wertheimer was the widow of Morris Wertheimer, who died two years ago. He had been associated with the firm of A. Guggenheimer, distillers. She also made her home in Hotel Schenley.

Gas Kills Woman Ship Board Lawyer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. L. M. Archey, 34, an assistant counsel for the Shipping Board, was found dead today in her apartment beside a gas stove with an open jet.

Police expressed the opinoin she fainted as she prepared to light the stove and was asphyxiated. Her son, Basil, 3-years-old, asleep in an adjoining room, is being cared for until his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Marshall, arrive from Evansville, Ind.

Detective Arrested After Crash of Cars Injuring Woman

One woman was slightly injured when two automobiles crashed at Twenty-second and Sarah streets, South Side, last night, and a city detective, driving one of the cars, was arrested by South Side police.

The drivers, both taken into custody and posting $50 forfeits each for traffic court hearings on charge of reckless driving, were City Detective Frank Nowicky, of 2407 Holmer street, and Louis Impliccieri, 40, of 430 Williams street, Mt. Washington. Mrs. Impliccieri, 40, was taken to the South Side Hospital suffering from lacerations and minor bruises.

FEDERAL COURT ENDS ERIE TERM

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his assistants yesterday returned from Erie where they prosecuted criminal cases at the September term of the Federal District Court, sitting there.

Jail and penitentiary sentences aggregating 44 years, seven months and 12 days and fines totaling $12,310 were imposed on violators of government statutes, and paroles granted 47 defendants totaled 90 years.

The grand jury, which was in session five days, returned 229 indictments. Pleas of guilty were entered in 115 cases and 17 of 22 trials resulted in convictions.

The district attorney also instituted 13 "padlock" injunction suits against premises on which violations of the prohibition law were alleged, and also filed 13 informations.

BLAZING HOME CAVES IN; FOUR FIREMEN HURT

10-Room Natrona Heights Dwelling Destroyed; Damage Set at $25,000.

Four firemen were injured when the second floor of the home of Walter Furer, Saxonsburg road, Natrona Heights, collapsed and hurled them to the basement yesterday afternoon as fire destroyed the building.

The victims, who were taken to the Allegheny Valley Hospital, Tarentum, and their injuries: Edward Montgomery, Natrona Heights, burns of left leg and face; Morris Maclin, burns about eyes and face; William Lang and Joseph Berger, both Natrona, slight burns.

Firemen from Natrona Heights, Birdsville, Natrona, Tarentum and Brackenridge fought the flames to prevent their spread to a dairy building and barn. The fire started in a summer kitchen of the 10-room frame home. The cause was not determined. Damage was estimated at $25,000.

M'KEESPORT DEPOT BURNS

Fire threatened to destroy the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight station, McKeesport, early last night, causing damage estimated at $25,000 before being extinguished by four fire departments.

The fire was centered on the Huey street side of the block-long frame structure, starting from an undetermined origin and spreading from the platform through about one-third of the building.

A freight car of newsprint paper was destroyed on the siding. The property damage was estimated at $20,000, while loss to merchandise was set at $5,000.

Smoke blanketed the McKeesport business section, the station being one square from the main thoroughfare.

State Institution Population Gains

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 27.—Population of state institutions increased at the ratio of three to one as compared with the increase in the population of the state as a whole during the decade ending June 30 last, according to a report of Rodney H. Brandon, director of the State Department of Welfare, to Gov. L. L. Emmerson.

When Glasses Are Necessary

IN middle age nearly everyone is affected by receding vision, a condition which necessitates holding a book or paper at a distance to see the type clearly.

At this period even the strongest eyes need the aid of reading glasses to insure comfort and to avoid strain.

ROLLING ROCK HUNTER TRIALS LURE SOCIETY

Brilliant Ensembles Match Georgeous Autumn Foliage Of Loyalhanna Valley

By BERNICE SHINE

The trim fenced fields of the Loyalhanna Valley [illegible] Rolling Rock Farms where the Rolling Rock hunter trials were held yesterday [illegible] resembled a [illegible] of English landscape. The scarlet coats of the riders and the colorful tweeds of the spectators enhanced the illusion.

Orchid and lavender and red and green pennants of the Westmoreland, Sewickley, Pittsburgh, Indiana and Rolling Rock Hunts, all of which participated, waved festively from the judges' stand and bright-hued umbrellas placed around the grandstand added still more color to the fall scene.

Following the hunter trials was a dance last night in the Rolling Rock Club attended by practically all the socially prominent families of the vicinity.

MRS. SCAIFE SPECTATOR

Mrs Alan Magee Scaife in a smart yellow and brown [illegible] tweed suit with a fabric beret to match was watching her brother Richard King Mellon who rode in many of the classes. With her was Mrs Henry Vaughan.

Among the late arrivals were Miss Betty McKay, a debutante of the season, who wore a rust wool lace dress with a rust felt beret and Miss Lucile Todd who chose an interesting beige and [illegible] striped knitted dress made with a smart bolero jacket. A beret of the same fabric completed her costume.

The James Francis Burkes were there too and their daughter Mrs. Frances Burke Rodgers was riding. Mrs Burke chose a deep beige cloth coat with a leopard scarf collar and a garnet red felt hat.

YOUNGER SET THERE

Representing the younger married set were the Jack Bissells with Mrs Bissell wearing a brown felt hat and a beige sport coat. From Sewickley came the J O Burgwins with Mrs Burgwin wearing a fox-furred red cloth coat and a black hat.

Mrs J Crossan Hays in a blue-grey covert cloth tailored suit and a blue felt hat was there with her two young daughters Misses Susu and Molly Hays, her son John Crossan Hays Jr and Bret McKinney.

Near the grandstand were Mrs. E. J. McCague in a wood-brown cloth suit and brown felt hat and Mrs. George L. McCook in a black ensemble. Mrs Gordon C King was in black too and Mrs. Herbert A May in a smart red wool suit with a beaver collar and a red leather belt at the high-waist line. A brown fabric hat completed her costume.

Mrs. Mortimer Miller chose a hydrangea blue wool dress and a blue tweed coat with a hat to match and Miss Jane Allderdice wore a smart black and white tweed suit with a black and white fabric beret. Mrs. Josephine O'Neill wore green crepe with a grey tweed coat and a grey hat.

STEVENSONS RIDE

The William C Stevensons and their daughter Janet were riding, and so were Miss Betty Bovard and Miss Margaret Coulter.

Enthusiastic spectators were Miss Genevieve Bell who wore a blue tweed tailored suit and Miss Margaret McCready in a black cloth coat with a fox collar and black felt hat. Mrs Raymond Ford Moreland, in a red tweed suit, arrived with Mrs George H Love.

From Johnstown came Mrs Russell Love and Miss Janet Cook. Misses Phyllis and Louise Totten wearing cardigans in brown and blue with white skirts were there with their guest, Miss Dorothy Fagan. The junior H C Bughman's also were spectators.

In front of the grandstand were Mrs. J. Verner Scaife Jr. in a black and white tweed suit and a black felt hat, and Mrs John H Ricketson III was there watching Mr. Ricketson ride.

F. S. WILLOCK, BANKER, DIES

Frank Scott Willock, 63, Pittsburgh banker and paper manufacturer, died yesterday in his home, Academy avenue, Sewickley.

Mr Willock was the son of John S and Josephine Hays Willock. He was a graduate of Princeton, class of 1890. He married Lucy Christy in 1903.

Until a few years ago Mr Willock was a director of the Second National Bank here and was also head of the Tarentum Paper Company.

He was a member of several local clubs, among them the Allegheny Country Club and the Pittsburgh Club. He maintained a summer home in Dark Harbor, Me.

Besides his widow he leaves two daughters, Miss Virginia and Miss Ruth, a son, Roger, a brother, W W Willock of Long Island and a sister, Miss Lillian Willock, of Sewickley.

Six Adrift on Old Warship Rescued

LONDON, Sept 27—(AP)—The hull of the old British cruiser Conquest which broke adrift from a tug in the North Sea while being towed to Scotland for scrapping today was towed into the River Humber by a salvage tug which had picked her up during the night.

Six men aboard the old warship had a nervous time while she was drifting helplessly for 12 hours in a strong gale, but were in good shape upon their arrival here this forenoon.

Mine War Flares In Kentucky Field

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Sept 27—(INS)—Mine war again flared up in Webster County yesterday when a railroad bridge of the Providence Coal Mining Company was burned and a power line of the Kentucky Utilities Company was broken by a dynamite blast.

Gov. Sampson offered a $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of striking miners believed responsible for the sabbotage in the Providence mine district.

2 Murders Blamed To Labor Troubles

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(INS)—Labor troubles were blamed by police today for the murder of two men and wounding of a third.

Paul Cotreneno, a foreman of dock laborers, was shot and killed and his companion, Tony Cassano was wounded as they were on the way to attend an Italian fiesta in Brooklyn.

WAR SURGEONS CHOOSE PRYOR

The election in Washington of Capt. James Chambers Pryor, United States Medical Corps, to the presidency of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States is of interest to his friends in Pittsburgh. He is a son-in-law of Mr and Mrs William Henry Siviter of this city, and he and his wife who was Miss Frances Pierpont Siviter are frequent visitors here. Capt Pryor is senior medical officer of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He is the author of "Naval Hygiene," the medical work used in the Navy, and he has been surgeon of the United States fleet. Capt Pryor was detailed to duty at the White House during the Roosevelt administration.

Ex-Pennsylvanians' Children Die in Fire

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 27.—(INS)—Explosion of a can of kerosene was believed today to have caused a fire that resulted in the deaths of a brother and sister at a cabin in the Sandina Mountains, near here, last night.

The dead are Earl, 9, and Eileen, 7, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heminger, formerly of Rushville, Susquehanna County, Pa.

AIDE IN ERROR —WALDSCHMIDT

In defending Louis A Schwartz, assistant engineer of the Bureau of Building Inspection, Assistant City Solicitor Benjamin Steinberg violated a department rule restraining assistant solicitors from arguing cases against the city, Solicitor Charles A Waldschmidt charged yesterday.

Although Solicitor Waldschmidt said he would not question Steinberg until he had obtained a complete report from the police department, he said an investigation into the ethics concerned was under way.

Schwartz was arraigned in Oakland Police Court Friday in connection with an automobile frauding investigation, and was defended at the hearing by Steinberg.

The hearing was replete with clashes between Steinberg and Inspector James N Hoey, the latter assuming the role of prosecutor.

At one time during the hearing Hoey criticized Steinberg for defending Schwartz, and charged that the solicitor should be taking the side of the police department.

PUPILS TO JOIN ANTI-FIRE WEEK

School children of Pittsburgh are to participate in the activities of Fire Prevention Week, to be held here October 5 to 11, according to Fire Chief Richard L. Smith.

A blank report will be furnished every pupil on which a home-inspection report may be made and returned to the school, later to be submitted to fire department officials.

Chief Smith said a special inspection of business properties will be made during that week, and firemen and inspectors will ask the public to co-operate in making their premises safe against fire by clearing out all rubbish and inflammable material.

Powder Blast Kills One, Maims Three

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Sept. 27.—(INS)—One man was killed and three others maimed badly when the powder plant of the Anthracite Powder Company exploded at Lakewood near here, late this afternoon.

Calvin Gaber, of Grier City, was killed outright as the large store of explosives blew up. William Purnell, John Eurwen and Fred Eckert were injured seriously.

AUTOISTS GET FREE CAR TEST

Autoists, whose cars must pass the compulsory state inspection, will have an opportunity to test thoroughly all parts of their machines without cost, in connection with the convention of the nineteenth annual Safety Congress which opens here tomorrow.

"Safety Lane," in Sherman avenue, North Side, has been equipped with modern machinery for testing all parts of an automobile, according to the Pittsburgh Automobile Club and the Pittsburgh Automobile Association, sponsors of the tests. After cars have passed through the Safety Lane ordeal, owners may obtain almost immediate service by state inspectors if their cars pass the test, or they will be informed what change in mechanism is necessary before the cars can meet the state requirements.

Seven stops in Safety Lane comprise: Registration, test of lights, rear-view mirror and windshield wiper, test of steering wheel play, test of wheel alignment, test of brakes and presentation of test card, showing that a car has passed each test, or what must be done to make it safe for driving.

Parents, Teachers To Meet in Dormont

The opening fall meeting of the Kelton School Parent-Teacher Association, of Dormont, will be held in the school auditorium Thursday, October 2, at 2 o'clock. Mrs. O. B. Hughes, president of the Allegheny County Parent-Teacher Association, will be the speaker. She will talk on the necessity of being an active member of a parent-teacher group.

State Auto Crashes Mount to 50,709

A total of 50,709 motor vehicles were involved in accidents in Pennsylvania alone during the first eight months of 1930, according to figures by the Pittsburgh Motor Club, following a study of statistics furnished by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles. This number includes only vehicles involved in accidents which caused a personal injury or property damage in excess of $50.

VET'S MURDER OF FATHER LAID TO SHELL SHOCK

Broker's Son Believed Aged Parent Involved in Affair With His Mother's Nurse.

CHICAGO, Sept 27.—(INS)—Police today blamed the shell-shocked mind of a war aviator for a double murder plot which was halted after the veteran shot and killed his 83-year-old father, Rockwell Sayre, wealthy realty broker.

Producing a five-page "confession which he said he had written three days ago, Sydney Sayre, 37, admitted the slaying when taken in custody last night.

The confession outlined a belief held by the former aviator that a romance existed between his father and the nurse who was attending his dying mother.

After questioning Sayre closely police expressed the belief that only the timely arrival of a police squad which caught Sydney at the murder scene prevented a double tragedy.

The aged broker was murdered in his office, and the body with two bullet wounds through the heart was found on the floor.

The son had been shot down three times over the western front during the war, and until lately had been in a sanitarium suffering from shell shock.

The murder, police believe, was the result of morbid brooding by young Sayre.

Capt. Toy to Speak On German Drive

Capt C. R. Toy, U. S. A., will deliver an address on "The German Plan of Campaign in August, 1914," at tomorrow night's meeting of the officers of the 372nd Field Artillery. Other talks will be given on various phases of artillery work at the meeting which will be held in the Westinghouse Building.

The regiment, whose officer personnel is being recruited here by Capt. Toy, is rapidly nearing its quota.

Triumphs of Quay Shown In Color Gravure Section

Remember when Senator Matt Quay used to come to town, held his pow-wows at the Hotel Duquesne and told Indian stories to the political reporters?

In those days—about 30 years ago—Senator Quay was one of the biggest factors in American politics. He made no speeches but a nod of his head made or unmade Republican leaders. He was notable for his silence before Calvin Coolidge left Plymouth Notch and was famous as a fisherman when the Rapidan was an unexplored wilderness and before Herbert Hoover was born.

Turn to the Remember Page of today's Color Gravure section of the Sun-Telegraph and see the picture of Quay in his prime. At this time the junior Senator, Boies Penrose, was learning the political game and a few years later became a political figure almost equal to Quay. Penrose was noisy in comparison with his great preceptor, and had noisy followers. See the picture.

The advent of Andrew Carnegie in Pittsburgh at any time within the last 40 years was a big event. The steel master had married and settled down in New York, and Pittsburgh seldom saw him unless he came here to scatter a few millions. The picture on the Remember Page was taken at the re-dedication of Carnegie Institute in 1907.

No less interesting as reminders of old times are the other pictures covering a wide variety of subjects.

Next week on the Remember Page will be published a photograph of the Pittsburgh Brotherhood baseball team of 1890 with John Tener, Jake Beckley, Jimmy Galvin and all the old stars. It is rare, indeed. Women readers will smile over the Cissy Fitzgerald hat, gorgeous millinery of 1900.

OCTOBER GIMBEL MONTH

BEGINS WEDNESDAY

In four great cities October will be Gimbel Month, celebrating eighty-eight years of Gimbel integrity in American retailing.

We doubt that the entire span of years has seen conditions so completely perfect for the staging of a remarkably successful event. For Gimbel Month, 1930, has been planned in a "buyers' market," a market of amazingly low prices.

No one can say how long merchandise of fine quality will be procurable at such low levels—enough to say that every saving we have effected will be passed along to you in Gimbel Month.

IN OCTOBER GIMBELS WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD

No one will sell for less than Gimbels, at least, not longer than it takes us to find it out. Every item has been shopped for quality, style and value. Savings as indicated by reports of our comparison shoppers will range as high as 25%.

BRUENING PINS HOPE ON SLASH IN GERMAN DOLE

Berlin Sees Coalition of Center Fascist Groups; Hitler Attacks Dominate

BERLIN Sept 27 — Chancellor Heinrich Bruening is staking his hopes for a vote of confidence from the new Reichstag on a radical slash in the government's share of unemployment doles.

To accomplish this he plans to more than triple the workers' unemployment insurance premiums, tax government salaries and borrow the rest, it was learned tonight.

In this fashion he hopes to stave off assaults from both the Right and Left to win approval for President Paul Von Hindenburg's emergency tax measures that led to the dissolution of the last recalcitrant Reichstag.

It is understood that the Bruening cabinet today completed its deliberations and has made a final draft of the program upon which it will stand or fall when the new Reichstag with its new powerful Fascist bloc convenes.

RAISE DOLE DUES

It was learned that the cabinet decided further general tax increases to cover the 1 000 000 mark government deficit were impossible. Despite opposition that is to be expected from the Socialists, Bruening, it was learned, will proposing raising the unemployment insurance premiums from two to six and a half per cent. At the same time it is understood he will propose a 5 per cent tax on all government salaries.

In view of this reported program Socialist support for the Cabinet seems highly improbable and a Center-Fascist coalition most likely.

The latter supposition is given support by editorial comment in the entire Right press which today began to strongly advocate that Adolf Hitler and his National Socialists, Fascists, cooperate with the present Centrist-Bloc Cabinet.

HITLER TO FORE

Meanwhile repercussions of Hitler's fiery testimony at the Leipzig trial today continued to hold the forefront of public discussion.

It was pointed out as significant that Voelkische Beobachter, the official National Socialist organ, omits Hitler's phrase describing how heads "will roll on the sand" in its transcript of the Fascist chief's testimony.

Angriff, another Fascist organ, attacking the Reichbank for its gold shipments to France, on the other hand repeats:

"This is such an enormity that some heads will have to roll in this connection, too."

Angriff adds that the gold should have been used only to purchase raw materials.

The Left press continues its alleged disclosures of Hitler's plans, with the Socialist Vorwaerts reporting that the Fascists in a public meeting urged the Communists to join them in a general transportation strike beginning October 2.

The Communist press reports that Hitler is in close touch with Austrian Fascists and that a Hungarian representative has consulted with him regarding making Archduke Otto king of Hungary.

Flowers Guarded From Frost Here

Residents of low-lying districts in this section last night covered flowers and vegetation that might be affected by frost on prediction by Forecaster W S Brotzman that the sudden fall in temperature yesterday presaged temperatures of 38 to 45, with a likelihood of frost in low places.

Following unprecedented heat over a period of many weeks, yesterday's chilly breezes came as a distinct relief to sweltering thousands, particularly in congested city districts.

SAFETY MEET OPENS MONDAY

The final speaker will be Maj Harry Steere-Clark of British Columbia speaking from here.

The president's reception and dance will be the social feature at night following two sessions during the day of the general membership. A membership luncheon will be a noon feature in Hotel William Penn where the convention headquarters will be maintained.

BYRD TO SPEAK HERE

Among special features during the week will be the appearance of Rear Admiral Richard E Byrd, who will describe his South Pole flight Wednesday night at Syria Mosque.

The lecture will follow the annual banquet.

Pennsylvania Day will be observed Friday with many special programs.

Entertainment features during the week will be divided into the various safety sections, and besides luncheons and dinners will include boat rides, sightseeing tours and special programs.

More than 30 meetings will be in session daily, divided into various sections and held in Hotels Fort Pitt and William Penn.

Noted industrial leaders and safety experts will be heard before these sections.

A public feature will be a mammoth street exhibit of modern safety devices in William Penn way. Civic, state and industrial interests have combined efforts for the educational displays.

Driver Arrested In Triple Crash

Following a double auto collision at Penn and Brushton avenues last night, L. J. Adams, 40, of 127 Second avenue, East Pittsburgh, was lodged in Squirrel Hill police station. A car driven by Adams, police reported, crashed into the machine of John Campbell, 604 Fifth avenue, New Brighton, and careened into the machine of Blair Bean, 1137 Rebecca avenue, Wilkinsburg. Bean and William Eberhart, his passenger, were slightly injured. According to the police, Adams was under the influence of liquor.

Greensburg Winner Of Legion Drill

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept 27. Greensburg won first prize of $250 in the competitive drill of drum and bugle corps of Western Pennsylvania held here last night under auspices of the New Kensington post American Legion. Tarentum was second and Latrobe third. Thirty-five hundred persons were present.

Commission to Hear Local Radio Plea

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Radio Commission has set October 8 as the date for a hearing on an application filed by William S Walker, of Pittsburgh, who is seeking a new broadcasting permit. Walker would call his organization the Keystone Broadcasting Company.

'Dead' 30 Years, Man, 70, to Get $10,000 Legacy

FRANKLIN, Pa., Sept 27.—Judge William Parker in Venango Court today issued an order revoking a ruling of five years ago declaring John W Raymond, who left here 30 years ago, "legally dead."

Raymond, now 70, returned here yesterday on the verge of collapse and was taken to Franklin Hospital. He is eligible to receive a $10 000 bequest under the Sarah Lamberton will.

The money intact is in the hands of a son who helped in identifying Raymond. The man, who hadn't written in 30 years, was employed on a Montana ranch after leaving Franklin.

RAIL VETERAN PUT ON PENSION

Robert J. Lyle, of 24 Lincoln avenue, Crafton, veteran employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad in this district, is being retired on pension October 1, after 53 years' service.

Lyle began work as a messenger boy when he was 15. In all his years with the railroad he has never met with an accident of any kind. He is now a passenger trainmaster on the Panhandle Division.

George A. Hays, who was to have been retired October 1 after completing 50 years' service, died last Saturday at his home, 160 Washington avenue, Edgewood.

SHRINE TO HOLD PARADE, RALLY

Several thousand Shriners tomorrow night will parade through the streets of East Liberty and Oakland according to Illustrious Potentate Charles H Landefeld.

The parade will form at Penn and Negley avenues and headed by a squad of mounted policemen of Pittsburgh and state troopers from Greensburg will march to the Mosque, where a luncheon and smoker will be held.

Landefeld has named Benjamin R. Marshall as chief marshal and Joseph N. Mackrell as marshal of the non-uniformed nobility. Earl Gesser, captain of the Arab Patrol, will be marshal of the uniformed units.

The parade is scheduled to start at 7 o'clock from Penn and Negley avenue with the right of line towards East Liberty. The route of the parade is from Penn avenue to Center, down Center to Beatty, to Baum boulevard, to Craig street, to Bayard and thence to the Mosque.

Lutherans Get Hour On Radio Broadcast

NEW YORK, Sept 27.—(AP.)—The American Lutheran Publicity Bureau has announced that a contract has been made with the Columbia Broadcasting System for a "Lutheran hour" over a coast-to-coast chain every Thursday night. The program, sponsored by the Lutheran Laymen's League, of St. Louis, and the Walther League, of Chicago, will begin at 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) next Thursday.

REVEALS HIDEOUT

A third degree forced the location of Skidmore's hiding place. This morning Highway Patrolman Olmes Fox and Sergt. W. C. Bean and Corp. C. J. Gross of the state police started for the cabin deep in the mountains near Black Moshannon Creek.

When the officers were still a long distance from the cabin, they reported, Skidmore opened fire, bringing down two of the party. Then he beat a retreat through the dense woods. The injured were taken to Phillipsburg, Olmes to a hospital and Fox to a sanitarium.

Olmes, it is said, was raising his revolver to fire when Skidmore blazed away. The fugitive's first shot struck Olmes on the right thumb, glanced off his revolver and struck the officer in the breast. Fox, custodian of the Rattlesnake mountain beacon light, was shot in the right arm.

The district in which the fugitive is sought is one of the wildest in Pennsylvania. There are hundreds of hunters cabins in the district which would afford refuge.

Tonight all roads are guarded by officers, particularly the roads leading out of the district, one to Julian, south of Moshannon, and one leading into Snowshoe.

POLICE JOIN PURSUIT

Lieut. Frank Ferris and a squad of homicide detectives sped away in an armored car, carrying a machine gun and rifles to join the hunt for Skidmore which began, police say, as a result of a confession wrung from a third accomplice, Eugene Batdorf, 20, of Thirteenth street, McKees Rocks.

Batdorf is alleged by police to have named the other two as having participated in the holdup of the Liberty Bell service station, Boggs and Warrington avenues, Mt. Washington, September 20, in which Charles P. Hammond, attendant, was shot and killed.

FELLOW ARTILLERYMEN

According to Batdorf's alleged confession he and George Skidmore were buddies in Battery B, of the 176th Field Artillery, this summer at the annual encampment at Tobyhanna. Skidmore was considered one of the crack shots of the regiment, and had won two medals for marksmanship.

Skidmore and his accomplices are believed to have stolen 600 rounds of cartridges from the range at Blawnox prior to the Mt. Washington holdup, which netted them less than $200.

Chiago-N. Y. Train Service Increased

The Pennsylvania Railroad announced that, beginning today, it would add another 20-hour train between Chicago and New York. One year ago the Broadway Limited was the only train running in this time between the eastern and mid-western metropolis. The New Yorker starts its maiden run in Chicago at 10 a. m. today, and reaches Pittsburgh at 9.20 p. m. and completes the trip to New York at 7 a. m. tomorrow. This is the fifth 20-hour train running daily on the Pennsylvania between these points.

Bible Study Group Closes Convention

JEANNETTE, Pa., Sept. 27.—The thirty-eighth annual convention of the Westmoreland County Sabbath School Association closed here last night.

Officers elected were: President, John G. Sisley, Greensburg; vice presidents and administration superintendents, the Rev. W. A. Roulston, Vandergrift; Dr. J. C. Mason, Monessen; Rev. J. L. Updegraph, Mt. Pleasant; the Rev. H. J. Behrens, Latrobe; Prof. Charles F. Maxwell, Greensburg; the Rev. W. A. Zundel, Derry; general secretary, Betty Turner, Greensburg; treasurer, J. Whitesel, Greensburg. Monessen was chosen for the 1931 convention.

Politician Kills Nephew Who Quit Military School

CHICKASHA, Okla., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Ed F. Johns, former state senator and liquidating agent for a number of state banks that failed, shot and killed his nephew, Jack Comer, 19, and himself at the family home here today.

He apparently was angered at the youth for failing to remain at a Mississippi military academy.

Comer returned early this morning from the Gulf Coast Military Academy at Gulfport, Miss., after his uncle had sent him money for the trip. The youth was a son of Mrs. Johns' sister.

Johns, who was state automobile tag agent for Grady County and conducted an insurance business, went to his office early and returned while Mrs. Johns was still at the breakfast table. Speaking pleasantly to her he went upstairs. Shots were heard soon afterward.

Comer, still in bed, was shot three times near the heart. Johns was found on the floor at the foot of the bed, one bullet through his heart.

G. O. P. BLAMED FOR SCHEME TO DEFEAT NORRIS

Nye Seeking Interests Aiding Senator's Namesake; Quiz Extended to West Va

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Voicing suspicion that the Republican party "had a hand" in the attempt to run a second George W. Norris against Senator George W. Norris in the recent Nebraska Republican senatorial primary, Chairman Nye of the Senate campaign funds committee said today he would seek to trace money spent in that campaign.

Senator Nye said he was interested principally in the source of a $500 Liberty Bond given to the Norris of Broken Bow at the time he filed against Senator Norris. He also said he wanted to find the source of $7 000 deposited in the bank account of Victor Seymour of Lincoln, who has been accused of backing the entry of the second Norris.

PERJURY CHARGES

Returning to the Capital from the Nebraska inquiry, Senator Nye said he was confident United States Attorney Sandall at Omaha intended to file perjury charges against Seymour and the George W. Norris of Broken Bow.

The Broken Bow Norris was ruled out of the primary. Senator Norris was opposed in the Nebraska primary by a "Regular Republican" candidate. Norris won.

Seymour recently was named vice chairman of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee in the West and yesterday he submitted his resignation "for the good of the party."

INVADE WEST VIRGINIA

While committee investigators have been sent into West Virginia to inquire into complaints that excessive expenditures were being made in the Republican senatorial campaign, Nye will go next week into Massachusetts to determine if an inquiry is necessary there.

Nye said charges have been made of the use of "outside money" in the successful campaign of Josiah W. Bailey for the Democratic senatorial nomination in North Carolina. He added:

"Our men in the field have substantiated the fact that there is room in North Carolina for a wide inquiry."

OFFICER TAKEN IN GANG DEATH

LEECHBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—Armstrong County authorities await the arrival of police officers sent to Gary, Ind., to return Constable William Raper, in hope that the mystery surrounding the apparent gang murder of Joseph Conto, soft drink manufacturer, may be cleared.

Raper was arrested in the Indiana city yesterday. He and his wife and three-year-old child have been away from Leechburg since the discovery that Conto was missing. The latter's body was found in a wooded place near here yesterday with the head riddled with shotgun pellets.

Word from Gary today quotes Raper as saying he knew nothing of the murder. He said he was being "framed," had nothing to fear, and would not fight extradition.

Conto's wife, from whom he was estranged, was at the home when Conto's body was taken there. She showed no emotion over her mate's death, neighbors said.

Raper is quoted as saying he last saw Conto when he took him to a street corner here where, the constable said, "two friends were looking for Conto."

Weather Outlook For This Week

Weather outlook for the week beginning tomorrow:

Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Generally fair except a period of showers the middle of the week or slightly thereafter. Temperature about normal Monday, then rising temperature, becoming considerably warmer the middle of the week, cooler Friday and Saturday.

North and Middle Atlantic States—Generally fair except showers Thursday or Friday. Temperature about normal Monday and Tuesday, followed by considerable warmer Wednesday and Thursday, and cooler at the end of the week.

Region of the Great Lakes—Fair weather beginning of the week; precipitation period by the middle or close; cool, followed by rising temperature by the middle of the week and probably cooler again by close.

SCULLY HEADS LIBERAL PARTY IN PITTSBURGH

President of County Bar To Represent Hemphill in Drive of Anti-Dry Forces.

Arthur M. Scully, president of the Allegheny County Bar Association, has been appointed local chairman of the anti-dry Liberal party supporting John Hemphill, Democratic nominee for Governor, according to announcement from William Penn Hotel headquarters of Charles Dorrance, state chairman of the Liberal party.

Scully accepted the appointment in a statement lauding Hemphill's overseas record in the World War. Hemphill was a captain in the 47th Infantry, 4th Division and took part in every major engagement of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, according to Scully.

EXPLAINS ACCEPTANCE

Defining his reasons for accepting the chairmanship, Scully said:

"The platform of the Liberal party calls for repeal of the Snyder-Armstrong Act, the Volstead Act and the Eighteenth Amendment. Together with thousands of thinking men, regardless of party, I am convinced that national prohibition cannot be enforced and that the conditions bred by the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act are rapidly undermining the very foundations of our government and are breeding a mass of corruption and crime without precedent."

It is understood that headquarters for the Liberal party have been tentatively selected and that Scully will announce, probably tomorrow, their location and the personnel of the various campaign committees.

G. O. P. DELAYED

Due to the slight illness of William H. Ziefel, secretary of the Allegheny County committee, headquarters for the Republican ticket will not be opened for a few days, according to Joseph G. Armstrong, Republican county chairman.

Campaign headquarters for the Democratic nominees have been established in the Magee building, 334 Fourth avenue, under the supervision of County Chairman David L. Lawrence.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican nominee for United States Senator, visited Pittsburgh yesterday en route to a luncheon in Vandergrift under auspices of the Kiskiminetas and Conemaugh Rivers Improvement Association.

Davis was due to deliver a nonpolitical address today at the celebration of the anniversary of the Morgantown Fire Company, Berks County.

Delaware County Leaders for Pinchot

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Republican forces of Delaware County today appeared to be cemented for Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, following a reception tendered him at Media.

The meeting held in the armory of the 111th Field Artillery, was conducted by the Delaware County Republican Committee.

State Senator John J. McClure, county leader, who supported Francis Shunk Brown for the governorship nomination in the primary last May, assured Pinchot that the county organization is behind him with the rest of the Republican state ticket.

DENBY BOLTS HEMPHILL

Charles Denby, Jr., a former assistant United States attorney, who was city campaign manager for the Bohlen-Phillips-Dorrance primary ticket, announced himself in favor of Pinchot at a meeting of independent Republican women in the Women's Club of Germantown. The gubernatorial nominee was present and acknowledged Mr. Denby's declaration.

Commenting on Denby's announcement in favor of Pinchot, B. Dawson Coleman, acting chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, gave out the following statement:

"The press dispatches of yesterday evening from Philadelphia and Harrisburg disclose that the Liberal's Black Friday had deprived the party of two volunteers—William Adams, of the Senate Hotel, in Harrisburg, and Charles Denby, of Philadelphia.

VOLUNTEERED SERVICES

"Early in September, Mr. Denby offered us his services as a speaker in our state campaign for Mr. Hemphill, but, according to his published statement, after a visit to the summer residence, at Grey Towers, he has changed his mind.

"Evidently the visit to Mr. Pinchot was satisfactory and he has decided to show his regularity by supporting Mr. Pinchot. Exactly what this regularity is regular to we are not informed. Certainly not to the Republican party or to Pennsylvania.

"Nationally, such support must be classed as regular to the alliance of Mr. Pinchot with Senator Norris, to whose recent campaign Mrs. Pinchot contributed $1,000, and with Senator Brookhart, who classes Mr. Pinchot as the only Republican in the East who has the confidence of the insurgent element in the Republican party."

Assurance of his support to anything beneficial to the city in which the commonwealth can properly render aid, was given Philadelphians by Pinchot in a radio talk over WCAU.

Pinchot also advocated extension of the South Broad street subway into the thickly populated section of South Philadelphia, William S. Vare's stronghold.

DECLARING FOR ANTI-DRY

John M. Hemphill Col. Samuel Harden Church

CHURCH FOR HIM—Col. Church, president of Carnegie Institute and long a regular Republican, who has declared for Mr. Hemphill, candidate for governor on a Democratic and Liberal anti-dry ticket. Mr. Hemphill's from Chester, Pa.

S.H. CHURCH OUT FOR HEMPHILL

Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, who met and conferred here with John M. Hemphill, Democrat and Liberal candidate for governor, at an executive meeting of the Crusaders, militant Liberal body, today announced he would support Hemphill.

Mr. Church said:

"I am for Hemphill because he represents a forward movement of the American people."

Committees to conduct the membership campaign and the political activities of the Crusaders were announced yesterday by Attorney Simon T. Patterson, executive commander.

Finance committee—Attorney Charles A. Fagan, Jr., chairman; R. V. Bingay, Col. Henry W. Coulter, Thomas Eddy, F. Forchheimer, George A. Kelly, III, Ewing La Porte, Herbert A. May, George H. Singer, Jr., H. H. Robertson, A. L. Robinson, Harry E. Sheldon.

Publicity committee—E. D. Mason, chairman; Jesse Kaufmann, Don Rose, J. E. Bissell, Grafton Duvall.

The local chapter's campaign is being conducted as part of a one-week campaign starting October 15 in which the national organization of Crusaders expects to raise $10,000,000 to assure having 10,000,000 members by 1932.

LEAGUE'S OPIUM BLOC IN FEAR OF CRUSADE BY U.S.

Revival of America's Attempt To Stamp Out Dope Evil Seen Near by Europe

(For ten years the League of Nations has been dealing with the dope problem without any material beneficial results. Certain nations of Europe interested in the vast profits obtainable through the sale of narcotic drugs have blocked every effort for concerted action at Geneva.

The Hearst newspapers now propose a Pan-American conference on the subject. Such a move would enable the United States acting collectively with the Pan-American countries to force the League's proposed narcotic conference and dictate the terms of a convention to limit manufacture. The opium bloc would be unhorsed.)

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—America long ago realized that the opium problem must be solved through concerted international action.

The solution is simple, save for one factor—the greed of nations and individuals for the profits they derive from the hideous business. They put gold above humanity. They are willing to kill thousands of victims of dope rather than forego the easy profits.

The problem now is to arrive at a solution which would force the "dope murderers" to give up their nefarious trade, to prevent their trading by making it impossible for them to obtain dope, by limiting manufacture of drugs.

BLOC IGNORES WAILS

Several avenues are open. Foremost is devising a method to bring pressure on the League's opium bloc. That bloc including the dominant nations of the League has ridden rough shod over the victim nations ignoring their wails.

Spain, Italy, Poland, Venezuela—to mention only a few—have raised a voice in protest each time the opium juggernaut has wept over them.

But, out on the Western horizon there looms a giant figure, the mere mention of whom terrifies the opium bloc. It is the shadow of the United States and Pan-America.

It was America which initiated the first international effort to suppress the opium traffic in 1909. In 1912, still vigorously fighting for humanity, the United States brought about the Hague opium conference. From it resulted a convention by which nations agreed to put an end to the illicit business.

PROMISES NOT KEPT

That the promises were not kept is a painful duty to record. Representative Porter's unsuccessful efforts to work through the League are well known.

Since the withdrawal of the Porter delegation from the League conference in 1925, the United States has been inactive in the international movement to curb the evil. The time has not been altogether wasted, however, for the United States, during that period, has enacted domestic laws to put its own house in order. No nation can boast of more rigid internal control.

Yet the dope waves surge over the American shores, and the number of addicts increases. It is estimated that, in addition to the human havoc, dope levies a burden of between $3,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 annually on the American nation.

U. S. AROUSED

There are signs now that America is rousing once more to lead the world fight. The nations of the Americas are disgusted with the constant sidestepping by the League. The indications are highly disturbing to the members of the opium bloc. They realize that with the new world at the forefront and riding hard in the saddle, their days are numbered.

What they most fear is a Pan-American opium conference.

Ex-Pittsburgh Man Held as Bigamist

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—John D. DeLevan, 45, mechanical engineer, charged by Princeton, Ky., authorities with bigamy and robbery of a woman they said he married there, was arrested here today and was taken in custody by Dow Morse, Princeton officer.

Morse said DeLevan, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., deserted a wife and two children at Monaca, Pa., married Mrs. Mary Shackleford, of Princeton, and spent $1,500 of her money. Morse said DeLevan deserted Mrs. Shackleford in Detroit.

Drought Closes Schools, Water Supply Fails

BRUNSWICK, Md., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Students of the high school here faced a protracted vacation today with the town's water supply insufficient to supply them with drinking water because of drought.

They were dismissed yesterday by school officials who said it may be necessary to close two public schools next week.

The reservoir of this town of approximately 5,000, holding 3,000,000 and a reserve tank of 100,000 gallons, were empty and the sole source of supply was a single well with a maximum output of 22,000 gallons.

Alliance Man Killed Self, Coroner Rules

ALLIANCE, O., Sept. 27.—C. Clyde Smith, 28, secretary of the Alliance Planning Commission and an executive of the Ohio Public Service Company, died by suicide, Stark County Coroner T. C. McQuate ruled today—"as a result of a rifle shot fired by himself."

Smith's body, with a bullet wound in breast, was found in basement of his home Monday evening by Robert Purcell, a close friend. The motive was not indicated.

DOCTORS NAME PITTSBURGHER

HARRISBURG, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Dr. John D. Kistler of Pittsburgh was nominated for president of the state Homeopathic Medical Society. Nomination is equivalent to election.

Other nominations were: First vice president, Dr. Wm. G. Shenesley, Philadelphia; second vice president, Dr. Thomas D. Mills, Harrisburg; secretary, Dr. Earl B. Craig, Philadelphia; treasurer, Dr. Anna Johnston, Pittsburgh; necrologist, Dr. George A. Hopp, Philadelphia; censors, Dr. H. M. Read, York, and Dr. Carl V. Vischer, Philadelphia; trustees, Dr. J. Lowell Stewart, Pittsburgh; Dr. Margaret Hassler, Reading; Dr. H. I. Klopp, Allentown, and Dr. E. Roland Snader, Philadelphia.

In competition to encourage research among younger men in the profession, Dr. John D. Weiss, Philadelphia, was selected the winner for his essay on a case report.

Controllers Elect Fayette Man Head

The three-day convention of the County Controllers' Association ended with a final business session yesterday afternoon. These officers were elected:

President, Alec R. Duncan, Fayette County; vice presidents, Elwood T. Bauman, Northampton County; Garfield McDowell, Westmoreland County; Samuel Rothermel, Berks County; William G. Watkins, Lackawanna County; A. G. Woodward, Clearfield County; W. R. Adamson, Schuylkill County; secretary, Henry L. Cannon, Cambria County, and treasurer, William H. Menges, York County.

Three Are Arrested For Embezzlement

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Accused of embezzling at least $40,000 by fraudulent collection of delinquent city taxes, Hugh Ritchie, 47, employe of the district attorney's office, and Henry Ulmer, 32, and Gregory Fitzgerald, 25, clerks in the city treasurer's office, were arrested last night and held in default of $25,000 bail each.

Investigators expected other arrests, and said the fraudulent operations, extending over a period of three years, might be shown to involve as much as $150,000.

DARROW COMING FOR DEBATE ON RELIGION HERE

Noted Churchmen to Defend Doctrines Against Views Of Chicago Agnostic

Protestantism, Catholicism, Judaism and agnosticism will be discussed by outstanding supporters of religion and no religion at a forum to be held in Carnegie Music Hall, Oakland, October 7.

Clarence Darrow, noted Chicago lawyer, who declares he is an unbeliever in matters spiritual, will speak for the agnostics. Quin O'Brien, also a Chicago attorney and active Catholic layman, will represent the Catholics; Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, of Rodef Shalom Synagogue, will defend Judaism, and the Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day, pastor of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, is to discuss the more modern phase of religious observance.

Darrow has been outspoken in denunciation of many civic, social and economic practices in vogue in the nation. He advocates the abolition of all tariffs, repeal of the prohibition laws, reduction of hours of labor and the establishment of co-operative systems of production and distribution.

Darrow has defended some of the most notorious criminals in the country, among them Loeb and Leopold, Chicago boy killers.

Others on the speaker list are men high in church ranks, who are certain to defend their religious beliefs as vigorously as Darrow assails all church doctrines.

Ministers Indorse Blue Law Edict

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., September 27.—An appeal to the citizenry of Martinsburg to back the stand of Mayor C. H. Dailey in his warning that he will enforce the law against the projected Sunday movie program inauguration, set for tomorrow, was issued today by the Ministerial Association here.

Mayor Dailey yesterday publicly announced he considered the Sunday movie plans a violation of the city ordinance banning laboring on the Sabbath Day at gainful occupations—except where such labor was necessary—and would enforce the statute that provides a fine and imprisonment.

Safeway Air Line Faces Consolidation

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 27.—The Daily Oklahoman says absorption of the Southwest Air Fast Express by American Airways, Inc., and the removel of Erle Halliburton, Safeway president, from airline operations in the Southwest is expected, and formal announcement of the deal may be made within the next week.

The Safeway lines recently were taken over by Aviation Corporation, of New York, which also is the holding company for American Airways, which operates in the Southwest under the names of Universal Airlines and Southern Air Transport.

Co-Ed Dies, 1 Hurt In Hike on Trestle

MUIR, Mich., Sept. 27.—(INS.)—A hike by two college co-eds to save railroad fares today had cost the life of one of them and may result fatally for the second girl.

The dead student is Miss Helen Page, 25, of Elkhart, Ind., and her companion, who is near death in a Grand Rapids hospital, is Edna May Doyle, 23, of Mishawaka, Ind. The girls were trapped on a railroad trestle by a train and run down.

Drilling in Africa, Sinclair Reveals

PARIS, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Harry Sinclair, American oil man, arriving here told interviewers that his engineers had been drilling for eight years on a 40,000,000-acre lease in Portuguese West Africa. He would not say whether they had found any oil, but said seepings in the sand bordering the area had been burning for years.

England-Australia Flier Forced Down

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Evening papers here reported that James Matthews, young British flier attempting a solo flight from England to Australia, made a forced landing at Banmee, near Bangkok. He was unhurt, according to the reports.

PITTSBURGHER IN COLUMBUS STATUE TEST

Frank Vittor in Competition For Syracuse Contract; Keeps His Design Secret

Seeking a new ideal for a statue of Christopher Columbus in a bronze that will emphasize his Italian ancestry and the familiar traditions of the explorer, citizens of Syracuse, N. Y., have invited American sculptors of Italian descent to design such a monument.

In Pittsburgh Frank Vittor has entered the competition and is at work on a model which is declared to be one of the most unusual statues of Columbus ever created.

The monument to be erected by the Syracusans, it is said, is intended to refute recent efforts to cast doubt upon the Italian birth of Columbus. It is the chief object to preserve in sculptured art the Columbus as he has been known to many generations of American schoolboys—a native of Genoa, a hard worker, a deep student, an intrepid navigator, a man of sublime and patient character.

The design is to be selected by the Syracuse committee on Columbus Day, next month, and the cornerstone of the pedestal will be laid on July 4 next. The unveiling is announced to take place as a national celebration on October 12, 1931.

Because the design is competitive Vittor is working with the greatest secrecy and no person has been admitted to his studio where he is carrying forward his work. Of his model, Vittor said:

"Designing this statue gives a great deal of liberty for originality, but there are many factors of true historic importance that must be incorporated in the work.

"The passerby must instantly recognize the statue as that of Columbus. I am creating a Columbus, the Italian, a citizen of Genoa, the discoverer of America, a sailor, an adventurer, a determined idealist.

"Columbus was vain, a dominant forceful character, with a vision that is equaled once in a century."

Candidate Churns, Rival Splits Wood For Woman's Vote

FRANKLIN, N. C., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Bert Slagle is Democratic candidate for sheriff in this country.

Sam Franks is Republican candidate for the same office.

Slagle, out on the hustings, noted a woman chopping wood. He offered his help. An hour he chopped wood, while the perspiration poured from his brow.

At last the wood was cut and Slagle seated himself on the front porch to rest. The question of his candidacy came up. The lady said:

"I hardly know who to vote for. Both you and Mr. Franks have been so nice to us.

BLAST TO SHOW MINE HAZARDS

A mine explosion, to demonstrate the hazards of firing dynamite and black blasting powder into coal dust, will be staged Wednesday at the Bruceton experimental mine by the Pittsburgh section of the United States Bureau of Mines.

The demonstration will constitute the major contribution of the bureau to the program of the National Safety Council, which meets here all next week. The explosion will show visitors exactly what happens in the case of a mine catastrophe.

The bureau's experts will strew the mine entry for 500 feet with a soft-coal dust. A coal dust cloud will then be raised in the interior, and simultaneously an electric arc of 250 volts will be produced.

Brain's Rapid Development Blamed for Many Illnesses

HARRISBURG, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—A changing shape of the human head to provide greater space for the rapidly-developing brain is responsible for many of our modern ailments, two Philadelphia doctors said today at the closing session of the State Homeopathic Medical Society convention here.

Dr. Charles B. Hollis, associate professor of laryngology at Hahnemann College, said that the increasing size of the brain case is resulting in a shrinking jaw and the bulging of the head on the top side. As a result of this growth, which is so rapid that nature has not been able to adjust all parts of the head to the expansion of the upper skull, the septum or dividing bone in the nose, is twisted.

This twisted septum he blamed for chronic catarrhs and similar ailments.

The twisted or bent septum, he said, throws out of gear the whole mechanism of the nose which performs the function of heating or cooling air, drying or moistening it, filtering out and destroying bacteria and draining and ventilating the ears and eyes.

Dr. George J. Alexander, also of Philadelphia, declared the twisted septum was responsible for not only serious afflictions in the head, affecting eyes and sinuses, but also results in the trapped poisons being spread to other parts of the body, including the heart.

Among ailments attributed to this cause he listed dizziness, soreness, weakness, lowered resistance to heat and cold, earache, eyeache and headache.

He said that a correction of this defect in childhood gave the child a better chance for healthy adulthood.

Pianos To Loan FREE

Frankly, we have too many pianos now in stock. Of course, we would like to sell them. Some new, some used instruments. Every piano in the sale will be sacrificed at a price almost unbelieveable. The slashing reductions on Grands, Players and Uprights should cause many to be sold immediately. All pianos not sold outright will be placed in the homes of families interested in owning a piano in the immediate future, particularly homes where there are children. You must call at the store to file your request.

Positively No Charge Of Any Kind

We, of course, reserve the right to select the homes in which the pianos are to be placed and they may be used indefinitely until we need them.

PUBLIC WARNED TO BE ON GUARD FOR PARALYSIS

Alarming Increase in Infantile Malady Causes Public Health Chiefs Anxiety

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—An alarming increase in the prevalence of infantile paralysis throughout the country caused the Public Health Service to issue a warning to the public and to physicians today to be particularly watchful.

Judging from reports over the last few months, it was estimated that more than 4,000 cases exist.

During the week ending September 20 there were 513 new cases, while during the week of September 13 there were 490 new cases.

400 CASES WEEKLY

Officials said that over a period of several months an average of 400 new cases had been reported weekly.

Infantile paralysis is more prevalent than at any time since the epidemic of 1927. The last far-reaching epidemic occurred in 1916, when a large number of National Guard troops were on the Mexican border. In 1927, a maximum of 6,000 cases were reported.

Reports to the Public Health Service indicated that the epidemic originated on the Western coast and has gradually spread eastward.

A similar course was taken by the influenza epidemic of the winter of 1928-29, although that wave of disease developed somewhat later in the year, reaching a climax during the late winter.

CRIPPLES VICTIMS

Public health physicians said that the normal number of cases per 100,000 population is 10 per year. The present epidemic is not in a particularly fatal form, although the disease frequently leaves the victim crippled, sometimes permanently disabled.

Although medical scientists have been studying the disease with greater care since the 1927 epidemic, officials said little progress has been made in its treatment.

Serum methods have been tried but are not universally favored by the medical profession.

The public health service suggested that parents be extremely vigilant in keeping children away from victims of the disease and from strangers.

The first symptom is the ordinary "bad cold." And it was suggested that physicians should be visited at the earliest indication of the disease.

MIDWEST 'GAS' CUT 2 CENTS

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—A 2-cent cut in the service station and tank wagon price of gasoline and a similar reduction for kerosene will be made by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana Monday.

Edward G. Seubert, president, said the cut was forced by "unsound conditions in the oil industry."

The reductions will be effective throughout the Indiana corporation's territory except where local adjustments to meet competition have already been made. In Chicago the retail price will be 17 cents for standard grade gasoline, including 3 cents state tax; the tank wagon price 16. Seubert said:

"For a long time various individuals and organizations have sought by cut prices to seize a temporary advantage. Their profits have merely represented the losses of the distressed refiners."

Indians Attack Polls; One Slain

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—One person was killed and 46 injured in a riot at Moandabad, in the united provinces of India, according to dispatches to London papers today, when rioters attempted to intimidate voters.

Police, protecting the voters, fired upon the disturbers and a battle followed. Several of the police were injured. Many arrests were reported.

Scientists Return From Greenland

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The British schooner Effie M. Morrisey, in command of Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, and with a party of scientists aboard, returned today from a cruise to Greenland.

Wampum Girl Killed When Auto Backs Up

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Sept. 27.—Florence Bennett, 3, of Wampum, was killed when struck by a car driven by C. F. Morrow, of Wampum, today. The child was playing in the street, when Morrow backed his car, running over her head. Mrs. Joseph Summers tried to throw the child out of the car's path, but was knocked down and bruised by the machine. Mrs. Alex Bennett, mother of the dead girl, hysterical over the tragedy, tried to throw herself in the path of another car, but was prevented, police say.

MOTOR PARADE TO OPEN ROADS

More than 7,000 motorists of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, will make up the caravan, October 17, that will officially open the Lincoln and William Penn highways west of Pittsburgh. The caravan will be under the supervision of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, Fred Schatz, chairman of the chamber's motorcade committee announced.

Following independent celebrations in Chester, W. Va., and Steubenville, O., the motorcades from three states will converge at Imperial Junction, 20 miles west of Pittsburgh, where ceremonies will be held to dedicate the two highways.

Ben Marshall, assistant superintendent of police, has been selected by the chamber as grand marshal. State highway police from Pennsylvania and West Virginia, in company with local police, will escort the caravan into Pittsburgh. A banquet in the William Penn Hotel will be held after the parade.

Hamilton Returns From Hoover Visit

C. C. Hamilton, real estate man, of 5407 Coral street, has returned from Washington, where he was received by President Hoover. Hamilton told the President of business conditions in the Pittsburgh vicinity and discussed the President's commission on home buying. During the presidential campaign, Hamilton was chairman of the Hoover-Curtis committee in Allegheny County.

Coraopolis Police Seeking Bombers

Coraopolis police are investigating the bombing of the barber shop and home of Vito Stango, Fourth avenue, which last night shattered windows in the vicinity. Stango denied having received threat letters, and police are of the opinion that the bomb was placed in the wrong house.

POSTOFFICE BORINGS LET

Favorable indications that the authorities in Washington have still in mind the proposed new postoffice and federal building in Pittsburgh, was a contract award for core borings of the foundation at Seventh avenue and New Grant street.

The Pittsburgh Drilling Company was given the contract from the supervising architect, Treasury Department. The work will be started immediately as it must be completed within 45 days. The tests will determine the necessary depth of the foundation.

EVERY LUXURY TO BE GIVEN TRIP WINNERS

Gloria Swanson's Guests To Go on Finest Liners To Paris and Bermuda

All aboard! All aboard! The gangplank is hauled in, the big steamship swings into the river, turns her nose into the Atlantic and the voyage is on. One of these big liners sails for Havre, France, with passengers Paris bound. The other is off for tropical Bermuda.

The trip to Paris which Gloria Swanson offers to the girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity will be surrounded with all the luxury that money can buy, including the finest accommodations on the French liner "Paris," sumptuous care in one of the leading hotels of Paris, six days in this charming and famous city, every minute of the day and until late at night occupied with sight seeing. In fact, this is going to be just one of those trips never to be forgotten.

BERMUDA ALLURING

In a way Bermuda is as equally alluring in December. With a two-day ocean voyage each way, semi-tropical weather on the islands, ocean bathing, a week of sightseeing among the historic spots and quaint English shops and drives through the vistas of flaming flowers, the five girls taking these trips will have something long to be remembered. These five girls will be given transportation on one of the 21,000-ton steamships of the Munson Line, will be quartered at one of the finest hotels of Bermuda—either the Inverurie, Frascati or Belmont Manor—and they will all have extra money to spend.

The Paris tour, by the way, is being awarded by Gloria Swanson on account of her new picture, "What a Widow," now on view at Loew's Penn Theater. Paris itself and the palatial French liner of the same name furnish the atmosphere for all the action in the picture.

CLIP COUPON

Girls who would like to avail themselves of these opportunities—Paris or Bermuda—may do so by clipping the nomination blank printed in today's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Carefully read the rules in the back and if you are eligible, fill it in and mail it today.

Paris bound! Bermuda bound! Let's go!

Greenville Woman To Head W. C. T. U.

DR. HEINROTH OPENS SEASON

Dr. Charles Heinroth will present the first free organ recital of the season this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Carnegie Music Hall. Today's recital marks the beginning of his twenty-fourth year as organist and director of music at Carnegie Institute and the thirty-sixth season of free organ recitals.

His program:

Woman Out to Save 57 Doomed Horses

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Fifty-seven aged horses of the New York street cleaning department are scheduled to die today, but they won't if a woman is a good talker. Mrs. Stella Ehrlich, president of the Horse Aid Society, said she had collected $570 and planned to induce city officials to release the horses at $10 a head. She said if spared the animals would be taken to the farm of the society, where horses too old to work are cared for.

SCIO, O., Sept. 27.—Earl Gartrell, 27, Leesville, was killed when a truck he was driving collided with a gravel truck at the brow of a hill a half mile west of Scio.

Nothing Wrong With Girls, 15, Out 'Til 2 A. M., Says Judge

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Fifteen-year-old girls can stay out nights until 2 o'clock in the morning, and it is all right, Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch has decided.

James F. Sequin had asked the court to take his 15-year-old daughter, Margaret, from the custody of her mother, from whom Sequin was divorced two years ago. He cited the fact that Margaret had been out until 2 a. m. the night before Labor Day, and that on another occasion she and two girl friends and a sailor didn't get home until 1:30 a. m.

He petitioned the court yesterday to place the girl in a school where she would be strictly supervised. Said the judge:

"I won't do it. Girls of today do things like that, and they are good girls, too. My own nieces stay out as late as that. And as for the night before Labor Day, I'd have stayed out that late myself if it hadn't rained."

Germans Continue Denials of Sabotage

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The German claims representative, Karl von Levinski, today made a further effort to prove the German government in nowise connected with the Kingsland (N. J.) munitions explosion, one of the disasters which spurred United States entry into the World War.

Von Levinski presented testimony before the mixed commission nearing American claims for sabotage damage in an effort to absolve the German workman Worniak in this connection. He testified that the confession of Hermann, another German secret agent, regarding Worniak was full of contradictions.

Senator Allen Soon To Leave Hospital

BALTIMORE, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Senator Henry J. Allen, of Kansas, who underwent a major operation at Johns Hopkins Hospital recently, was said today to be making "a record recovery."

He may be able to leave for his home next week, it was stated.

PITTSBURGHERS FOUND HONEST

Pittsburgh's retail stores' ratio of bad debts to open credit sales is the lowest in the country, amounting to only three-tenths of one per cent, J. E. Truesdale, secretary of the Retail Credit Men's Association said yesterday. These figures were obtained from the United States Department of Commerce.

The cities with the same ratio as Pittsburgh include Boston, Louisville and Minneapolis. New York has a loss of one per cent, Chicago 1.5 per cent and Galveston 1.7, which is the highest in the list of cities made public here. Such cites as Cleveland, Detroit, Portland, Ore., and Richmond, Va., have one-half of one per cent. Mr. Truesdale believes that Pittsburgh's low percentage of loss is due to the system of credit information employed here.

President H. E. Wilson, of the association, announces that the directors of the credit body will meet this week and decide on a program of education in an effort to stop the return-of merchandise abuse, costing city merchants, it is claimed, much money each year.

Redistricting Board Will Hear Electors

The redistricting commission for Allegheny County has given notice to electors of all districts of the townships of Neville, Crescent, Moon and Kennedy, and the Borough of Coraopolis that a sub-committee of that body will hold a meeting October 7, at 8 p. m. in the Coraopolis municipal building.

The meeting is being held to hear suggestions in regard to dividing, consolidating or changing the election districts, when and where any elector interested in such matter will be heard.

50,000 TO TAKE PART HERE IN CATHOLIC RITES

Largest Religious Ceremony Will Mark Eucharistic Day Services October 12.

With hundreds of vested priests and prelates assisting in the services, 50,000 Catholic and non-Catholic laymen are expected to participate in the largest religious ceremony ever held here when Eucharistic Day will be observed in Forbes Field, October 12.

A special hook-up with the Carnegie Music Hall will bring organ music to the huge gathering. The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese, will be the celebrant in all the ceremonies. The observance, beginning at 7 p. m., will be for men only. It is being arranged by the Diocesan Union Holy Name Society.

SPECIAL ALTAR

As the worshippers fill the stands, Bishop Boyle will carry the blessed sacrament through a lane of vested clergy to a special tabernacle erected near the flagpole. The ceremonies will be conducted at a special altar, a replica of the altar used at the International Eucharistic Congress in Chicago.

50,000 CANDLES

As the ceremonies proceed, all lights will be extinguished and 50,000 lighted candles held by the kneeling laymen will illuminate the impressive scene. A special choir of 300 voices, trained for the occasion by Father Carlo Rossini, music director of St. Paul's Cathedral, will be augmented by hundreds of vested choir boys.

Special trains will bring the participants from all congregations of the 10 Western Pennsylvania counties comprising the diocese. Hundreds of others are expected from throughout the tri-state district.

FULTON ADDED TO CITY MOVIES

Renamed the Fulton Theater, the former Gayety in Sixth street at Duquesne way, reopens Saturday with a motion picture policy under the general direction of M. A. Shea, veteran theater operator.

Remodeled throughout, the Fulton will be an addition to Pittsburgh's modern cinema playhouses offering first run talking pictures of Paramount productions and super-attractions. No stage show will be inaugurated.

Shea, partner of Feiber and Shea, operating more than 30 theaters from the New England states into Ohio, has appointed I. B. Cool directing head, and William M. Conklin as house manager. The foyer will be equipped as a lounge.

Victor A. Rigaumond, Pittsburgh and New York theater architect, has been in charge of remodeling. A series of varied colored flood lights under the marque will be an innovation in entrances, it is announced, while the auditorium ceiling will be a sky of twinkling stars with drifting cloud effect.

Methodist Homes Left $17,000 in Will

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 27.—Under the will of Michael Bond Rich, of Woolrich, the Tyrone Methodist Home for the Aged benefits, the sum of $10,000 being contributed as an endowment to purchase land and build an addition. Another bequest is of $5,000 to be paid the home after the death of Harold Rich, a son. The sum of $2,000 is given to the Central Pennsylvania Methodist Children's Home.

"NATURE'S PATH" PHYSICIAN ENTHUSIASTICALLY DECLARES:

"I have personally used Flaxolyn; the results were excellent!"

"My own immediate family has been greatly benefited" states Pittsburgh Doctor

It is really surprising, the number of doctors who are using Flaxolyn right in their own household. All "schools" of doctors are represented in the list of those having personal preference for Flaxolyn. Here, for instance, is the interesting case of a Naturopathic physician—a doctor practising "natural healing."

Dr. Fredd Loper was retained to examine and pass professional judgment upon Flaxolyn. In this capacity he used it and proclaimed it to be a very fine formula. But Dr. Loper goes one step further. After six months' time he writes:

"I have personally used "FLAXOLYN" in my immediate family and the results were excellent."

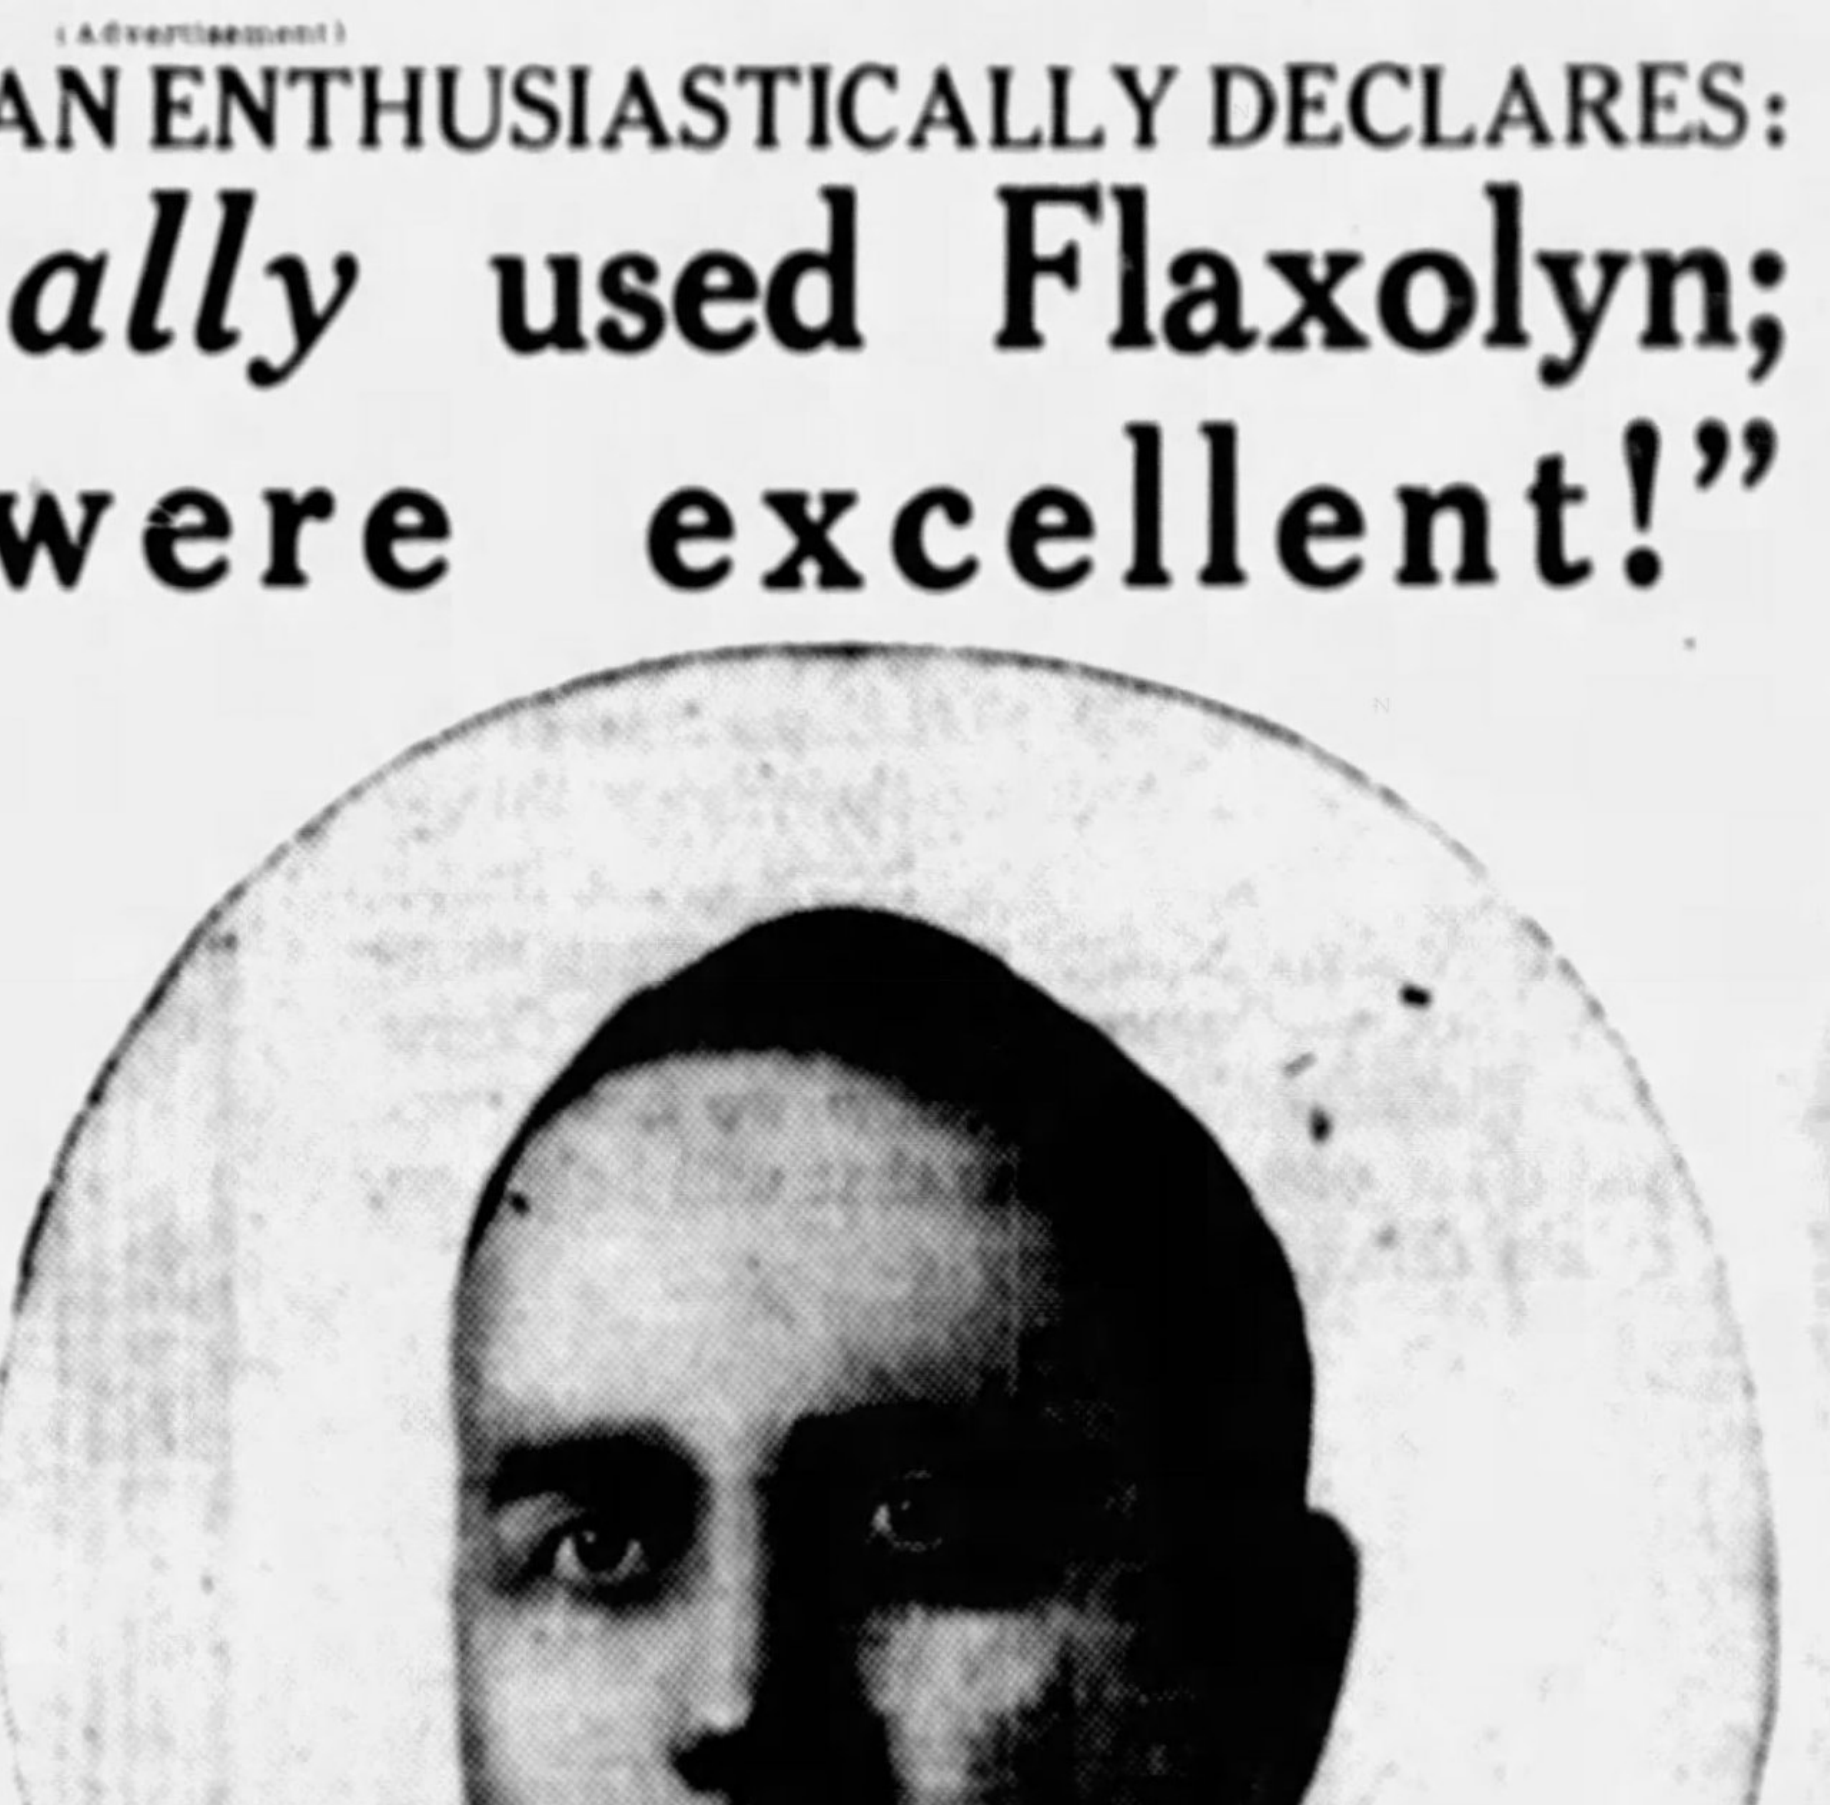
Fredd H Loper N.D.



Dr. Fredd Loper, Naturopathic Physician of Pittsburgh, Pa.

In this simple sentence, Dr. Loper tells a most beautiful story of CONFIDENCE in a formula containing many herbs, bile salts, vegetable extracts and other highly approved organic medicinals and which has proven its superiority and on this quality alone has won its success. Now read below the further, remarkable testimony acclaiming Flaxolyn.

We never dreamed Flaxolyn could do us so much good!

Thomas C. Martindale, Phila. Dietician and Radio Lecturer, says:

"I have known Mr. and Mrs. Pullman for years. I am glad they have permitted the use of their pictures and testimonial. I can testify to the benefits Flaxolyn has brought them. Their story is just one of HUNDREDS of similar cases where Flaxolyn has meant so much to men and women of all ages."

This is John Pullman's Wonderful Letter

For years Mrs. Pullman and I have suffered not chronically, but repeatedly from constipation and as a natural result, neither of us ever had much of an appetite, sleep was poorer than it should have been and we had a tired feeling all the time. I can not tell you how much money we paid out for medicines, with but little results.

I do not know much about medicine but common sense tells me that if the intestines do not function regular, the whole body has to suffer.

Last year I heard about your Flaxolyn, tried it, and found it worked wonderful. We never dreamed Flaxolyn could do so much good.

Mrs. Pullman sometimes was constipated for from three to five days, but after using the first bottle has been greatly relieved and after using Flaxolyn for three months feels like a different person, and the same thing applies to me.

Our friends began to wonder why we looked and felt so well and we told of our experience and the wonderful results with Flaxolyn and many of them took our advice and started to take Flaxolyn also, with the same results.

I do not know you, but write this letter only to thank you for the good Flaxolyn has done for my wife, my friends and myself, and hope every sufferer will avail himself of the opportunity to get Flaxolyn.

Very truly yours,
John O. Pullman

Tells Why He Is Happy to Recommend Flaxolyn

Director of Boston's Nature Food Center Praises Natural Action of Flaxolyn

What better testimony can we present to show you the powers and effectiveness of Flaxolyn, than the following letter from a man who is in direct contact with the public?

"From the wonderful reports we are getting on Flaxolyn, we are certainly happy to handle and recommend it.

"Flaxolyn is a pure preparation, containing no drastic drugs. Its action is really gratifying."

Spanish Physician Sends Compliments Warns Against Neglect

Dr. Juan Pallares of Valencia, Spain

Dr. Juan Pallares is associated with the University Hospital in picturesque Valencia, Spain. He is a diligent worker in medicinal research. To him we said: "Doctor, millions of people in America are suffering constantly from that insidious ailment called 'occasional constipation,' with its dastardly effects upon the systems through repeated neglect. We want to engage your services in rendering a perfectly honest opinion as to the merits of Flaxolyn in aiding such cases." To this Dr. Pallares replied:

"I have carefully examined Flaxolyn; I find it superior to any formula I know. I am satisfied it has no habit-forming tendencies. It has excellent corrective power. I endorse it and congratulate you."

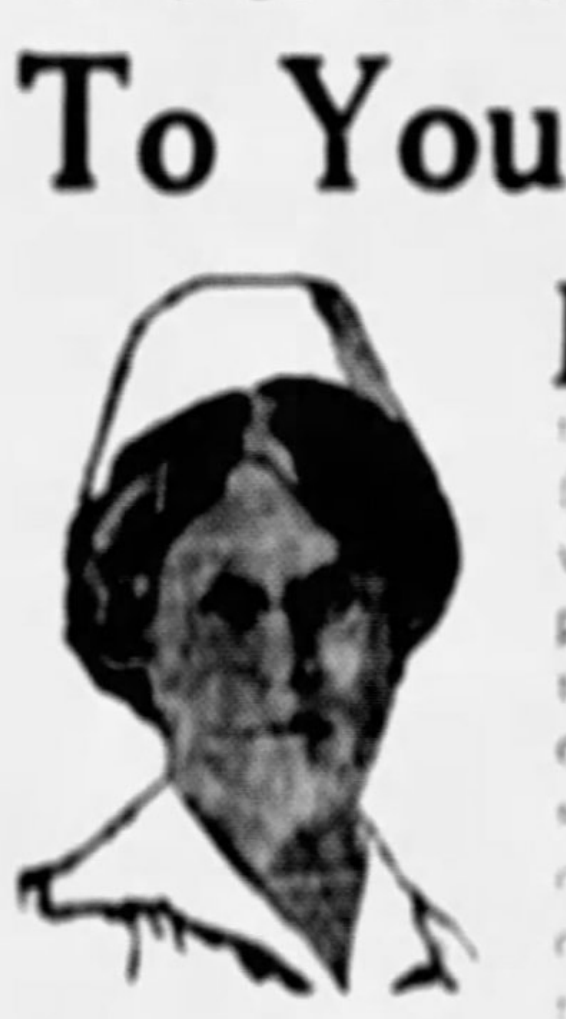
You May Add Years To Your Life Span—



I WANT to talk to you about something that cannot be bought with money. Diamonds and gold have no face value. You never thought there was anything more valuable than gold. Poverty is a good thing in most cases—it wrings the heart but expands the soul, creating a conscience of love for truth, which has its own reward. In fact, truth is the only thing that can exist without material force correcting all false dogmas. Those who seek it can always find it. You can neither buy nor sell Life's Span, So we all get a square deal in this world. To begin with, we behold one third of the human race dying with High Blood Pressure. No one tries to stop or remove the cause. One germ causes 70% of all operations and still no effort is made to arrest it. All diseases of faulty Metabolism can be prevented, hence Life's Span can be lengthened by no other process.

If this law is infallible, educate the mind to rule the body so your Heritage will not be stolen. Twenty years of effort with thousands of grateful patients who found a better way than drugging the stomach to get relief in 20 years of trial, NO SUBSTITUTE can be offered for BLOOD CELL SERUMS. There are none. Listen to me, if all our organs receive a normal blood supply, how can we be sick?

We are successfully treating High Blood Pressure, Rheumatism, Asthma, Diabetes, Anemia, Neuritis, Nervous or Stomach Troubles, Debility, Kidney Trouble, Heart Trouble, Blood and Skin Diseases, and other ailments affecting the blood stream. Also all Catarrhal Diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat.

The Object of This Laboratory:

To furnish guideposts for the fare clinic where the suffering can obtain relief whether they have money or not.

LOVE MIRACLE DRAWS THRONG FOR PRAYERS

Genoese Crowd Church Where Legend Says Virgin Gave Back Murdered Wife

CORONATA, Italy, Sept. 27—(AP)—This morning with the rising sun along the waterfront of Genoa, there occurred an impressive procession of people chanting and bearing lighted tapers.

The pilgrimage was directed to the sanctuary of Coronata for the festival of "Pacciugo" and "Pacciuga," the wedded couple who were the Romeo and Juliet of Genoa, but whose story ended happily, due to a miracle of the Virgin Mary, says the legend, in the year 1600.

Young lovers, decorated with flowers, spinsters carrying set boquets, bachelors, women veiled in black tulle in the Genoese style, children, and long lines of uniformed sailors, tall Ligurians stolidly marching who had taken the day off, all followed the road to Coronata.

PRAYER OFFERED

At the church a prayer was offered to the Madonna. At the side altar stand two figures in a niche, their faces burnt by the sun, of Pacciugo and Pacciuga, who lie together beneath the monument. Pacciugo, a Genoese sailor, so the story goes, and Pacciuga were the happiest couple in Genoa, boy and girl lovers. Pacciugo, captured by the Turks, pined 12 years in prison. His wife every Saturday walked to Coronata, and prayed for his return. Pacciugo escaped.

Arriving at Genoa he ran to his house to find it empty. It was Saturday. Pacciuga was at Coronata praying the Madonna for his return.

WIFE SLANDERED

Distracted, her husband ran to the neighbors to ask for her and met a woman who said:

"Every Saturday Pacciuga disappears. People talk. I know, but won't say."

When Pacciuga came in she said:

"You must come to the Madonna and thank her for this grace."

So they started off in a boat, but Pacciugo, insanely jealous, stabbed his wife, tied a stone about her neck, and threw her overboard crying:

"Traitress! I know all."

His wife replied:

"Dear Pacciugo, it is slander—the Lord knows who sees all."

She sank, crying to the Madonna and Pacciugo.

MIRACLE HAPPENS

Pacciugo landed his boat on the shore, and, seized with remorse, ran to the church crying:

"Madonna. She was Abel and I was Cain, the dear innocent one. The devil blinded me. Forgive—"

His prayer was disturbed by a step. Pacciugo looked up and saw Pacciuga coming toward him. He cried:

"Dear Pacciuga! Vision or woman!"

She said:

"It is I. The Madonna transported me through the air to her church."

Thus they lived in accord ever afterwards, and every Saturday walked to the sanctuary to pray to the Madonna. Every year thousands of pilgrims come here, bearing flowers. Young brides who have had a first quarrel with their husbands burn a candle to Pacciugo and Pacciuga even to this day.

Seek Mountaineer In Slaying of Boy

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., Sept. 27—(AP)—Mat Smith, 10, was shot and killed last night on Bull Creek, near the border of Knox and Clay Counties. Posses today were seeking Ison Gambrell, 25.

The boy and his sister, Ridley, 13, were accompanying their father, Bradley Smith, to a social at a nearby mountain town, when Gambrel drove up and asked to escort the girl to the party.

Bradley Smith refused. Gambrell then pulled a pistol, fired and fled, it was said.

Police Trap Prowler In Downtown Office

Steve Aiello, 18, of 1818 Cliff street, was arrested yesterday after he was trapped in a building at 626 Penn avenue into which he had forced entrance, police say.

He was cornered in the offices of the Duquesne Floral Company on the third floor of the building. Police say he gained entrance by removing glass from a window of the E. Rosenthal Fur Company. He told police he wanted a fur for his mother.

Legion Official Off To Convention City

State Adjutant James J. Deighan will leave Thursday for Boston to make final arrangements for the 6,000 Pennsylvania Legionnaires and Auxiliary members who will attend the twelfth annual national convention there October 6 to 9.

State Commander Frank L. Pinola, of Wilkes-Barre, will be in charge of the Pennsylvania delegation.

RESULTS OF PITTSBURGH RADIO POLL

As the Radio Poll enters its fourth and final week we find Glenn Riggs in first place as Pittsburgh's favorite announcer and the Rev. James R. Cox in first place as favorite artist.

Father Cox's friends and adherents have flocked to his support so vigorously that not only have their 7,174 votes placed him first as artist, but have carried St. Patrick's Church to first place as the favorite local program and WJAS to second place as favorite local station.

If Mr. Riggs continues the leader in the favorite announcer division he will receive a free trip to New York, where he will be given a special audition by the National Broadcasting Company.

All ballots must be in the office of the Sun-Telegraph before midnight, September 30. Final results will be announced the latter part of this week.

FIFTH AVENUE BUSINESS SITE IS PURCHASED

Wightman Street Home Sold; County Buys More Land Along Ohio Boulevard

A brick business building at the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and Tunnel street, Second Ward, has been sold by D Cargill Ward to Hugh Y Boyce. The lot fronts 39 feet on Fifth avenue and extends 66 feet to Diamond street.

A brick and stucco residence at the southeast corner of Wightman and Solway streets, Squirrel Hill, has been sold by John C Shaw to Gregg L Neel. The lot is 65x150 feet.

On the North Side W B Dawson & Co sold for Anna R Winkler to Winifred Conley a frame house on 20x30 feet at 1246 Franklin street. The buyer will remodel the property and hold it for investment.

NEW BOULEVARD DEALS

Allegheny County has purchased from Morris Handelman two properties in Forsythe street near California avenue, North Side, for $23,500. The land is along the route of the Ohio River boulevard. The county has also taken title from the Potter Title and Trust Company to 29x150 feet improved in California avenue at a consideration of $14,250.

A trade deal has been closed through the Ben Franklin Realty Company in which Antonio Rocco sold to Raymond F Eastley a frame house at 7631 Tioga street for $8,000, the buyer deeding in exchange a 40-acre farm in Jefferson Township, Butler County.

The same brokers sold for Olino Palumbo to Aniello Acerno a double brick and frame dwelling at 7505-07 Susquehanna street for $9,500.

BUILDER STARTS HOMES

Lee Richey, a builder, has started the erection of two homes on a lot 75x82 feet in Ashland avenue, Mt Lebanon. He purchased the site through W M Hall from Harry T Woods.

A 10-room frame residence on 40x119 feet at 1612 Davis avenue, North Side, has been sold by Nora C Maxwell to Alma Nelson. It is understood that the J F McClurg Company closed the deal.

A brick residence and garage in the Greensburg turnpike, Forest Hills, has been sold by John H Scott to H H Elliott. The lot is 60x173 feet.

MORE GARAGES IN CITIES SEEN

More and smaller garages instead of huge ones widely separated will be the tendency in American cities, according to experts writing in the American Architect Magazine.

Already agitation is afoot in New York to permit the building of garages beneath large apartment houses. Benjamin F Betts, editor of the magazine, points out that the car owner who must walk several blocks to and from his garage is losing as much time as he did in the days of slower transportation.

N H Owens, speaking for the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, advocates one square foot of parking space for every four feet of office space in the modern office building.

State Realty Meet At Reading Planned

An apartment building at 1502-04 Kelton avenue, corner Dell avenue, Dormont, has been sold through the C L Baxton Company for Andrew R Gardner for $37,500. The lot is 60x120 feet.

GOOD BUILDING CUTS FIRE RISK

Generally speaking, one's home is considered the safest possible place for the family but this is not always the case. Much depends upon the type of home.

Statistics compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters show that approximately 10,000 persons die every year as the result of fires. Sixty per cent of these deaths occur in home fires and 30 per cent of them are children under 10.

The board of underwriters, representing as it does the insurance companies, naturally is interested in reducing the number of such fires. When fire prevention week comes along October 5 to 11, the usual educational program against fires in the home will be stressed.

It used to be that the burden of fire prevention week advice was to be careful with matches and rubbish and bonfires and all the hundred and one other contributing dangers. Lately the board of underwriters is going deeper into the question and advising proper construction.

Mortgage Figures For Week Compiled

There were 404 mortgages totaling $1,537,137.49 placed on record from September 18 to September 24, according to the report of C C C Stotler, secretary of the Title Guaranty Company.

Of these 39 were purchase money mortgages totaling $158,871.55 and 365 were straight mortgages totaling $1,378,265.94. The straight mortgages included 125 for $586,547.89 to corporations, 142 for $487,651.25 to building and loan associations, and 98 for $304,066.80 to individuals.

WATCHING REAL ESTATE BY M.V. BURGESS

The question most frequently heard these days wherever business men get together is how soon may a general recovery in business be expected. Many financial experts have issued prophecies in which they stated that the upswing would come by October 1, or at least not later than January 1. The truth of the matter is that no one knows the day when trade will start to make gains. Experienced men may make intelligent guesses, but all that they can be sure of is that the tide will turn some time.

Real estate, like every other commodity, has been hurt by the depression. Nevertheless, in spite of unfavorable circumstances, there are real estate men in Pittsburgh who have had an excellent year thus far in 1930. The average volume of business has undoubtedly been less, but some individuals and firms by aggressive methods have been able to get a large share of the transactions.

Depressions and booms are an old story to the veterans of the real estate business. Waves of expansion and big business have always been followed by quiet periods. It is a fact worthy of notice that many of the Pittsburgh real estate men who have been in business for a number of years got their start during the dull periods. They had to work so hard for business during the quiet times that they did not lose their heads in the prosperity periods.

The practice of slashing overhead in dull times generally acts to bring about a farther downward movement in trade. John Wanamaker, generally recognized as a leading American merchant, did not do this. When times were bad, he increased his advertising and used every sales method at his command to start buying among the consuming public.

The announcement that the Koppers Company plans to remove the old brick building at Seventh avenue and Bigelow boulevard next spring when present leases expire and use the site for automobile parking purposes, indicates the income which a parking lot is capable of producing. The lot includes about 20,000 square feet with frontage on three streets well located for parking purposes. A study convinced the owners that a large annual saving will be made by removing the building.

Sale of the American Glue Company plant at Springdale is reported in real estate circles. Names of the buyers have not been disclosed, but New York interests are reported the purchasers. The plant includes about 60 acres between the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Allegheny River together with a large group of manufacturing buildings.

City Council has selected a committee to make a study of the large amount of real estate owned by the city with the object of selling some of it. Much of the property has been taken for taxes. While the city owns it, the property brings in no tax revenue. The return of a large amount of it to private ownership would be a big help to the public treasury. Unless the rising tide of taxes is stemmed, however, the city may find itself in the real estate business on a larger scale than it is now.

August was a very quiet month in residential building in Pennsylvania, according to reports from 44 cities filed with the Department of Labor and Industry. Permits granted for housing in August were 27.7 per cent less than in August, 1929. One of the heaviest declines was in apartment house construction which was off nearly 50 per cent. Repairs and alterations were lighter, but gains were registered in non-residential construction.

COST TRENDS IMPORTANT TO REALTY VALUES

Mortgage Expert Sees Average Construction Costs as Vital Appraisal Factor

There is not necessarily any direct relation between the contract cost of a single building and the value of that building, according to Philip W. Kniskern, prominent mortgage official, in a report just published dealing with the appraisal of properties for real estate loans.

The average level of construction costs does have a pronounced influence on value, he believes. Value should be reached after a consideration of the average costs of many similar construction projects and a survey of the acceptance by the public of all of the buildings. Small flurries in building costs are of little importance, but if a trend is established it means much in forecasting real estate prices.

PRICE COMPETITION

If the present lower prices of materials are permanent, Mr. Kniskern sees a price competition in real estate which will lower present realty values. This is only natural if buildings similar to those now in existence can be built and sold or rented profitably at a lower competing price.

If commodity prices should turn upward, he sees increasing prices for improved properties. The increase in value would be brought about either by competition only at a higher price or through monopoly or shortage value due to a decline in construction. A general movement in commodity prices thus becomes a valuable indicator to those interested in real estate prices.

SCIENTIFIC GUESSING

The danger of assuming that the construction cost of a single project is its value is pointed out in detail by Mr. Kniskern. He shows that all construction contracts are based upon bids and bids are based upon estimates of cost plus profit. An estimate of construction cost is nothing more than a scientific guess. Furthermore, it is very seldom, even in the large construction concerns where estimating has been developed to its most efficient status.

It is an almost uniform experience wherever several contractors are requested to bid from the same plans and specifications that there will be a wide difference in their figures. It is not uncommon for this difference to be as much as 25 per cent, and not unlikely that the lowest bid will be below the actual cost, with no profit or overhead, as estimated by some of the other bidders.

Nelson Optimistic On Realty Outlook

Consistent improvement in the real estate business from now on is the prediction made by Herbert U. Nelson, executive secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, following the recent annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, held at Detroit. Mr. Nelson attended the meeting and spoke on "New Uses for Real Estate."

Real Estate Index Lower for August

Old Roman Fort In Wales Shows Unusual Design

Plans for buildings different from any previously discovered have just been found at Caerleon, near the Wales border during excavations of the central zone of a Roman fortress. They are the residential and administrative quarters of the Roman garrison. A magnificent cobbled veranda facing on a paved courtyard with rounded edges was also unearthed.

Mt. Lebanon House Bought From Bank

The Ben F. Williams Company has completed the sale of a home for the Citizens State Bank of Dormont to Virgil L. Towner. The property is located on a 70-foot lot at 1269 Washington road, Mt. Lebanon, and consists of 10 rooms. Mr. Towner takes the property for a home.

Plans Being Drawn For Oakmont Store

Plans are being prepared for a two-story office and store building in Oakmont avenue, Oakmont, for Fred Pilgram. E. R. Loomis is the architect.

POWER FACTOR IN PLANT SITE

The importance of power as a factor in locating industries will be discussed by C. P. Wood, a New York engineer, in an address before a conference of the industrial property division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in Detroit, October 27 and 28.

Virgil Jordan, of New York, will survey the fields in which the services of the industrial location experts will be most needed in the future.

George C Smith, of St. Louis, chairman of the industrial property division, will preside. The afternoon of the second day of the conference will be taken up with an inspection trip of industrial areas in metropolitan Detroit.

Builder Purchases Mt. Lebanon Vacant

Rudolph Berg, Jr., has purchased from the W. A. Bode Improvement Company 100x177 feet vacant along the Washington road at Central square, Mt. Lebanon, for $18,000. The buyer has already broken ground for two stores at the south end of the parcel.

CITY MANAGER PLAN OUTLINED

The construction of public works as a method of relieving unemployment has disadvantages as well as good points, especially when the public funds are spent without due regard for economy, according to Walter J. Millard, of Philadelphia, student of municipal government, who has been active in campaigning for the city manager plan in a number of cities.

Mr. Millard told the real estate board following their luncheon Tuesday that the plan suggested in City Council here to put men to work by repairing streets without the use of modern machinery was the height of economic folly. He pointed out that the public pays for the entire proposition in taxes.

The workings of the city manager plan in Cincinnati were described by Mr. Millard. He declared that taxes have been reduced in that city and large sums of money saved by the selection of a trained administrator to run the city government. Decisions are made by the mayor and city council, but they are carried out by the manager.

HEARST PAPERS WIN PRAISE OF UNDERWRITERS

Head of International Group Tells Convention How Insurance Is Publicized.

TORONTO, Ontario, Sept. 27.—The concluding session of the International Life Underwriters' convention was characterized by animated discussion and speeches on institutional advertising of life insurance.

The Hearst newspapers were mentioned frequently for their initiative in showing life underwriters in large cities the way to utilize the greet force of newspapers advertising and were commended for their generous and intelligent handling of life insurance news and data.

Roger B. Hull, managing director of the National Association of Life Underwriters, in his closing speech said:

"In my opinion this movement of institutional advertising is steadily gaining ground in the United States, and the day is not far distant when the gospel of life insurance will be preached to the people of the United States, as our association has been urging for years that it must be preached, through a national co-operative institutional educational campaign.

INAUGURATE DRIVES

"Indeed, we have learned here that the agents of the United States are not waiting for the life insurance companies to set the necessary wheels in motion, but have already, during the past 12 months, in cities like New York, Pittsburgh, Washington, Cleveland and Denver, inaugurated local newspaper campaigns on their own account.

"And may I say a word, in this connection, about the splendid work that has been done along this line, especially by the national chain of newspapers—the Hearst group.

"They have made a special study of this entire question of life insurance advertising, and their contribution has been a very real one—and not merely from any selfish financial angle of their own, either—not only in developing material for an adequate presentation of our great institution to the American public, but in showing the way to life underwriters in our large cities how best to utilize this great force of co-operative newspaper advertising.

LAUDS HEARST GROUP

"Furthermore, the interest of the Hearst newspapers is not confined only to their advertising departments, but there seems to be in their vast news service a very striking, and even personalized, belief in the institution which they are thus advocating and promoting.

"Their columns, both news and editorial, are always open to the advancement of life insurance as a prime factor in the social and economic life of the nation."

Legion Committee To Honor Ex-Chief

A testimonial dinner in honor of past County Commander Edward Crump, Jr., will be given October 14 in the English room of the Fort Pitt Hotel by the Allegheny County committee of the American Legion.

County Commander John B. Nicklas, Jr., named general chairman of the dinner committee, will be assisted by Raymond Flynn.

Pastor Installed For Three Churches

GROVE CITY, Pa., Sept. 27.—The Rev. Luther McDonald, graduate of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary this year, has been installed as pastor of the Presbyterian churches at Amity, Millbrook and Irwin. He was admitted to the Butler Presbytery early this month.

Sharon Landmark To Be Gas Station

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 27.—Another Sharon landmark, the old Thompson homestead in Sharpsville avenue, is passing out of existence. The house, owned for 32 years by Mrs. Felicia Burnett, has been torn down and a gasoline station will be erected on the ground.

TRAVEL and RESORT INFORMATION

VON LUCKNER OFFERS CRUISE TO ANTARCTICA

Count and Members of Byrd Party Plan Antarctic Cruise Via South Seas

Von Luckner

The opportunity has been offered to a limited number of adventurous men and women to accompany Count and Countess Felix Von Luckner and selected members of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition on the first cruise to Antarctica via the South Seas. The Count will take a small party of guests desirous of sharing the adventures, pleasures and stimulation of a five months voyage aboard his yacht the Mopelia.

Leaving New York early in November the Mopelia, a four-master auxiliary schooner of 2 500 tons, will sail to Cristobal and proceed through the Panama Canal to Balboa. From there a course will be laid to the Marquesas, in former times the base of the New Bedford whaling fleets and now one of the richest pearling grounds in the world. After a visit to Disappointment Isle, made famous by Herman Melville, the yacht will sail on to Papeete, the capital of Tahiti in the Society Islands.

FLY OVER SOUTH SEAS

Here the guests will have the opportunity to take part in the first flights ever made over some of the verdant isles of the South Seas. The yacht will carry a special Fokker amphibian plane which Capt Alton Parker, the first man to fly over the Antarctic continent, will pilot.

The trip to Antarctica will be so timed that the vessel will reach the pack ice when it is broken and scattered from the latter part of January until the beginning of March. Capt Charles J McGuinness, chief officer of the Byard Antarctic expedition who has twice been through the pack, will be ice pilot on the passage south into the Bay of Whales.

WOMEN DISEMBARK FIRST

At Little America the yacht will make fast to the barrier where women guests will disembark first as the pioneer representatives of their sex in Antarctica. With the assistance of the guests, the members of the Byrd Expedition plan to salvage the two planes left behind by their commander. All will share equally in the honor of bringing these famous planes back to America.

To help defray the costs of the expedition Count and Countess Von Luckner have asked that each guest contribute the sum of $5 000. Further information may be obtained at the American Express Company, 512 Grant street.

Plan to Rebuild Pier at Vancouver

The Canadian National Steamships pier at Vancouver which was recently almost completely destroyed by fire just before completion of the extensive alterations to provide berthing facilities for the new Prince Henry series of vessels on the Seattle-Victoria-Vancouver triangular service will be rebuilt as soon as possible according to the announcement of Col. T A Hiam, representative of Sir Henry Thornton, president of Canadian National Railways. The pier structure cost about $750 000.

Canadian Steamer Makes New Record

Canadian Pacific Steamships announce that the new 26 000-ton liner Empress of Japan which recently broke the eastbound trans-Pacific record from Yokohama to Vancouver has just bettered by 22 hours the record from Victoria to Honolulu. The Empress made the trip in four days 15 hours 50 minutes. She sailed from Vancouver for Honolulu and the Orient September 4, touching at Victoria en route.

"Ask Mr. Foster" Head Goes Abroad

Ward G Foster, president of the travel agency "Ask Mr Foster" and who knows all the answers to the questions of more than 4 000-000 people who annually call at his 68 knowledge-dispensing emporiums throughout the United States, has sailed for Europe aboard the French Line steamer Paris. Mr Foster has gone abroad to learn some more answers.

Americans Lead In Saxon Capital

DRESDEN, Sept 27—Americans led all other visitors in Dresden in recent months, the number almost reaching 3 000 per month. While most German cities registered a considerable falling off in the number of guests this year as compared with 1929 the Saxon capital had 7.3 per cent more visitors than at the same time last year, and the number of foreigners increased about 10 per cent.

Trio Rents Rooms, Robs Man of $5,000

CHARLEROI, Pa., Sept 27—(AP.)—State police are seeking three men who robbed Joseph Zelunka, 55, Somerset Township farmer, of $5 000, his life savings. The money was taken from a trunk in Zelunka's bedroom while he was at work. The trio first called at Zelunka's home to rent rooms.

MECCA FOR WINTER TOURISTS

HAWAII—The beach at Waikiki will this winter become one of the centers of attraction for many Pittsburgh visitors, who plan to spend all or part of the winter months in the ever-verdant land of palms. In the background is the Royal Hawaiian Hotel.

NEW SERVICE TO BE OPENED

MONTREAL, Sept 27—A direct service between Halifax, Boston and the West Indies by a line of steamships is announced by the Canadian National Railways. On the south-bound journey the boats will start from Halifax and call at Boston and then proceed to Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, British Honduras, St Kitts, Nevis, Antigua, Montserrat, Dominica and other islands of the eastern group including St Vincent, Grenada, Trinidad and British Guiana. No freight will be handled from Boston. Each boat has stateroom accommodation for more than 100 passengers and is beautifully appointed throughout.

Interest in the West Indies has increased tremendously within the past few years and an even more rapid increase is expected by the company as a result of the Boston connection which will save a full day for passengers originating in the New England States and at other points in the United States and Central and Western Canada as far west as Chicago and Winnipeg. A direct Canadian National rail connection will be made between the boats at Boston and Montreal. Northbound the ships will proceed from Boston to St John, N B.

Seaboard Air Line Offers Excursions

The Seaboard Air Line Railway, according to C B Barton, district passenger agent, has announced a per capita excursion rate from Washington, D C, to points in Florida and Havana. Tickets were placed on sale yesterday in Washington and will be offered again November 15, December 13, December 27, March 14 and April 4. The rate for the round trip from Washington to destination will be the one-way fare plus 25 cents. These excursion tickets will bear a return limit of 15 days, except to Key West, which limit will be 18 days and to Havana, Cuba, 22 days.

Europa Equipped With Catapult Plane

The North German Lloyd steamer Europa is like the Bremen, her sister ship, equipped with a catapult airplane. On the Europa's last trip to America the plane was catapulted from the ship effecting a gain in some 20 hours in the mail for America. Since the air post from Southampton for the Continent is transported by the night airplane service to Cologne and Berlin, this will mean a gain of from one and one-half to two days in time of delivery.

STEEL PIER REMAINS OPEN

Confident of unprecedented patronage to Atlantic City during the forthcoming seasons, the Steel Pier, nationally known amusement and exhibit enterprise at Atlantic City, will remain open all-year-round. Frank P Gravatt, president of the Steel Pier Company, in announcing the new policy states the Steel Pier had enjoyed the greatest summer season in its history, shattering all attendance records. Extensive alterations will be made to meet the coming season's plans. Upon entering the Pier, the visitor will pass through a beautifully constructed rock garden centered with a fountain. All the lobbies will be luxuriously fitted and heated. The steamer chairs and open decks too will be available to visitors.

GIANTS, BUCS PLAY IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept 27—Big league baseball for the first time a resort attraction in Havana has early fall visitors as well as rabid Cuban fans looking forward eagerly to October 10, opening day for a series between the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants at beautiful Tropical Park, leading baseball diamond in the island republic.

Regardless of how the two teams fare in the annual race for the National League pennant, both will be acclaimed here with unrestrained enthusiasm. Cuba has seldom, if ever, witnessed major league play, and indications this week were that thousands of residents and visitors will avail themselves of the unusual opportunity.

Luncheon Aids Fund For N. Y. College

Dr. Henry Hartington, of New York, son of the late Bishop James Henry Hartington, of Harrisburg, was a guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. William T. Shannon, of Signal Farm, Sewickley. The luncheon was given in the interest of a fund for a new administration building at Wells College, Aurora, N Y.

UNITED STATES LINE PROMOTES NEW MOVEMENT

Plan Educational Program On Behalf of American Citizens and Travelers

To stimulate interest in travel and shipping in American vessels the United States Lines are promoting an educational movement to emphasize the facilities and benefits offered to citizens who patronize their own merchant marine, according to official announcement. Dr. William J Cooper, federal commissioner of education, and John J Hagerty, assistant to passenger traffic manager of the United States Lines, have discussed an educational program along these lines.

Dr Cooper was informed by Mr Hagerty that textbooks treating geography, civics and history taught in the public schools of this country are wanting in information about the American lines. Mr. Hagerty declared that cuts and photographs illustrating these textbooks have been supplied in a large measure by foreign shipping interests, hence the student leaving school thinks in terms of foreign vessels and has little knowledge of those operated by his own countrymen.

New Ship Service From Boston Harbor

A new steamship service is to be commenced November 20 between Boston and London and Antwerp by the New England Transatlantic Lines, according to announcement by Mayor Curley at the monthly meeting of the Transatlantic Association freight conference at the Copley Plaza Hotel. The Mayor states that the new company is Boston-owned and will operate vessels of approximately 6 000 tons, carrying both freight and passengers under the Norwegian flag. John G. Douglas is president.

Hawaiian Children Ride Small Waves On Minature Boards

HONOLULU, Hawaii, Sept. 27—Surfriding, the breath-taking sport indulged in by experienced native boys and girls, have miniature surfboards, which they use with adeptness in riding the small waves of the keiki (kid's) surf that breaks close to the shore at Waikiki Beach.

The Hawaiian children practically live in the water. They learn to swim and surf as soon as they can play an ukulele. Another typically Hawaiian toy is a water-going kiddie kar, built on the same lines as the outrigger canoe.

Hollanders Arrive For American Trip

Among the 1 400 passengers arriving in New York from Europe aboard the Holland-American liner Rotterdam was a group of 31 Hollanders from different parts of the Netherlands, who will make an educational tour of many of the principal cities of the United States.

Sponsored by the "Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant," the tour is the first of its kind and is being fostered by a Rotterdam newspaper to promote closer relations between the old Amsterdam and the new. Members of the party will remain in the United States until October 11, when they will sail for home on board the Holland-American flagship Statendam. Among the cities to be visited are New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Denver, Colorado Springs, Detroit, Niagara Falls, Boston and Albany.

PLAN TO BUILD THREE LINERS

The construction of three additional turbo-electric liners of the same type as the California, Virginia and Pennsylvania, is being contemplated by the Panama-Pacific Line, subsidiary of the International Mercantile Marine Company. Confirmation of the reports in shipping circles that the ships are to be built soon has been given by P. A. S. Franklin, president of I. M. M. He added that while the ships were proposed, no contracts for their construction have been let.

The three additional ships would enable the Panama-Pacific lines to carry out its long proposed weekly service between New York and the Pacific Coast.

MAKE CHANGE IN ITINERARY

Several interesting changes have been made in the itinerary of the seventh world cruise of the Red Star liner Belgenland, which will make the 1930-31 program for the cruise of the big liner more attractive than ever, and will provide an added interest for passengers who have made the voyage with the Belgenland in previous years.

This year the cruise will begin at New York in December.

Publisher,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir:-

It gives us genuine pleasure to announce that, beginning next Sunday, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will carry our advertising message regularly.

Due to the naturally rapid growth of our establishment and the outstanding success achieved by your paper, we have deemed it advisable to use the Sun-Telegraph and thus deliver our sales message to a vast, profitable market that we have never before reached. The convenient location of our three stores - downtown, North Side and East Liberty - guarantee exceptional distribution. We believe that the Sun-Telegraph effectively reaches the citizens of all districts who use those three centers as buying points.

Everything is now auspicious for our advertising venture in your paper. Prices are now at pre-war levels. Stocks are complete - our merchandise is right, - and with our advertising in the Sun-Telegraph we confidently anticipate a successful season.

We appreciate what the Sun-Telegraph has done in promoting the interests of Jewelry business in Pittsburgh, and trust that our first advertising in the Sun-Telegraph marks the beginning of a long and successful business association.

With warm personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

Wm J. Kappel

WORLD SLUMP NEAR ITS END, DAWES' VIEW

Ambassador Tells Irish Business Recovery Is Sure; Klein Sees Quick Upturn

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 27.—(INS)—Hopes for an early termination of the world's economic depression were expressed today by United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, who spoke at a banquet at the City Hall tendered him by the Lord Mayor.

Discussing the industrial slump and its probable causes and duration, Ambassador Dawes concluded:

"May we not hope to see the normal trend of world business resumed by summer or at least by fall of next year? Exceptional local conditions in this or that country may advance or retard healing effects on restoring the world's business confidence, but nothing is more certain than the coming business recovery.

FOOLISH FEARS

"The business fool in 1929 was he who had no fear. The fool now is he who has no hope."

Ambassador Dawes placed a wreath on the Belfast centopaph and reviewed the Royal Fusiliers. He is here as guest of his wartime friend, Gen. Sir Travers Clark.

SEES EARLY UPTURN

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(INS)—There is a good chance the business depression in the United States will be out of the way in late October in the opinion of Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce.

Conditions are not as bad as painted, Dr. Klein said, in addressing a club here, and he pointed out further that under the law of averages the time had arrived for a definite improvement in business. The resources of the country are much better than pictured, he said.

He Stopped Whiskey!

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman
In all this little town;
And our merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown.
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more,
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store!

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN TREATMENT,
Sly as sly could be!
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.
And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
(And cried some, too, I guess)
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.
And John never thought a minute
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as any one,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nice, new life.
"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Then GOLDEN TREATMENT.

Dawes Refuses Wines, Asks For Ginger Beer

Associated Press.

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 27.—Ambassador Dawes surprised all by his Spartan diet at the luncheon given him here.

Champagne and costly wines were dispensed about the table, but Mr. Dawes refused them. Finally he asked for a bottle of ginger beer. This request created consternation among the waiters. A messenger had to be dispatched post-haste from the city hall to a hotel nearly a fifth of a mile away.

DRY MEN RAID 7 CITY PLACES

Seven raids were made yesterday by government prohibition agents in various sections of the city.

They reported seizing 50 gallons of alcohol, 101 gallons of whisky and 100 cases of home brew beer in a building at 6289 Frankstown avenue; a 300-gallon still, 60 gallons of moonshine whisky, 700 pounds of corn sugar and other alleged contraband in a building at 5 Graphic street.

Other raids were made, the agents reported, at 612 Transverse street, Mount Oliver; 2020 Forbes street, 2117 Sarah street, 1251 Spring way and 2150 Straub lane, Troy Hill.

Constable Alleges Police Lax in Work

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 27.—James Ellison, constable of the First Ward, appeared before City Council and accused the police department of not furnishing adequate protection in that section of the city. Mayor William H. Gillespie defended the police, and gave assurance he would see that they did their full duty.

STREET DEATH CAUSE SOUGHT

Coroner W. J. McGregor has ordered an investigation into the death of John P. Hickey, 55, of 1216 Boyle street, who succumbed Friday night in the Presbyterian Hospital after being found unconscious at East North avenue and Sandusky street, Wednesday night.

Patrolman R. D. Thompson reported he had found Hickey and taken him to the hospital. J. H. Avins, of Butler, is said to have notified the coroner he saw an automobile strike Hickey and that the driver picked him up. Thompson denied striking Hickey.

SHOT AT PRINCE, GETS FIVE YEARS

BRUSSELS, Sept. 27.—(INS)—Ferdinand de Rosa, young anti-Fascist student, was sentenced to five years in prison today for his attempt upon the life of Crown Prince Umberto of Italy.

The jury found mitigating circumstances, although they agreed the shooting was premeditated. Witnesses for the defense declared de Rosa was prompted in his act by the alleged warlike tendencies of Italy under the Fascist regime.

De Rosa fired at the Prince while Umberto was laying a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Held in fairly close check by a fighting Waynesburg College eleven during the first three quarters of the opening battle of the 1930 football season before a crowd of 18,000 at the Stadium yesterday afternoon the Pitt Panthers ran riot in the final quarter to add four touchdowns and 26 points to a similar total in the first three periods and win, 52-0. Last year they won the inaugural against the same foe, 53-0.

The contest was played under an almost cloudless sky and with ideal early-season football weather favoring the occasion. There was a tang of autumn in the air that was tempered by a warm sun.

Before the final play had been run off, every member of the Panther squad had seen service with the exception of Jim Clark, the fullback, who was supposed to start the game, but was indisposed and gave way to Franklin Hood.

And the second and third-

Skibos Rout Buffalo In Grid Opener

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Carnegie Tech's Tartans grabbed the bulls of the University of Buffalo by their well-known horns here this afternoon and tossed them very expertly into the ranks of the defeated and decisively defeated elevens. Carnegie crushed Buffalo under a 75-to-2 score, running 11 touchdowns across in the opening tussle of the local intercollegiate season.

The game was a rout from start to finish. Tech carried entirely too many guns for the local collegians, and besides, had the stuff to spike whatever Buffalo may have had in store for a surprise for Tech. The only surprise of the day was that the score was not larger.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SUNDAY: THE WUNDERKIND OF LUBECK—Christian Heinrich Heinecken, the "Wunderkind of Lubeck," was a child of incredible precocity. This is the list of his accomplishments: He spoke at the age of eight weeks, knew the Pentateuch at the age of one year, the Bible at the age of 13 months. At the age of two years, he knew all ancient and modern history and had a perfect command of French and Latin, in addition to his native German, at the age of four. He died in his fifth year, within two months after he was weaned. "NO DO," THE FAMOUS PUZZLE—The honorary motto in the form of a rebus "No Madeja Do" (No me ha dejado) was conferred upon the city of Seville by the grateful King Pedro I, of Castille, in the fourteenth century. The city did not waver in its fidelity to its legitimate ruler at a period when Pedro's fortunes of war were at their lowest ebb and Enrique II threatened to usurp the throne of Castille. DESPREZ SERVED 75 YEARS AS A GALLEY SLAVE—In 1668, King Louis XIV, of France, decided to discontinue the manning of galleys by forced convict labor. It was then that the records of the surviving galley slaves were scrutinized and the injustice done to one Rene Despres, who had been a galley slave since 1593, was discovered. There was no record of any crime committed by the old "galerien," nor was there any sentence ever pronounced against him. Upon motion of the intendant Vidocq, Desprez received an honorable discharge and a small lifelong pension was assigned to him by way of repairing the atrocious injustice done to an innocent man. (See "Toulon" by Abee Lagrange.) HARRY PIDGEON SAILED ALONE ACROSS THE PACIFIC—Prior to his voyage in his yawl, "The Islander," Captain Pidgeon never had been out of sight of land, nor was his experience ever remotely connected with matters maritime. Yet he built, unaided, and made seaworthy, the vessel on which he has made three voyages across the Pacific Ocean alone. This "landlubber" acquitted himself most creditably of a great maritime task. (Reference: "Sunset Magazine," July, 1922.) ARTHUR SAXON, FAMOUS STRONG MAN—Saxon's performance of lifting 448 pounds to arms' length over his head, which I illustrated in my drawing, is but one of many of his feats of strength. Saxon is a world-famous Austrian strong man, possibly the greatest weight-lifter who ever lived. This weight-lifting accomplishment set a world record that remains unbroken.

of the 36-hole final 7 up. Good and game a young golfer as is Homans, he was no match whatever for the stock king of the links. It was just a question of how long it would go in the afternoon, and Bobby kept the galloping gallery in suspense longer than it was anticipated, largely because "Calamity Jane," the Jones putter, was far from her usually consistent self.

MARSHALS BRUSHED ASIDE

Jones became 9 up at the twenty-second, with only 14 to go, and the crowd became frenziedly eager to be in on the "kill" but it went seven more holes. At the twenty-seventh, Homans cut away a hole with a fine birdie 2. At the twenty-eighth, it looked to be all over until Bobby took two shots to get out of a trap and barely saved a half in "buzzard" 6s. It was now dormie 8 and the throng broke all bounds in its wild gallop to the eleventh hole, down into the woods and along the creek—the twenty-ninth hole of the match.

Gallery marshals were ruthlessly brushed aside or knocked down in the wild charge to catch a glimpse of the last putt. Jones and Homans were nearly engulfed after they played their second shots well on to the green. Surrounded by Marines, the contestants and officials pushed their way to the green.

Jones was 25 feet away from the cup and putted dead for his 4. A hush fell over the tremendous crowd, covering the hills and knolls, the woods and fairway. Homans putted from 20 feet, the ball rolled close, but missed and a wild shout went up from the crowd. Almost instantly there was a wild rush for the green and Jones.

For a few seconds it looked as if the quadruple monarch of all the golfing kingdoms would be overwhelmed, but as if by magic command, the Marines rose from nowhere, a score of them under Lieut. Whitey Lloyd, former Annapolis fullback, to form a solid phalanx around the Georgian. The vanguard hit Lloyd and bounded back, shaken off like he used to block would-be tacklers. Others slowed up as they saw the protective cordon and the danger of a mob scene was avoided.

BREAKS MANY RECORDS

In flying wedge fashion, the Marines escorted Jones, Homans and officials of the United States Golf Association through the throngs, and up to the clubhouse lawn where the massive championship trophy, on a spotless table cloth, sparkled in the sun for the ceremony of presentation again to this Georgia marvel.

Twenty deep as many of the spectators who could jam themselves about the scene stood to watch the last act of the great Jones drama of 1930 and lustily cheered the quiet, stocky young

Bobby Jones' Win Over Gene Homans Told in Detail

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The detailed account of Bobby Jones' victory over Gene Homans, 8 and 7, in the final of the national amateur golf championship at the Merion Cricket Club today follows:

MORNING ROUND

FIRST HOLE, 360 YARDS, PAR 4.

Jones drove with a spoon from the first tee, but was slightly in front of Homans' long tee shot. Bob pitched on 20 feet from the cup after Gene put his second in a trap. Homans came out of the sand 35 feet from the cup. Gene's long putt for a 4 stayed out. Jones putted close and got his par. Jones 1 up.

SECOND HOLE, 555 YARDS, PAR 5.

Jones drove to rough and Homans to a trap at the long second. Gene came out to the rough and Bob hit a long iron down the fairway. Jones was barely on the green with his third and Homans was short. Jones' putt ran up the green's bank on which the pin was placed, but rolled back and each was a long way off on four, Homans 20 feet and Jones 18. It was a half in 6's. Jones 1 up.

THIRD HOLE, 185 YARDS, PAR 3.

At the third Jones sent an iron to the green, but Homans' spoon shot was on top of a trap to the left. Homans chipped eight feet from the cup. Jones putted short from 30 feet. Homans missed his putt for a 3. Bob holed his par and went 2 up.

FOURTH HOLE, 595 YARDS, PAR 5.

Jones drove to a trap at the long fourth. Homans was clear. Bob hit a spoon shot from the sand down the fairway and Gene fired his into rough, although nearer the green. Jones pitched on 30 feet from the pin. Homans, too, pitched on, but outside his rival's ball. Homans took three putts for a 6, while Jones holed his par 5. Jones 3 up.

FIFTH HOLE, 435 YARDS, PAR 4.

A stiff cross wind carried Jones' ball to a bad rough to the left. The same wind carried Homans' ball to a trap. Gene took a spoon into the trap, but could not reach the green. Jones went from the rough to the green. Gene made a fine approach, 10 feet from the pin. Jones putted within four feet. Homans missed his putt for a four. Jones also missed and the hole was halved in 5s. Jones 3 up.

SIXTH HOLE, 427 YARDS, PAR 4.

The drives at the sixth were practically level. The two second shots just reached the green, with Homans slightly away. Gene's approach putt was short and so was Bob's. Jones holed his 4. Homans got his half. Jones 3 up.

SEVENTH HOLE, 355 YARDS, PAR 4.

Jones drove to the edge of a ditch at the seventh and pitched on. Homans had a straight drive and sent a good second home. Putting from 25 feet, Bob ran up close. Gene was within a foot, and stymied Jones. Bob could not get by his

Gabby Has Five Pitchers to Mack's Three; Rates Wilson Equal to Cochrane.

Concedes A's Have Edge in Outfield, But Claims Big Advantage in Infielders.

By CHARLES (Gabby) STREET,
Manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Judging from the questions that have been fired at me by friends and newspaper men, one of the things the public is interested in is what I think of the Athletics and how I compare them with the team that I have been fortunate enough to lead to a pennant in the National League.

There's no question about the Athletics being good. They had to be good to win two years in a row. And I may be very much prejudiced in favor of my ball club, but I think it is a remarkably good organization and I can't for the life of me see how the Athletics are going to beat us.

TEAM HAS COURAGE

We've certainly shown our courage in coming from far behind as we did, and after we went through that bitter series at Brooklyn and beat the Robins three straight with their own fans cheering them on their own field, the World Series won't rattle us.

In a little more than a month and a half we overcame a lead of 12 games to take first place.

Connie Mack has a great catcher in Mickey Cochrane, but I have two doggone good catchers in Jimmy Wilson and Gus Mancuso. Jimmy got hurt in New York and Gus went in there and caught like an old veteran of the baseball wars.

Mack has three pitchers in Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg, while I have five pitchers who have done brilliant work in our pennant drive and who are in first-class condition for a big series. They are Grimes, Haines, Johnson, Hallahan and Rhem, and I wouldn't be afraid to toss their names in a hat and pick out the one to face the Athletics first.

Mack's outfield has a little more batting power than mine, though Hafey, Douthit and Watkins and Fisher and Blades have given that ball some good thumps in winning the pennant.

In the infield I think we've got more hitting power, which offsets the advantages, if any, that the Macks have in the outfield. Bottomley is as good a fielder as Foxx, and while he doesn't hit 'em as far he's a great man in a pinch and a good batter.

While we're waiting for the big series with the Athletics to start, I would like to say a few words of appreciation of the men who have stood out in the Cardinals' great drive to a pennant and of the factors which were important in that victorious struggle.

RESERVES HELP CLUB

We never could have won the pennant without our reserves, and at the outset I want to commend those men who have sat on the bench ready for any call and who have come through so effectively when called on to fill in for the regulars.

Andy High has been on the bench most of the year, but that little fighting Irishman has won many a game for us. And what a fine spirit he has. In the spring, while I was experimenting with my infield, Andy came to me one day and said:

"Gabby, I want you to know that I'm for you, whether I'm in the game or on the bench. Adams looks fine and you may find it a better combination with him at third, and if you decide that way I'll be for you just the same. We all want you to win, and I'll be as ready to go in and give my best any time you need me."

That was a fine spirit and the boy certainly did come through. He won a 20-inning game for us in Chicago, hit in the pinch in New York to win one, and then took up two of the Brooklyn games with doubles, batting as a pinch hitter.

George Watkins and George Fisher and Ray Blades, my reserve outfielders, also have done some great work.

Then my relief pitchers, Jim Lindsey and Herman Bell and Al Grabowski, have saved many a game. I believe Lindsey is the best relief pitcher I ever saw. He has saved at least 15 games for other pitchers, besides tacking a few onto his own list of victories. He has what the boys call the "guts" and no batter is too tough for him.

The trade that brought Grimes to our ball club was an important factor, too. It showed the men that the club owners wanted to win the pennant and it also gave us a tough pitcher, a man who loves to win and who is toughest when the stakes are high. And when there's an important game to be pitched, there's nobody that you can have more confidence in than old Burleigh.

Trimble Wins Casting Meet

A. C. Trimble, of Cleveland, won both events sponsored by the Pittsburgh Flycasting Society, under the auspices of the Isaak Walton League of America, at Lake Carnegie, Highland Park, yesterday afternoon. The Clevelander copped the first event, a wet fly accuracy 35-to-55 feet test, with a total of 4 points, and the second event, a three-eighth ounce accuracy test, with a total of 2 points.

Otto Peters, of Buffalo, N. Y., national all-around champion, finished second and third.

The Pittsburgh chapter of the league will hold five events today at Lake Carnegie, two in the morning and three in the afternoon. The summary:

Wet fly accuracy test—A. C. Trimble, 4 points; Ed Draddon, 5; Otto Peters, 5; J. Baxendall, 9; A. Acetti, 10; W. R. Oliver, 10; G. Lockwood, 10; C. N. Ward, 12; W. B. Kerr, 13; F. Girald, 16; Fred Bolton, 17; Ed Licotti, 17; G. F. Kennedy, 22 points.

A's 13-10 Favorites to Win; Grove, Grimes in Opener

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Betting on the impending world series is fairly brisk, with the Philadelphia Athletics 13-to-10 favorites to win over the St. Louis Cardinals in the annual baseball classic. The wagering promises to be heavier than on any sports event of the year, according to Broadway commission brokers.

St. Louis money is plentiful enough. A bet of $10,000 was laid today on the Cards at the prevailing 13-to-10 odds. Another $10,000 is available if the St. Louis people can get 7 to 5 against the Cards.

By October 1, opening day of the series, the betting may be at "even money," brokers say. Today, however, they were betting this way: 13 to 10 the A's win the series; 10 to 1 Philadelphia does not win four straight; 15 to 1 St. Louis doesn't win four straight; 7 to 5 that if Grove pitches the A's win the first; 1 against 2½ the A's win the first two games.

Many wagers are being laid on the basis that the pitchers for the opening game will be Burleigh Grimes for St. Louis against Lefty Grove for Philadelphia. There is plenty of money that Grimes, one of the greatest "money pitchers" in the game, can beat the highly-touted Grove in the event they are pitted against each other in the initial contest.

Triple Deadlock In Trapshoot Event

Charles E. Campbell, M. M. Lower and V. L. Foster tied for high honors yesterday at the McKees Rocks Gun Club shoot, turning in 94. This event was sponsored by the Western Pennsylvania Trapshooter's League and was a qualifying round for the post-season shoot to be held October 9 at Wilkinsburg. The scores:

Jones' Win In Detail

opponent's ball and took 5 to 4 for Homans. Jones 2 up.

EIGHTH HOLE, 330 YARDS, PAR 4.

There was little to choose between the drives at the eighth and they pitched well on. Each putted close and it was a half in fours. Jones 2 up.

NINTH HOLE, 170 YARDS, PAR 3.

Jones pitched on from the tee at the short ninth, while Gene's went in water and took a penalty stroke. Jones was down in par 3 to 4 for Homans. Jones, 3 up. The cards:

Jones—
Out ........ 4 6 3 5 5 4 5 4 3—39
Homans—
Out ........ 5 6 4 6 5 4 4 4 4—42

TENTH HOLE, 335 YARDS, PAR 4.

Homans hooked to rough from the tee after Jones sent a long one down the fairway. Jones played safely to the middle of the green. Gene's ball rolled to a trap beyond the green. He exploded far past the pin and then putted close. Bob was down in two putts for his par 4 and went 4 up.

ELEVENTH HOLE, 318 YARDS, PAR 4.

Preferring accuracy to distance, Jones was driving with a spoon. The tee shots at the eleventh were not far apart, but Homans was in front again. Bob played for the middle of the green and was 25 feet from the pin. Homans pitched within eight feet. Jones rolled the long putt for a birdie 3. Homans just missed his putt and took a par 4. Jones 5 up.

TWELFTH HOLE, 415 YARDS, PAR 4.

Jones had the longer ball at the twelfth, but was not in the best position to approach the elevated green. Homans hit a low, rakish shot to the green. Jones pitched high and the balls were about equal distance from the cup, about 25 feet. Bob pitched close and Gene just missed. It was a half in par 4. Jones 5 up.

THIRTEENTH HOLE, 125 YDS., PAR 3.

Both tee shots on the short thirteenth were on the edge of the green on the side of which the cup was placed. Homans putted from 12 feet, two feet past the cup. From 10 feet Jones just missed. They holed par 3's. Jones 5 up.

FOURTEENTH HOLE, 412 YARDS, PAR 4.

The drives again at the fourteenth were close together with Gene away. Homans hit a spoon second shot to the left of the green. Bob was on with a number three iron, 15 feet from the cup and putted to the lip. Homans was seven feet short in three and barely missed his 4, taking 5. Jones took par 4 and went 6 up.

FIFTEENTH HOLE, 370 YARDS, PAR 4.

Jones was away from the tee at the fifteenth, but was six feet from the pin. Gene's second caught the side of a trap and rolled to the sand. Gene came out and missed his putt for a 4, conceding the hole. Jones knocked his putt for the birdie 3 in with one hand. Jones 7 up.

SIXTEENTH HOLE, 435 YARDS, PAR 4.

Again at the sixteenth, the "quarry hole," there was no appreciable advantage in the drives. Homans sent a high iron over the cavern to the green. Jones with a No. 4 iron was well inside from 50 feet. Gene putted four feet short. Jones putt lipped the cup. Homans missed and took 5 to par 4 for Jones. Jones 8 up.

SEVENTEENTH HOLE, 215 YARDS, PAR 3.

Jones tee shot at the seventeenth carried to thick rough at the left. Homans drove within seven feet of the cup. Jones approached to within eight feet and missed the putt, taking 4 to a birdie 2 for Homans. Jones 7 up.

EIGHTEENTH HOLE, 412 YARDS, PAR 4.

Both drove to rough at the left at the home hole. Jones was slightly in front. Homans was over the green with a long iron. Jones pitched 18 feet from the pin. Gene's third was too strong and he was still away. He holed the 20-foot putt for the par 4. Jones just missed and it was a half in par 4s. Jones 7 up. The in cards:

Jones in ........ 4 3 4 3 4 3 4 4 4—33—72
Homans in ........ [illegible]—37—79

AFTERNOON ROUND

NINETEENTH HOLE, 500 YARDS, PAR 4.

Jones again drove with a spoon and was a few yards behind Homans' tee shot, which reached a shallow trap. Bob was just out of the green with his second, while Homans was on. Jones ran up dead and Homans putted close. It was a half in par 4. Jones 7 up.

TWENTIETH HOLE, 523 YARDS, PAR 5.

Gene's tee shot was in an adjoining fairway at the long twentieth. Bob was in the rough. Both were short in two, but Jones put his third 10 feet from the pin. Homans' third went over and he putted short. Jones missed and the hole was halved in par 5. Jones 7 up.

TWENTY-FIRST HOLE, 195 YARDS, PAR 3.

Neither reached the short twenty-first from the tee. Jones almost holed out from a trap. Homans was on the edge of the green. Gene slipped two feet past the cup on his first effort and left himself a partial stymie. He missed the putt and took 4 to 3 for Jones. Jones going 8 up.

TWENTY-SECOND HOLE, 551 YARDS, PAR 5.

Homans was trapped from the tee at the long twenty-second and Jones was in the rough. Homans was short of the green in 3 and on in 4, 40 feet from the pin. Jones pitched 12 feet from the cup in 3. Homans was down in 6. Jones holed his par 5 and went 9 up.

TWENTY-THIRD, 435 YARDS, PAR 4.

The drives at the twenty-third were not far apart. Jones was in front 12 yards. Each second shot found a resting place on the green. Jones 30 feet from the cup, Homans 35. Jones putted four feet. It was a half in par 4. Jones 9 up.

TWENTY-FOURTH HOLE, 447 YARDS, PAR 4.

The drives were close together, 230 and 250 yards down the fairway at the twenty-fourth. Homans used a spoon to get home in two. Jones took a No. 3 iron. They were both home with Jones well inside. Homans putted close from 30 feet, so did Jones. They halved in par 4s. Jones 9 up.

TWENTY-FIFTH HOLE, 355 YARDS, PAR 4.

Homans was in the fairway while Jones drove to rough at the twenty-fifth. Their seconds rolled past the pin and each had good putts left for their pars. They missed and halved in 5s. Jones 9 up.

TWENTY-SIXTH HOLE, 350 YARDS, PAR 4.

Bob nearly drove the green and chipped to 10 feet of the cup. Homans was too strong with his approach, but just missed sinking a 15 footer. It was a half in fours. Jones 9 up.

TWENTY-SEVENTH HOLE, 170 YARDS, PAR 3.

Jones missed the green with his tee shot at the twenty-seventh and went into a trap. Homans was 10 feet from the cup. Jones was 15 feet short in 2 and was down in 4, conceding Homans his putt and the hole. Jones 8 up. The cards:

Homans—
Out ........ [illegible]
Jones—

TWENTY-EIGHTH, 352 YARDS, PAR 4.

Jones drove a very long ball at the twenty-eighth, but in rough. Homans was on the fairway, 30 yards behind. Gene put his second in a trap to the left. Jones' second found the same trap. Bob failed to get out on his third and took 4 to reach the green, 15 feet from the pin. Gene went over the green to a trap on the other side in four. They were about the same distance from the cup. It was a half in 6s and Jones was dormie 8.

TWENTY-NINTH, 350 YARDS, PAR 4.

The drives were long at the twenty-ninth, Homans on the right of the fairway and Jones on the left. Homans pitched on past the cup. Jones was short in two and each took two putts for a half in par 4, Jones winning 8 up and 7 to play. The cards:

Homans in ........ [illegible]
Jones in ........ [illegible]

Jones wins, 8 and 7.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—The youthful Charley Wood pitched the Pirates to a victory over the new champions of the National League as the Buccos and Cardinals staged their penultimate battle of the season this afternoon. The score was 11 to 8.

The fielding of both clubs was very loose throughout the battle, a stiff wind giving many batters hits they did not deserve. But Gus Suhr connected for a three-run homer in the first round that did not have much taint. Gus drove the ball over the right-field stands with two of his mates on the sacks. The round yielded five tallies for the Buccos and it gave them a big jump which was just about the right incentive for the triumph.

KAUFMANN IS VICTIM

Opposed to Wood for the greater portion of the battle was Tony Kaufmann, former Cub hurler, who spent most of the summer on the Cardinals' farm in Houston. Herman Bell finished up for the Redbirds.

Wood gave the Cardinal hitters much to think about, many of the hits accredited them being of the fluky order. And quite a few of the safeties made by the Pirates were of the same type. Augustin (Lefty) Dugas featured the game for the Buccos by banging out two clean doubles and a single. Paul Waner drove out a homer in the seventh inning.

Lefty Dugas started the game with a pretty double to right and P. Waner and Grantham walked to fill the sacks. Traynor's sacrifice fly scored Dugas and P. Waner went to third on the drive. Comorosky's little hit to center scored P. Waner, Grantham taking second. Suhr then connected for his homer that scored three runs. Douthit opened for the home team with an infield hit and Adams singled to right. High forced Adams. When Wood made a wild pitch, High scored. Wilson started the second with a walk and he moved upon Gelbert's infield hit. Kaufmann fanned and Douthit was thrown out. Adams made an infield hit to score Wilson.

HOW THEY SCORED

Traynor started the third with a scratch triple to left center and he scored on an infield out. Traynor made an infield hit in the fifth with two out and Comorosky doubled to left to score him.

Douthit opened the home half of the fifth with a walk. He was forced by Adams, but High singled, sending Sparky to second. Bottomley fanned, but Hafey and Blades came through with doubles that gave the Cards three runs.

The Cardinals added one in the sixth on a walk to Gelbert, a single by Kaufmann and a sacrifice fly by Douthit. P. Waner's homer in the seventh gave the Pirates a run.

Bool singled to start the eighth. Wood also singled, Bool taking third. Wood went to second on the throw to third. Dugas fanned, but P. Waner reached base on Gelbert's fumble. Bool scored and Wood went to third. Walks to Traynor and Comorosky forced in Wood.

Bell started the home half with a walk and Watkins doubled. Dugas fumbled the two-sacker and the head man scored. Watkins went to third and he scored on an infield out.

Al Bool tripled with one out in the ninth and with two out Lefty Dugas made his third hit of the game to drive in Farmer Al with the last run of the game.

Dukes' Freshies Beat Bellefonte

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Sept. 27.—The Bellefonte Academy football team bowed to the Duquesne University Freshmen here this afternoon, 7 to 0.

HIGHLIGHTS OF PITT'S OPENING VICTORY

LONG GAIN—Capt. Eddie Baker, of the Pitt team, makes the longest gain on a forward pass, 32 yards, in the opening game with Waynesburg at the Stadium yesterday.

GROVERS ROLL UP 90-0 SCORE

GROVE CITY, Pa., Sept. 27.—Grove City College opened its 1930 football season in a most auspicious manner here today, scoring a 90-0 victory over Morris-Harvey, of Barboursville, W. Va.

The score is one of the largest rolled up by Crimson teams in 50 years of college football. For the Crimson the entire backfield shared in the diversified running attack with Baylor the heavy scorer with four touchdowns. Three of them were made in the final quarter.

With Milton throwing and Rupe receiving the West Virginians negotiated their only two first downs. The outstanding individual for the visitors was Zalaso. Over half the tackles in the first half were made by the diminutive quarter. Coach Charles Berry kept changing the combinations each quarter, trying out his entire squad during the progress of play.

As might be expected from the top-heavy score the game was listless and failed to thrill. The Crimson showed nothing except a running attack. The lineup:

| Grove City—90 | | Morris-Harvey—0 |
|---|---|---|
| Gregory | L. E. | Rupe |
| Fuil | L. T. | Wood |
| Cannon | L. G. | Flagg |
| Carnahan | C. | Lindsey |

| Grove City | 26 | 13 | 19 | 32 | —90 |

Substitutions: Grove City, Barbe for Carnahan, Rosequist for Brown, Thomas for Alexander, Baylor for Schupe, Reeves for Shiring, Koma for Thomas, Mason for Punch, Bartlebaugh for Kammer, Critchfield for Sofish, Briggs for Gregory, Foster for Bartlebaugh, Pierce for Fuil, Ray for Cannon, Thompson for Reeves. Morris-Harvey, Snyder for Lewis, Mason for Duffield, Pollock for Jackson, Easton for Lindsey. Touchdowns: Schupe 3, Kammer 3, Barbe, Alexander 2, Baylor 4, Punch. Goals from touchdown—Grove City 6 out of 14. Officials: Cavanaugh, referee; Holmes, umpire; [illegible], head linesman.

Berlinger Wins Title

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Barney Berlinger, former University of Pennsylvania athlete, won the national A. A. U. Pentathlon championship with a point score of 3462.21 today. He succeeded to the title held by Harold Osborn, of the Illinois A. C., who did not defend his championship.

Earlier in the day, John Lewis, of Detroit City College, had been timed in new world's record time of 30 1-5 seconds for the 300-yard run, but later the course was remeasured and found to be 10 yards short of 300 yards. The listed world's record for the distance of 30 6-10 seconds was first set in 1896 by J. B. Wefers and equaled in 1926 by Butler of England.

M'DONALD BEATEN

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 27.—Brookfield O. High, playing its second game in as many days, defeated McDonald, 25 to 6, here this afternoon. The lineup:

| Brookfield—25 | | McDonald—6 |
|---|---|---|
| Ledhetter | R. E. | Delon |
| Harada | R. T. | Wilson |
| Follmer | R. G. | Banner |

LOGAN TOPS BECKLEY

LOGAN, W. Va., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Logan forged ahead again today in the Tri-State Baseball League pennant play-off by defeating Beckley, 3 to 2. Each team had previously won two games. Only two games of the seven-game series remain, one tomorrow at Beckley and the other next week at a place yet to be designated.

Titans Top Edinboro

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Sept. 27.—Westminster started poorly but finished strong in the opening game with Edinboro State Teachers College here today and managed to win out by a 19-12 score.

With five freshmen in the starting lineup, Dike Beede's outfit were surprised a few minutes after the start of the game, when Duff, Edinboro tackle, blocked Michael's punt near the Titan goal line and fell on the ball for a touchdown.

The Titans did not rally until the second quarter when two touchdowns were made. Meider, Pittsburgh boy playing end for Westminster, took the ball over for a marker after the Titans had marched down the field. A few minutes later, Shaffer, freshman half, smashed through for another touchdown. Shaffer kicked the extra point. In the third period, Westminster again opened up a drive down the field and then Michaels passed over the goal line to Shaffer who took the ball out of the hands of two Edinboro players. Michaels missed the extra point. The Titans out played the teachers' 21 first downs to five. The lineup:

COUGARS TRIUMPH

Tech Beats Buffalo, 75-2

the game from the bench was the outstanding performer of the afternoon. The stocky Mars lad chased across the goal line four times with touchdowns, turning in brilliant runs of 34, 39 and 45 yards, in addition to a flock of lesser trapses that were very important to the Tartan punch. The opposition he had to run against was far from rugged. The score indicates that, but Dutch's work in the open field, when he twisted and dodged, reversing his field and simply outrunning the Buffalo secondary defense men, was of high order.

After a safe lead had been established, Coach Waddell and Advisory Coach Steffen jerked their varsity players from the action and used all sorts of combinations. Tech did not try to run up a score, but so tepid and poorly drilled was the opposition that the boys had to work as hard trying to keep from scoring as they usually do to score.

Two scores went over in the first period, Ted Rosenzweig tallying the first and Joe Morbito the second. Tech began the action with the two sophomores halfback flashes in the lineup, Kavel and Graveno, and both played up to snuff.

The parade began in deadly earnest in the second quarter with Eyth showing the way. Dutch scored first, Kavel following him over and then Dutch romped home twice in rapid succession. His first score resulted from a 24-yard sprint after the Skibo juggernaut had marched 64 yards dwon the field. His second came from a fine spin of 34 and his third from a cruise of 39.

MORBITO SHOWS CLASS

Joe Morbito, who seems to have supplanted John Karcis as the Tartan fullback, took over the scoring duties after the half and twice punctured the goal line in the third period. A 33-yard forward pass hurled by Goldberg and caught by little Marvin Potts put the ball in position on the two-yard line for Joe to score the second time.

Kavel hung his second touchdown on the board to start the final period after Duncanis had caught a Bull fumble in the air and returned it 26 yards and Eyth had sprinted 20 yards more on a slant off tackle. Eyth broke away for a 32-yard scamper after Buffalo had relinquished the ball via a punt, being downed on the two-yard line, from where Karcis, in at fullback for Morbito, bruised the well battered Bull's line for a score.

The final marker was handled by Eyth, who closed his afternoon's toil with a twisting, turning, spinning dash of 45 yards. He received a tremendous ovation when he left the field.

Capt. John Dreshar, who played every minute of the game at one position or the other, kicked nine placement goals out of 11 tries for extra points.

Buffalo's score came in the third period when Jones, subbing at center for Ducanis, passed the ball far over Quarterback Goldberg's head. Goldberg was tackled behind his goal line and Buffalo salvaged two points out of the wreckage.

The game was attended by some 7,500 fans. A parade of students and alumni preceded the contest. The affair attended by gray and lowering skies and strong wind from off the lake drew many civic and university celebrities but was far from a success either as a spectacle or in the matter of financial return. It was to have inaugurated big time football in Buffalo, but it's pretty hard to cheer over a 75-to-2 trimming.

Buffalo, for all its presented starting eleven composed entirely of letterman, lacked the experience necessary to cope with a major team of the ability of the powerful Tartans. The Bulls were weak on tackling in the open field and their line provided little or no protection for the backs.

NORWIN ON TOP

IRWIN, Pa., Sept. 27.—The Blue and Gold [illegible] of Norwin High scored their second win of the season, defeating Sewickley Township, 15 to 0. The lineup:

WILSON HITS TWO HOMERS AS CUBS WIN

Hack Boosts Season's Circuit Swat Total to 56 in Bruins' 13-8 Victory.

Giants Down Phils, 5 to 3, And Hold Third Place; Robins, Braves Divide.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Five home runs featured the Cubs' 13-to-8 triumph over the Reds here today.

Hack Wilson hit home runs 55 and 56 to offset the two four-baggers hit by Babe Ruth this afternoon. Gabby Hartnett also connected for two homers, and to put the finishing touch on the contest, Pitcher Pat Malone drove the ball over the rightfield bleachers in the seventh inning.

Wilson's clouts put him seven ahead of Ruth and raised his all-time record for runs batted in to 188. One man was on base each time Wilson connected for the circuit.

Kolp and Rixey were touched for 17 hits during the game. The Reds boasted a slight lead at the start of the contest, but when Malone tightened up and the Cubs started hitting it was just a matter of time.

Malone was nicked for 11 hits. The score:

GIANTS TOP BRAVES

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Carl Hubbell and Fred Lindstrom got together today to give the Giants a 5-to-3 victory over Philadelphia and to enable them to hold third place safe from Brooklyn. The victory put the Giants a full game ahead of the Robins, who broke even with the Boston Braves, and assured them of nothing worse than a tie for the place.

Hubbell held the Phils to eight hits while Lindstrom hit a home run with two on base in the third inning to decide the game. He also hit a single and a double to lead the Giants' 14-hit attack against three pitchers.

Bill Terry, by making a single which drove in Lindstrom in the fifth, tied the National League record of 254 hits made in a season. Frank O'Doul, of the Phillies, set the mark last year. Terry has one more game in which to break the record. The score:

Record of A's Shows Series Chance for National

JAMES J. LONG Sport Comment

OLD LOOP'S OUTLOOK BEST SINCE 1926

ONE item that appears to indicate a chance of success for the National League in the world series starting in Philadelphia next Wednesday is the fact that the American League pennant winners have not measured up to that loop's championship standards of recent years.

That the Athletics are the best club in their circuit, or that they won the flag again on their merits, is not to be disputed. But that they are as good as they were last season, or as good as the Yanks of 1927 or 1928 is open to question.

OF COURSE THERE can be no doubt of the strength of a club that has won more than 100 ball games in a season. That feat can't be accomplished in any kind of company unless the team is rich in playing class and everything else that goes to make up a champion.

SEEIN' AS TH' A'S VICTORIES WERE OVER SECOND DIVISION CLUBS Y' LOOK LIKE I WIN TH' SERIES
NOW Y' SAID SOMETHIN'

But when you look over the records and see where the Mackmen won an unusually large majority of their victories, a question presents itself as to whether the American League will go into the big series as strong as it was in any of the last three years.

FOR A GLANCE at the season's doings discloses that the A's profited to a far greater extent than is usually the case against the weak clubs of their organization, that is the outfits that are winding up the campaign in the second division.

Naturally, any pennant winner makes the greater part of its gains in competition with the weak sisters, but as a general rule it also shows some degree of superiority over the other clubs as well.

THE ATHLETICS WON no fewer than 65 of their season's victories over the Detroit, St. Louis, Chicago and Boston clubs of the second division, while losing only 23 to the same teams. That would be only additional evidence of their class if they had been correspondingly successful against the strong clubs, but they were not. They won 15 out of 22 from Cleveland, but against the second-place and third-place clubs they have not looked so mighty as other recent pennant winners in the junior circuit.

LAST YEAR THE White Elephants won the season's series from every other club in the league. So did the Yankees in 1927 and 1928 and by decisive margins. This year, however, the A's have not looked overly impressive against Washington or New York. At one stretch Washington defeated them seven times in succession.

BOY! THEY GAVE ME A LOT O' TROUBLE
A'S

In every set of games with the Yankees they have had a tough time holding their own, while their records against the Senators shows that they'll have to beat Walter Johnson's men in the closing contest today to get an even break in the season's series. There have been several stages at which they didn't look so hot.

IT ALL GOES to indicate that Philadelphia is by no means a wonder club when up against strong opposition, the kind it naturally will encounter when it meets another club that was good enough to win a pennant in a different major league.

Inasmuch as they did not show any superiority in hand-to-hand competition with the teams ranking second and third in their own circuit, the A's can't be said to have any edge in the title series, and from all angles the National looks to have an even chance to win, its best since 1926, in fact.

AND THAT PROSPECT looms even though the close finish in the National's pennant race may again have the effect of sending a tired and worn club into the post-season debate. Similar hot finishes that took a heavy toll out of the winning club had much to do with the older league's poor showing in the last three series, in which it won only a single game out of 13 played. There is no such difference in strength between the two leagues as those absurdly one-sided figures would appear to indicate and the 1930 test may prove it.

AT LEAST, THIS year's series is reasonably certain to be more extended than the last three. The odds are all against the reaching of a decision in four or five games as has been the case for three seasons. The chances of the contenders look to be so even that it will not be surprising if the fight goes the limit of seven games—six at any rate.

That's another angle from which the National's prospects look better than usual, as the senior body has been the more fortunate, as a rule, in the long struggles. In eight instances of the world series being carried to seven or more games, the National has won five times against three for the American. And of the last five series that went that length, the National took all but one.

IF IT'S A LONG SERIES — I THINK TH' NATIONAL'S LOOK GOOD

THE A'S HAVE been defeated only twice in six world series, but when they did lose they lost just as decisively as they won on the other occasions. In 1914 the Braves took them for four games in a row, and in the four games out of five which they lost to the Giants in 1905 they did not even score.

The 1905 series has never been approached for remarkable pitching. Every one of the five games was a shutout, Christy Mathewson pitching three and Joe McGinnity one for the Giants, while Chief Bender blanked the McGrawites in the only game won by the Mackmen. In the three shutouts pitched by Mathewson the A's got only 14 hits all told, and only one runner reached third base.

THE LAUNCHING OF Pittsburgh's new football season is now complete, all three of the local college teams having seen action, though Carnegie Tech will not appear on the home field until next Saturday. Comes now a peculiar schedule twist that has never been duplicated here. Following their start yesterday with Waynesburg, the Pitt gridders will not play here again for four weeks. They are booked for Morgantown next Saturday, for Cleveland on October 11 and for Syracuse on October 18, the longest stretch away from home in their history. The second capacity crowd on record at The Stadium will greet them when they make their next local appearance, as that will be the occasion of the Notre Dame classic on October 25.

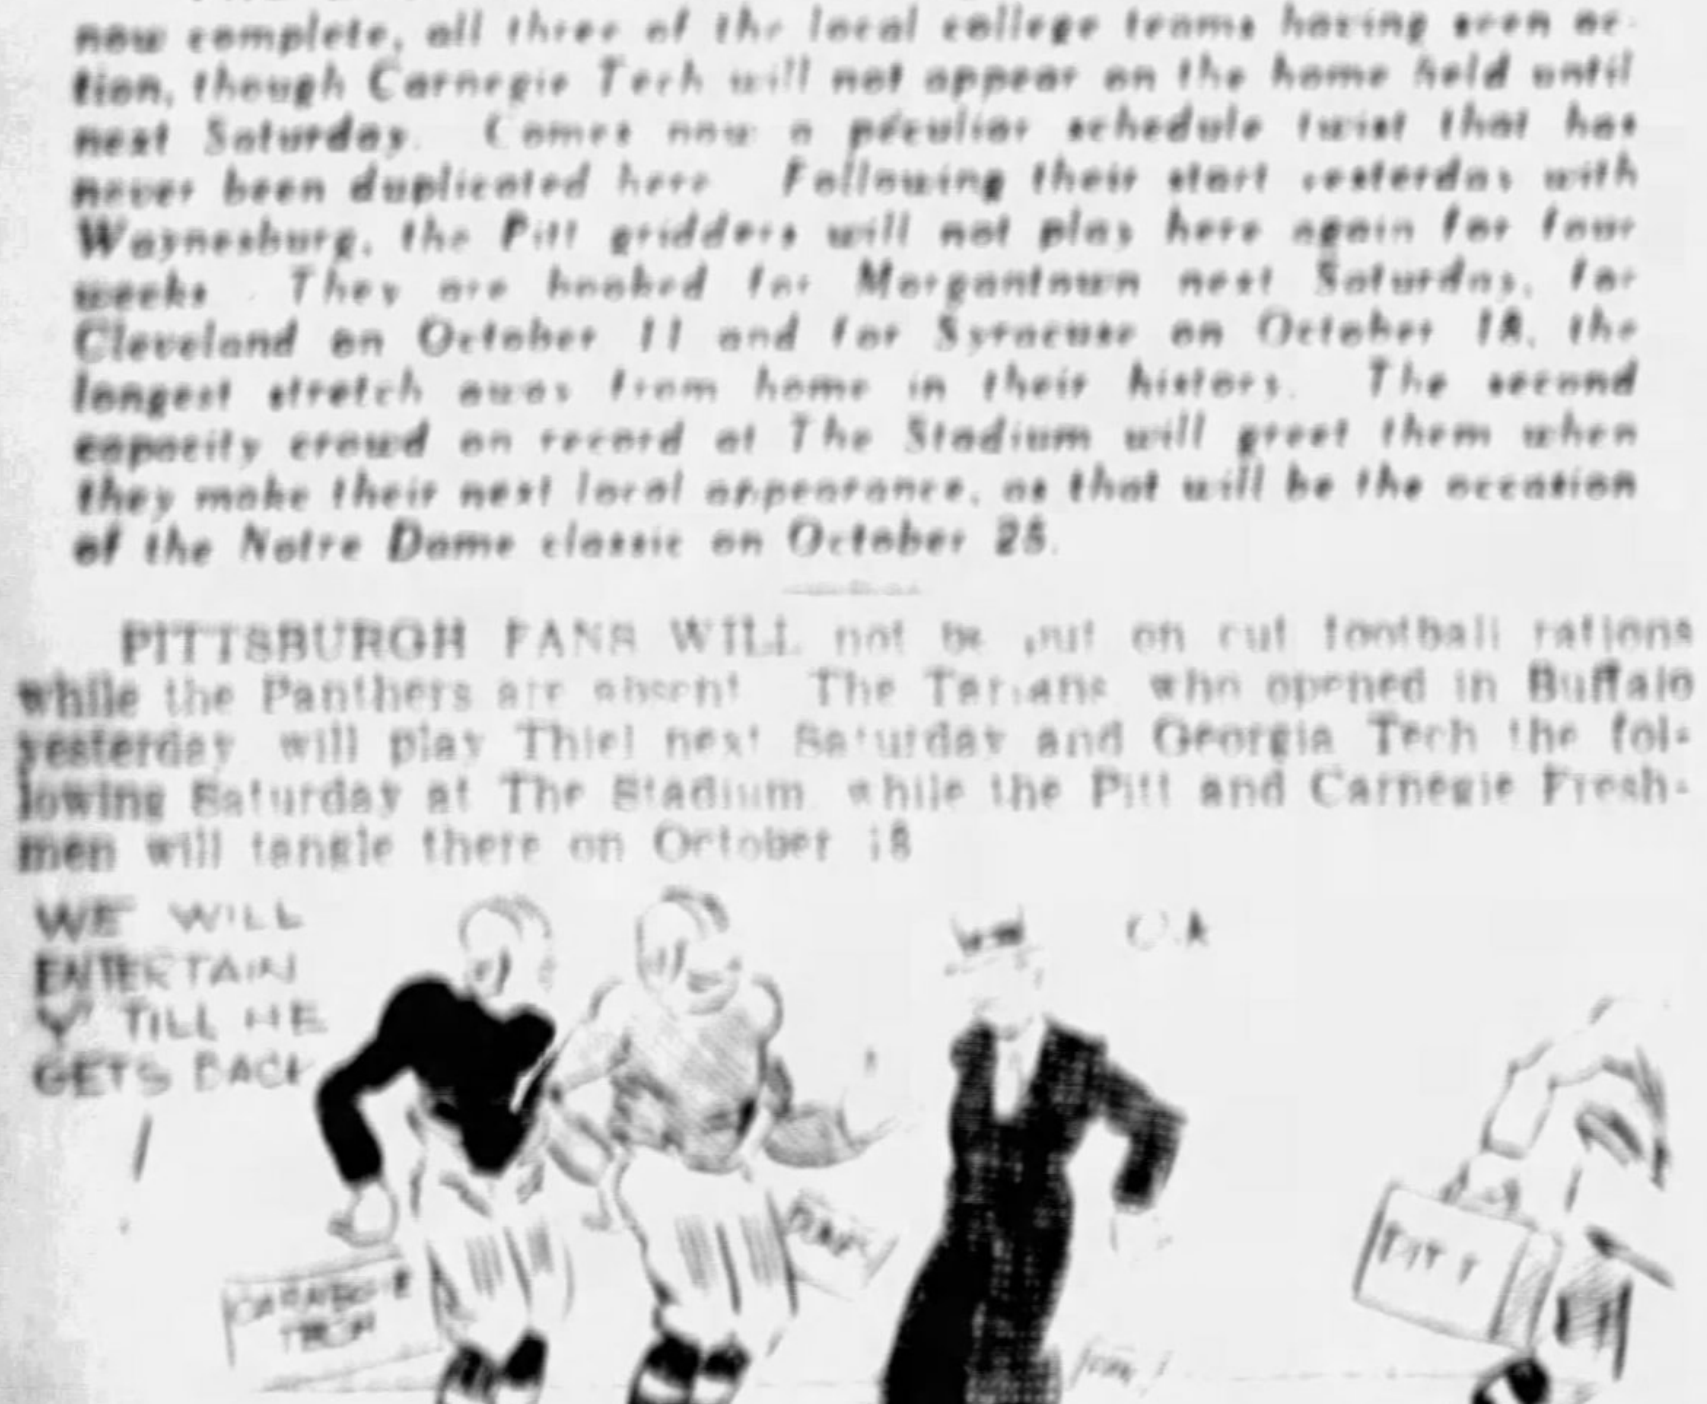
PITTSBURGH FANS WILL not be put on cut football rations while the Panthers are absent. The Tartans, who opened in Buffalo yesterday, will play Thiel next Saturday and Georgia Tech the following Saturday at The Stadium, while the Pitt and Carnegie Freshmen will tangle there on October 18.



WE WILL ENTERTAIN 'Y' TILL HE GETS BACK
O.K.
CARNEGIE TECH
DUKES
PITT

And next Friday night the Dukes will grapple with Detroit Tech at Forbes Field, following with another night game there against Howard College, of Birmingham, on October 17. From then right on to the finish there will be a steady run of features giving Pittsburgh a pigskin program second to none.

YANKS DEFEAT A'S; RUTH HITS TWO HOMERS

Mackmen's Rally in Ninth Falls Short; Indians' Rookies Beat Browns, 9-7.

White Sox and Tigers Divide Double Bill; Nats Win Final With Red Sox.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27. (AP.) A four-run rally in the ninth inning today failed to overcome the effects of Babe Ruth's forty-eighth and forty-ninth home runs of the season and the New York Yankees defeated the champion Athletics in their final clash of the year by a 10-to-8 score.

Ruth clouted his first homer of the game off George Earnshaw in the third inning with the bases empty, then repeated the feat in the next inning with loaded sacks. Ben Chapman made four of the Yank's 13 hits while Lou Gehrig gained some ground in his race with Al Simmons for the batting lead by hitting twice in three times at bat. Simmons made one hit in three tries.

Roy Sherid pitched effectively for the Yanks until the last inning when Philadelphia smashed over four runs on five safe hits and drove him to the showers. Pipgras retired the last two men. The score:

TIGERS, CHISOX DIVIDE

DETROIT, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Chicago and the Tigers split a doubleheader here today, Detroit coming from behind in the first to win a 6-to-5 victory and losing the second, 10 to 5, behind Mark Koenig, erstwhile shortstop who is attempting to graduate to the mound.

The White Sox had accumulated 10 hits and 10 runs off Koenig when he replaced McManus at third in the seventh, giving way to Tom Bridges on the mound. Funk hit a homer for the Tigers in the fourth inning of the second game, scoring McManus ahead of him. The Tigers trailed the Sox through most of the second game, then came back to win with a two-run rally in the seventh, followed by a three-run attack in the eighth. Reynolds hit a homer for the Sox with Ryan on base in the first inning. The score:

INDIANS DOWN BROWNS

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Playing their rookies, Cleveland defeated St. Louis in the opener o' the three-game series here today, 9 to 7.

Leslie Barnhart, recently of the New Orleans Pelicans, pitched until nearly the end of the ninth when Clint Brown relieved him. Joe Vosmik, former Cleveland sandlot star, and Ralph Weingarner, another rookie, each got two hits which went for runs.

CONNIE MACK On Baseball

HAS CONFIDENCE IN HIS RESERVES

By CONNIE MACK, Manager, Philadelphia Athletics.

A manager out in front even by a fair margin always feels he can lose the pennant until he clinches it. That's the way I felt during the season of 1930 with the Athletics.

Connie Mack

From long experience in baseball, I know how ruin can quickly claim the leader. One adverse week can put the players of the team in front in a panic and before the manager can get these players back in their stride they have tumbled out of first place.

When the leading team gets into a slump, it also revives the spirit of the contenders and they will play better ball and win while the leading team is losing.

Even late in the season a team out in front by six games or so is not yet out of the woods. It may lose five straight while the contender is winning and then two teams are almost neck-and-neck and anything can happen during the remainder of the race.

NO LEAD SAFE

While I had every confidence in my team being able to maintain a fair lead, yet when our advantage was cut from eight and a half to five and a half games late in August, I was a bit worried.

Washington was winning every day and I saw that one bad week would make the race close and we would have to fight our best down to the wire if we were to win.

I didn't want to have our players feel any great tension on the last Western trip, if I could avoid it, and I urged them to play their hardest and keep Washington at bay.

The players realized that one losing week might be a calamity and they responded nobly.

"We will pay no attention to the Washington scores," they chorused, "and will win our own game every day."

Somebody asked what qualifications players must show to represent their leagues in a world series. I believe I can find a few answers.

That winning team must have stout-hearted pitchers and players who are better than the average in batting skill and fielding ability. With all this they must have the confidence and courage of a winner.

A real ball team never falls apart in the last month of the race as more than one did in the National League this year.

The real champions will stand out in the important series in the closing weeks of the race. The more important the game the sounder they will play.

While Grove and Earnshaw top our staff in victories, I have other pitchers who I feel will be dark horses, as Ehmke was last year. I will mention no names at this time, but I predict that I will produce plenty of good pitching in the coming games to go along with Grove and Earnshaw.

Leaving pitchers for the minute, I want to point out some other reasons why we won our second straight championship.

BEST CATCHER IN GAME

It must not be overlooked that we had the best catcher in the majors and one of the best in all baseball history in Mickey Cochrane.

Not only was his receiving excellent, but his batting and baserunning made him stand out. When you can put a catcher in the third spot in the batting order and know that he will hit the ball and run bases like a leading outfielder, a club is indeed fortunate in having the services of such a wonder.

Al Simmons was another outstanding figure on the team. He always was there with the punch in a critical time and he won us many games both at home and abroad by a timely home run. I never heard a pitcher yet who claimed he had Al's number.

While Jimmy Foxx did not have quite as good a season as in 1929 he was still there with the wallop and was always dangerous at the plate. He made the longest homers of his career this year just to prove he could still hit.

Both Haas and Miller played sterling ball in the outfield and Jim Moore helped us out when Haas was hurt.

Bishop at second, Boley at short and Dyes at third completed a steady and satisfactory infield. When any of these were hurt we had hustling rookies, Williams, McNair and Higgins to rush in.

MANY BOXING SHOWS BILLED

Boxing shows will be staged this week at the Moose Temple on Friday night, Hickey Park, Millvale, and the Palisades Roller Rink, McKeesport, on Thursday and Kittanning on Wednesday. The Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. will hold its final outdoor amateur show on Tuesday.

Marty Gold, of Philadelphia, and Frankie (Kid) Anslem, of New York, will box the 10-round main bout at the Moose Temple. Hickey Park is working on a Tom Malco-Vincent Hambright return windup, and Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, is planning on a double windup offering, with either Eddie Brannon or Young Rudy in one 10-rounder and Jimmy Belmont meeting Johnny Popicz, of Wheeling, in the other. Hans Roberts and Freddie Boylstein box at Kittanning in a show postponed from last Wednesday night.

Between Rounds

New York's Madison Square Garden opens next Friday night with Ray Miller and Justo Suarez, the South American lightweight champion, meeting in the main bout.

Cecil Payne has been suspended by the N. B. A. for running out on a fight with Midget Mike O'Dowd at Louisville last Monday night.

Following is the card for the final outdoor amateur show of the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., on the North Side, Tuesday night: Sparky Ewalt vs. Joe Grove, [illegible] vs. [illegible], George Schley vs. Eddie Roberts, Pat Powers vs. Mike [illegible], Johnny Birch vs. George Brucho, [illegible] vs. Gene Judge and Mike Sankey vs. Young Trew.

Calling off of the Jack Sharkey-Vittorio Campolo bout in New York was not surprising. The fans never warmed up to the match, and the Madison Square Garden Corporation could not go through with the financial obligations it entailed, consisting mainly of a $100,000 guarantee to Sharkey. However, it spoiled chance for a Sharkey-Primo Carnera meeting in Chicago, which the Garden killed by matching the gob with the inexperienced Campolo.

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro welterweight, will be laid up again for a spell by his injured hand. An operation was performed yesterday to speed its recovery.

Jimmy Conrad has matched Johnny Dunn, his New Kensington featherweight, for two battles, one with Tony Leone at Dover, O., Tuesday night and the other with Midget Mike O'Dowd at Wheeling, W. Va., October 15. HARRY KECK.

East Pittsburgh, Pitcairn in Tie

FANS ACCLAIM LEAGUE CHAMPS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—St. Louis hailed its conquering heroes today—the Cardinals—1930 champions of the National League.

Pennant winners again for the third time in five years, the Red Birds who yesterday won the last game necessary to clinch the flag by beating Pittsburgh's Pirates, 10 to 5, paraded through the downtown district in automobiles to receive the homage and noisy acclaim of St. Louis.

Led by the old sergeant, Gabby Street, their manager, the Cards rode through jammed streets among the canyons of skyscrapers, from which floated the usual storm of confetti, ticker tape, torn paper and paper streamers. Thousands of persons jammed the thoroughfares.

Starting from Sportsman Park shortly before noon, the Red Birds paraded on downtown in open automobiles, led by two bands, the Knothole Gang Drum Corps, a color guard and mounted police.

The Cardinals, bowing and waving to their admirers, had smiles of confidence on their faces that seemed to say they expected to beat the Athletics in the world series.

Philly Mayor Congratulates St. Louis Chief

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Mayor of Philadelphia today congratulated the Mayor of St. Louis on the winning of the National League pennant by the Cardinals.

Mayor Mackey wired Mayor Miller that the Cardinals "will be welcomed in Philadelphia with our traditional hospitality."

IOWA TRIUMPHS

IOWA CITY, Ia., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The University of Iowa football team, left barren of stars because of Big Ten slush fund charges and ineligibilities, defeated Bradley Tech, 38 to 12, today.

SCHOOL SEASON OPENS FRIDAY

The annual City Interscholastic League gridiron chase will get under way in formal style this week with a quartet of contests on the slate, two being booked for each section of the league.

The defending champions, Schenley, will be idle, but Westinghouse, primed to give the Bellefielders a stiff argument for Section I honors this fall, takes on Fifth Avenue on Schenley's home field. South High, which came to the fore in basketball last winter and is in the process of athletic regeneration, meets Peabody at Westinghouse's gridiron.

In Section II, Taylor Allerdice, admitted to the senior league last year, gets its baptism of fire against South Hills, battling the Section II champions, at Langley High's park. South Hills lost heavily through graduation, but will be a heavy favorite to take the lighter Allderdice eleven.

Carrick and Oliver meet on the North Side, completing the City League card.

W. & J. Lifts Lid With 74-0 Win Over Bethany

BISONS UNABLE TO HALT DRIVE OF PRESIDENTS

Armstrong, Smith, Furzanic And Zagray Lead With Two Touchdowns Each.

Ride's Eleven, Strong Defensively, Rolls Up 31 First Downs to None for Foe.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 27.—Opening its forty-first year of football here this afternoon Wash-Jeff unleashed a whirlwind attack against Bethany College to defeat the West Virginia Bisons by 74 to 0. The measure of comparison between the teams is afforded through a record of first downs, the Presidents getting 31 while their beaten opponents were unable to make a single one.

W. & J. scored 20 points in the first period, made 26 in the second and then garnered 14 more each in the third and fourth. The largest scoring period came when the Red and Black had a team made up almost entirely of substitutes. Bethany had nothing to offer in the way of either offense or defense. Halted dead in its running attack, it could not even accomplish anything through the air and on the defense it was a prey to a vicious attack that brought every man on the Wash-Jeff squad into the fray.

Armstrong, Smith, Furjanic and Zagray led the Ride machine in scoring with two touchdowns each.

Outstanding features, of necessity, were all turned in by W. & J., the two of the greatest glitter being 85-yard runs for touchdowns by Smith and Zagray. Other Washington-Jefferson backs contributed sprints of varying distances and to add interest to the attack the Presidents occasionally turned to the air for good distances while slashes into the line for substantial gains were frequent.

ARMSTRONG SCORES FIRST

Wash-Jeff scored in less than three minutes after the referee's initial whistle. After the kickoff halted at the 28-yard mark, Smith sprinted at the Bethany left side for 22 and Rush got 14 at the other flank. Rush was hurt and replaced by Armstrong who made the first touchdown when he ran from the 17-yard line.

W. & J. recovering a Bethany fumble on its 45-yard line rushed on a series of plays to the 10-yard line, from where Armstrong again scored on a triple pass.

The third touchdown came following a 16-yard gain by Wilson when Armstrong grabbed a pass for a 24-yard sprint and Smith shot through the line for the score. The first period ended with W. & J. holding the ball on the Bethany 10-yard marker. Furjanic made the touchdown on the second play of the second period on a sweeping lunge at the Bethany left end.

A forward pass of 23 yards and a 22-yard dash by Furjanic which carried him over the goal line accounted for the next touchdown. Again the Presidents went to the air with a 16-yard gain which carried them to the 15-yard line. Zagray went the remaining distance in two plays. The final touchdown of the first half provided the most spectacular play of the game, Rometo picking Vorassi's fumble out of the air and racing 17 yards for the score.

SMITH RUNS 85 YARDS

On the first play of the third period after downing the kickoff on their 15-yard line, the Presidents sent Smith scampering 85 yards around the Bethany right end for another touchdown. Wash-Jeff shortly downed a punt on the Bethany 39-yard line. Two plunges carried it to the 25-yard marker from which point Wilson cantered through the line for a tally.

As the third period ended the Presidents had the ball on the Bison 15-yard line and fourth down. On the first play of the fourth canto Umberger went through the Bethany left side, cut back and went the distance.

The final score came through a spectacular sprint by Zagray, substitute back. W. & J. had the ball on a punt on its 15-yard line. Zagray swung at the Bison left end, dodged numerous tacklers and went 85 yards and over the goal line. Eleven touchdowns and eight placement goals following touchdowns comprised the Presidential scoring. The lineup:

| W. & J.—74 |  | Bethany—0 |
|---|---|---|
| McNeil | L. E. | Dodrill |
| Levine | L. T. | Deppe |
| Cochrane | L. G. | McGowan |

Minnesota Swamps South Dakota State

Jones Wins Amateur For Sweep of Titles

man who has knocked the statistics of golf groggy.

In his unprecedented sweep through the British and American tournaments this year, Jones today registered his fifth triumph in the United States amateur and his thirteenth national championship victory within the period of the last eight years. These achievements also stand alone as records. The only man who has ever won so many as four American crowns is Jerome D. Travers and no other man, Briton or American, has piled up so staggering a grand total of victories as Jones.

As he accepted the championship cup, Jones paid tribute to his opponents, to the galleries and to the Merion Club, where in 1916 he first played in the amateur tournament and where, in 1924, he won his first amateur championship. He has now won five of the last seven.

UNDECIDED AS TO FUTURE

Will he continue to play or rest on his laurels? These questions buzzed among spectators as well as the experts, after it was all over. Jones himself furnished the answer, so far as it may be given.

"I expect to continue to play golf, but just when and where, I cannot say now," he told The Associated Press. "I have no definite plans, either to retire or as to when and where I may continue in competition. I might play next year and lay off in 1932. I might stay out of the battle next season and feel like another tournament the following year. That's all I can say about it now."

The significance of Jones' victory furnished much more excitement and interest than the final-round match itself. That Bobby would win was accepted as a foregone conclusion almost from the start of the tournament. He won the medal in the qualifying play with a record-equaling score, 142, and he overwhelmed five successive opponents. His golf was not always Jones golf, in the machine-like perfection it is thought of, but it was much too good for any one else to match.

GENE WINS THREE HOLES

Jones was never "down" to any of his five opponents in match play. Except for perhaps two or three lapses in his putting, he never was far enough "off" his game to cause the slightest concern to his intimate followers or alter the conviction that this was his tournament. Alone of the favorites who entered it, he swept along without the slightest interruption and with few challenges to his supremacy.

Homans, in the first final of his career, offered scant opposition, although his courageous finish extended the match much farther than it seemed possible after Bobby assumed a seven-hole lead in the first 18.

The bespectacled New Jersey youth won exactly three holes out of the 29. Two of these were on "birdies" which he scored at the 215-yard seventeenth and at the 170-yard twenty-seventh. The third was the result of a stymie that Jones failed to negotiate on the seventh hole.

"SAFETY FIRST" GOLF

Jones shot his best golf on the inward nine of the morning round. He covered this nine in 33 strokes, one under par, sinking putts of 25 and 26 feet at the eleventh and fifteenth holes to offset a lapse at the seventeenth. These were the only goodsized putts he holed in the entire match, but from tee to green his play was much superior to that of his opponent. The Georgian covered the first 18 holes in 72, two over par, to Homans' 79. Bobby was four over par for the remaining 11 holes and so was Homans.

The answer was that Jones did not need to put on pressure. He drove frequently with his spoon and he played for the greens, rather than for the pin. "Safety First" golf that was good enough to win, but not spectacular. Throughout, King Bobby gave the impression of just enjoying a good workout, while his opponent beat himself.

The final round cards:

MORNING ROUND

ATLANTANS CELEBRATE

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—An epidemic of "Bobby Jones fever," which has gripped Atlanta all summer, came to a climax today.

Home town friends of the golf champion were almost certain Bobby would win the amateur and increase his season's bag to all four of the world's major golf crowns.

Realizing at the same time the uncertainties of golf, they were beset by a gnawing fear that some last minute "break" would deprive him of a final jewel in the four-starred crown that now rests on his tousled head.

Therefore the news that he had come through with one of the most sweeping victories in the history of the American amateur was the signal for an excited series of private and group celebrations.

In Bobby's home, four persons sat huddled around the radio. To one he was son, to another husband, and to two youngsters, father. Mrs. Jones, Sr., and Bobby's wife and two children, Clara Malone and Robert Tyre, III, probably were more interested in his play than any others.

Many congratulatory messages were sent off to Bobby when news of his victory was received. The first was sent by J. K. Ottley, president of the First National Bank of Atlanta, of which Bobby is a director. It read:

"Your associates on the board of directors of the First National Bank of Atlanta extend heartiest congratulations and join the rest of the world in acclaiming you golfing emperor of all times and all climes."

Atlantans, however, are accustomed to Jones' victories and to triumphant homecomings of the golf conqueror and the acclamation of his latest victory was somewhat less boisterous than in years past.

ROBINS, BRAVES DIVIDE

BROOKLYN, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Robins and the Boston divided a doubleheader today as they opened their final series of the year with a pair of fine pitching performances.

Dazzy Vance fanned 12 of the Braves while pitching Brooklyn to an 8-to-2 victory in the first game while Tom Zachary whiffed nine Robins to capture a 7-to-4 decision in the second. The even break left the Robins a game behind the New York Giants with only one more contest in which to carry on the fight for third place.

Eddie Moore hit a home run for Brooklyn in the first contest and Wally Berger clouted his thirty-eighth homer of the season for the Braves in the second. In defeat the Robins succeeded in scoring only one run on 11 hits off Zachary. The scores:

BUCKNELL WINS FROM GENEVA BY 46-6 SCORE

Hinkle, East's Leading Point-Getter, Stars in Victory Over Covenanters.

Ewing Makes Brilliant 70-Yard Run for Losers' Only Tally of Game.

LEWISBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—A savage Bucknell Bison stampeded to a 46-6 victory over the Geneva College eleven from Beaver Falls today. A running attack, using Hinkle, Brumbaugh, Mezza and Ross, spelled the downfall for the visiting Covenanters.

Geneva got her marker on a 70-yard run by Ewing following an intercepted pass. Clark Hinkle, Eastern scoring champion last season, started his 1930 campaign for honors by scoring Bucknell's first touchdown after three minutes of play.

Hinkle's opening kick-off to the Geneva team found it powerless against the Bison line, and Graham, of the visitors, kicked to Bucknell at midfield where a varied attack composed of off-tackle slices and two completed forward passes, brought the ball in position for Hinkle to score after a 12-yard run.

Hinkle scored a second touchdown, while Ross, a substitute running mate, tied him with two more. Lobel, Williams and Brumbaugh scored Bucknell's other six pointers.

After Hinkle opened with his touchdown, Brumbaugh got loose on an end run and galloped forty yards for the second touchdown of the game.

Both of the first two tries for extra points missed.

In the second quarter Hinkle scored his second touchdown when a Bucknell man recovered Ewing's fumble on Geneva's six-yard line. The Bison ace sliced through center for the necessary yardage. Hinkle also scored the extra point on a line buck.

Eddie Williams, speedy Bucknell second-string end, scored the Bisons' next touchdown when he grabbed a forward pass from Ammerman to score after a 32-yard race.

Mezza booted the extra point.

SUBS SENT IN

By the middle of the second quarter Coach Snavely had a first and second-string mixture on the field, but with the exception of numerous off-side penalties, these lads continued to function in as smooth a manner as the regulars.

Opening the second half, Snavely replaced his line with his first stringers, leaving only a composite backfield.

With this arrangement, Ross managed to score the initial of his two touchdowns by a 30-yard slice off right end. Mezza kicked the extra point.

A varied and puzzling aerial attack was being used by the Bisons, which seemed deceptive to the Geneva lads. Bucknell had no trouble in smearing the plays of the visitors, but Coach Harpster's famous "spinner" play gave the Bisons something to worry about, before it was solved in this quarter.

Andy Lobel slipped through the Geneva first line to snatch a lateral pass from Graham to Ewing and dash 35 yards for the Bisons' sixth touchdown.

Bucknell finished its scoring when Ross slipped away around right end on one of his fast runs to dodge and twist his way 46 yards for a six-pointer. Mezza managed to slip in his third extra point to stop Bucknell scoring at 46.

Bucknell's rushing and end running netted 17 first downs while Geneva managed to grab five, all of which came in the last two quarters, the Bison line holding up well in the first half. With the advent of second and third strings late in the game, the elusive Capt. Knapic, Ewing and Graham were able to slice their way to first downs.

Bucknell was on her aerial game, completing five passes, having four downed and only one intercepted, the lone one that resulted in Geneva's touchdown. Geneva completed two passes, had eight grounded and three intercepted. The lineup:

ST. VINCENT EASY WINNER

LATROBE, Pa., Sept. 27.—St. Vincent College football team opened its home season by showing a complete reversal of form over its showing last week by trouncing the Westinghouse Tech squad to the tune of 57-0. It was just a procession of touchdowns for the Latrobe team, the visitors failing to make any progress against the heavy St. Vincent line.

The Bearcats got off to a slow start, scoring only one touchdown in the first period, but they came back with a vengeance in the second and third quarters, scoring 19 points in each period and they closed the game by pushing over 12 points in the last session. Capt. Evancho and Flauto, the latter a freshman halfback, carried off the major honors, each scoring three touchdowns. Martak, another freshman back, was outstanding with his kicking and did some fine ball toting as well.

The veteran St. Vincent line came up to expectations by holding the visitors to a total of 44 yards gained from scrimmage. St. Vincent in the meantime was piling up a total of 639 yards gained. The lineup:

| St. Vincent |  | West. Tech. |

Nick Altrock Discusses World Series Umpires

By NICK ALTROCK,
Famous Baseball Humorist.

In today's world series expert essay, I will discuss the umpires. A world series game needs four of these guys—one on each of the bags and one behind the plate. This is so base-runners won't have to run half-way across the diamond to kick when they are called out. It is what you call world series service.

Many admirers have asked me what a world series umpire on the bases thinks about. Well, he stands near the base with his arms folded and he is thinking what are the chances of the series being cleaned up in four straight and him lopin' home with his $2,000 fee. That is what an umpire draws for toiling in a world series. They are not overpaid when you consider they have to stand out there under a howling mob of 30,000 or more and concentrate on the pork chops they will have for supper that night. That is quite a feat.

Besides, a world series umpire is under quite a strain, but they are not under such a strain as they would be if this year's series were played in Brooklyn. However, the umpire behind the plate has got to be impartial and call balls and strikes right. This calls for very skillful guesswork when you can't even see the ball.

There are a couple of speed pitchers in this series who will worry the umpires as much as the batters. You take Lefty Grove of the A's. Lefty has a fast ball that even Floyd Gibbons couldn't describe. It would beat Floyd to the catcher's mitt by a couple of syllables.

When Grove's fast one comes up to the plate it looks like an aspirin tablet. The umpire sometimes wishes it were two aspirin tablets, which is an umpire's normal dose for a headache.

But, right or wrong, the umpire has to call it a ball or a strike. No matter how much a batter howls, the ump never changes his decision because that little pocket indicator has no reverse gear. This makes the umpire infallible. When he clicks it with his thumb for a strike, it is a strike no matter if the catcher had to climb up on the batter's shoulders to catch it.

And the umps are going to be just as bad off with Wild Bill Hallahan, of the Cards, as they are with Grove. Bill has one of those fast balls that whistles like a bullet. In fact, I would say the outcome of this series depends on the guesswork of the umpires. However, they ought to be in rare form, as they have been guessing all their lives.

Another reason a world series umpire draws $2,000 for his work is that he cannot mingle with the fans or players. But, personally, after being jostled in world series crowds, I don't see any hardship in that. Last series, in a Philadelphia hotel lobby I got a cauliflower ear listening to why Hornsby couldn't hit.

But being a world series arbiter is no fun. An umpire is the only man in the world who carries a whiskbroom for a flask.

In the next smashing installment, your Uncle Nick will describe six good uses for the 1930 world series tickets of the Cubs and Robins.

FOURTH QUARTER

[illegible]

Shortly after kicking off Pitt recovered a fumbled lateral pass by Waynesburg on the latter's 20 yard line and two plays later [illegible] broke away off tackle for the sixth touchdown. Heller kicked goal.

Score: Pitt 40, Waynesburg 0.

Pitt made more wholesale replacements.

Following Pitt's next kickoff Waynesburg made its only first down of the game on two short forward passes by Poffner for a total of 11 yards carrying the play to the Pitt 47-yard line.

After getting to the 40 Waynesburg had to punt and Pitt took the ball on the 12-yard line and worked it to the 20 and from there was set back to the five for holding. Brown, in at halfback, kicked from behind the goal line to his 43. A long forward pass was dropped by [illegible]. Another was intercepted by Loch, Pitt's fullback, who ran back to the Pitt 34-yard line.

Brown dashed around right end on the most spectacular sprint of the afternoon to run 57 yards to the seventh touchdown. He received fine interference and had to run it out to the finish giving a fine exhibition of dodging and twisting as a final Waynesburg man tried to catch him from behind. Brown failed at goal.

Score: Pitt 46, Waynesburg 0.

Another touchdown followed immediately afterward to rout the visitors. Taking the kickoff Waynesburg punted and Alpert, a sub back, received the kick on the 43-yard line and with the aid of beautiful interference ran the ball back for the eighth touchdown. Brown's try for goal was blocked.

Score: Pitt 52, Waynesburg 0.

Pitt again regained possession of the ball immediately after the next kickoff when Kelly intercepted a pass and ran it back to the 33-yard line. By this time virtually the entire Pitt reserve squad had been cleared off the bench.

The game ended four plays later with [illegible] running seven yards for a first down on the 13-yard line. Final score: Pitt 52, Waynesburg 0.

The touchdown that Eddie Baker, the Pitt captain and quarterback, scored against Waynesburg College at the Stadium yesterday was the first of his college career.

Ordinarily the quarterback on a Pitt team does not carry the ball very often, his main duty being to lead the interference. Yesterday, however, Baker lugged the oval frequently and made a fine job of running with it.

Eddie figured on the receiving end of the longest forward pass play of the game.

Niagara tried forward passes frequently after finding it impossible to dent the State line. The visitors tried 22 passes, completing eight, one of which gave them a touchdown. State also used the air attack liberally, attempting 13 and completing [illegible].

State was penalized 70 yards and Niagara 45.

With the exception of the first quarter the State defense functioned well, aided by some excellent backing up of the line by Lasich, former Clairton High player. ## SANDLOT GRID CIRCUIT OPENS SEASON TODAY

Olympics Pry Off Lid at West View—McChesneytown Plays Firemen.

Majestics and Burns in Night Battle at Parnassus High Field Wednesday.

INDEPENDENT CONFERENCE

McKeesport at West View.

McChesneytown at East Pittsburgh.

INDEPENDENT GAMES

By TOM BIRKS

Today will see the initial games of the Western Pennsylvania Independent Gridiron Conference. After many years of discussion the Conference now is a live working organization with six of the leading clubs of the district enrolled.

There is little doubt that two of the largest crowds in the district will be watching the Olympics of McKeesport do their stuff opposed to West View and the Big Red machine of McChesneytown opposed to East Pittsburgh at the Quarry Grounds.

The third game of the schedule finds the Hope Harvey Majestics meeting the Burns A. A. under the flood lights at Parnassus High School field next Wednesday evening.

TWO REAL BATTLES

Two real battles are scheduled for this afternoon. The best material in the district on the sandlots will be hooked up with the meeting at West View and the Quarry Stadium.

At West View Stanley Beckman and Schack Shakerri will be leading West View against the Black and White tornado from the Tube City and it must be admitted that the ball-carrying prowess of Teline, Frank Zoller and Barnes is something over which to worry.

Opposing this quartet will be Roddy Cole, Stan Beckman, Schrack-in, Mark Kenny and Maler. At East Pittsburgh the Firemen will be led by Hooks Carroll in the opening game.

Manager Joe Wambaugh will not be in the lineup but Schirmer, Lody Adams, Toucher and Carroll will tote the ball against Clem Crowe and the big Red machine. For McChesneytown Hector Kennedy will start Vogel, Cunningham, McGinnis and C. Johnson.

The West View game will be called at 2:30 sharp but owing to a corner stone ceremony the East Pittsburgh game will not get under way until 3 o'clock.

When the Burns Club swings into action next Wednesday evening in the first night football game in the Pittsburgh district in the independent ranks, Toby Uansa and Tom Parkinson, former Pitt stars who blazed a trail of glory across the college gridiron last year, will be doing their stuff.

HOCKEY RULES ARE REVISED

TORONTO, Sept. 27. (AP) — A new rule was adopted by the National Hockey League today providing that [illegible] two players of the team are off the ice serving penalties and a third man is penalized, a substitute will be allowed on in the third man's place. As soon as one of the first two penalties expires the third will begin.

As a result of the rule no team will ever have more than two of its men off the ice at one time on account of penalties.

Other legislation was adopted calling for a 10-minute penalty against a player who accidentally or otherwise strikes another player on the head or face with his stick.

Under the revised code the aggressor in a fight is to get a major penalty while his opponent receives a minor. Penalties also were provided for a player intentionally knocking the stick from an opposing player's hand and for a player who has lost his stick and takes any part in the play.

The governors decided to hold the schedule meeting of the league in Chicago next Saturday. At that session the question of the playing schedule and the matter of whether the Pittsburgh Pirates will play their home games in Philadelphia will be taken up.

State Fishing Season Nears Close

OCTOBER MARKS END OF PERIOD FOR ANGLERS

Many Sportsmen Unable to Take Advantage of Ideal Month of Year.

Stilled Motor Boats Improve Conditions at Conneaut; Result Below Expectation.

By GIB MARSH

The curtain is about to be rung down on the fishing season in the Keystone State. September, which is regarded as the ideal period of the season, includes only two more days and after the first week of October the anglers will shelve their tackle and equipment for the year.

Gib Marsh

While September is a favored month among anglers very few are fortunate enough to take part in the sport during the ninth month of the year chiefly because they must return to their desks and employment. Natives about the various lakes in the northwestern section of the state will fish some through October but not extensively.

As usual September proved a splendid month at Conneaut Lake for the anglers. Bass, salmon and muskallonge were taken in liberal numbers. The same excellent results were experienced at Sugar Lake, Edinboro Lake and Lake Erie. All game fish of the lake waters were more active, more inclined to strike and furnished the angler real sport when resisting the efforts of their captors to land them.

MOTORS STIR WATERS

At Conneaut Lake the bass and salmon displayed activity when the motor boats were tied up for the winter. Many anglers contend that it was the large number of motor boats on Conneaut Lake constantly churning up the surface of the water during July and August that militated against successful fishing. However even before there were any large motor boats on Conneaut Lake the fishing was always more successful during September than during July and August.

It is the unanimous opinion among anglers that the season was not so successful as it gave promise to be on July 1, which is the date for the opening of the season on bass, salmon, muskallonge and other game fish of the lake waters. At times some splendid sport was enjoyed on all of the lakes but it was not consistent. Many, many anglers pulled into the docks after spending many hours on the water without a fish on the string. That was a frequent experience. While the catch of bass, salmon and muskallonge was not large during the season blue gills and other smaller species of fresh water game fish were taken in large numbers. It seemed no trouble to catch blue gills at any period of the season. However blue gills are not the objective of the major portion of the anglers. Catching blue gills may provide sport for children and women but the veteran angler is seeking that thrill which is experienced only when landing a bass or some snappy salmon, chiefly the thrill enjoyed when fighting it out with a bass.

While the general fishing season may be termed as ordinary the trout fishing season was one of the best enjoyed in this state in many years. The weather was ideal, the mountain streams contained plenty of legal length trout and the anglers experienced no trouble in catching all they desired. Thousands of stream fishermen turned out for the opening of the trout season April 15 and they landed trout through the first seven weeks of the season.

When the heavy fishing ended during the last week of May the stream beaters were pleased over the season and were most sanguine about the future of that great sport in this state. However, the majority of them have a different opinion now, for there is no doubt that during the drouth of the midsummer months thousands of trout perished.

MANY STREAMS DRY

Many famous trout streams in the mountains went dry. Of course some trout were saved by seeking the deep pools in those streams, but there were not enough deep pools to harbor all of the trout in those streams. That the state's supply of trout was greatly depleted there is no doubt, but the extent of that damage can only be determined by a survey.

In reviewing the season there is no doubt that Pine Lake in Ohio furnished probably more consistent sport for a large number of Pittsburgh anglers than any of the Pennsylvania lakes yielded. The writer saw some wonderful strings of bass brought to this city from Pine Lake. The major portion of those bass were caught by casting, the method anglers favor to employ. In fact it is the method which produces the real sport, the enjoyment of casting and the thrill of getting a strike by a well-placed cast and finally the real enjoyment experienced in landing the bass.

Any many, many Pittsburgh anglers enjoyed just that brand of sport at Pine Lake last summer.

C. Letzelter, who once campaigned for Carnegie Tech, Ed Herb, former Colgate star, and Ken Fields, who served an illustrious term at Illinois, started the rout on the invaders from Boston that was carried on most ably by the second and even the third string teams.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Walter Johnson's Washington team paid its last visit of the season to Boston today and tacked an 8-to-1 defeat on the Red Sox before leaving town. The Sox led 2 to 0 up to the sixth when Washington landed on Bull Durham for four runs.

The visitors put the game away with a three-run rally in the eighth.

Carl Fischer, a left-hander who was formerly with Newark, pitched effectively for the visitors and struck out seven men in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings.

The victory gave Washington a season's total of 15 victories out of 22 games with the Sox. The score:

MEN AND WOMEN GOLFERS PLAY AT CAMBRIDGE

Pros Hold Tournament Over Resort Course Tomorrow; District Stars Entered.

Fair Links Devotees to Stage Final Two-Day Medal Competition of Season.

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The Riverside Golf Club, in Cambridge Springs, again holds the district golf spotlight this week, what with the professionals and women taking up most of the week at that beautiful resort course.

Beginning tomorrow the professionals will stage their annual test and it will be a 36-hole affair bound to bring out some of the best scoring of the season, even as last week's amateur tourney did, for added to the local instructors will be the brigade from Northwestern Pennsylvania in the field—and among these latter are several of the smallest mashie wielders in the business in this section, Ted Luther of Corry, for instance.

WOMEN IN TOURNEY

The women open their fight on Wednesday in a two-day 36-hole medal play affair which promises to exceed in number of entries any tourney of the season this fall.

It will mark the last event of the season for the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania and the annual meeting of the organization will be held at the home club of the president, Mrs. F. M. Sloan, at Edgewood Country Club Friday.

The Pennsylvania Society Sons of the American Revolution announces a tourney to be staged at the Edgewood Country Club on Tuesday, October 7, to be known as the Collingwood tourney in honor of David F. Collingwood, who is sponsoring it. The special committee in charge includes Collingwood, Allen K. Collingwood, Dr. H. H. Sargent, Dr. John Day Garvin, L. H. Collingwood, J. M. Latimer, M. C. Adams, Col. Franklin Blackstone and, of course, the chairman of the S. A. R. golf committee and reigning champion, George L. Craig, Jr., of Allegheny.

ST. CLAIR EVENT

The St. Clair Country Club has announced a big auction pool tournament at 36 holes medal play in foursomes under full handicaps, 18 holes to be played on Saturday, October 11, and another 18-hole round on Sunday, October 12. Entries are limited to St. Clair members having had less than eight scores posted this year and will close next Saturday.

The Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania had a big day of it at the Oakmont Country Club last week, Betty Abernathy, runner-up to the finalist in the district championship, winning in the first division with a gross 91.

Ambridge Winner Over Rochester

ROCHESTER, Pa., Sept. 27.—Rochester High School fell before the onslaught of the Ambridge High gridders here today, 13-0. The Bridgers were able to gain consistently during the first two periods but lacked the necessary punch to tally. In the final half of the struggle the invaders drove through the Blue and White defense for their two markers.

After receiving the kickoff at the beginning of the second half the visitors opened up a slashing off-tackle attack which took the ball to the Rochester two-yard line. From here Parks plunged over. The other counter came in the fourth period when Ceglarski ran off left tackle for eight yards. The lineup:

EASTON, Pa., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Lafayette College won its opening football game today from St. Thomas College, Scranton, Pa., 7 to 0. Lafayette scored a touchdown in the third period aided by a 25-yard penalty imposed upon St. Thomas lineman for slugging. The penalty placed the ball on the two-yard line and Woodfin took it over. Cook failed to kick goal but Lafayette was given the extra point for St. Thomas being offside.

Ohio State Wins, 59-0

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Ohio State triumphantly opened its 1930 football season today with a 59-to-0 victory over Mount Union College, scoring nine touchdowns.

Coach Willaman's second Buckeye team played ragged football during the first half and bungled two excellent scoring opportunities, although counting touchdowns on two sustained marches to the goal. Many substitutes paraded onto the field during the second half and scored 20 points in the third period and 27 in the fourth.

Ohio gained 676 yards with 35 first downs and Mount Union 42 yards.

Circuit Pace Mark Broken

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 27.—[illegible] won the $5,000 Lexington stake for 3-year-old trotters at the Grand Circuit races here today in straight heats. Cardinal Bullet, representative of the Calumet Farm, Lexington, showed flashes of his early season form and was easily second.

The Kentucky Futurity for 2-year-old pacers went to the western colt Coal Cash, owned by Blue Ridge stable of Kansas City.

The opening heat went to [illegible] Britton, lowering his own season's record for geldings to 2:01 in the opening round. The meeting will close Tuesday.

Clairton Extended To Defeat Hurst

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—A fighting Hurst High School eleven surprised and forced Clairton High, 1929 champion of the W. P. I. A. L., to the limit today, Clairton finally winning 12-6.

Almost hopelessly outweighed, the doughty township team fought the beefy visitors to a standstill and forced them to the limit all the way. The lineup:

WOOL TRADE HIT IN AUSTRALIA

CANBERRA, Australia, Sept. 27. (AP)—[illegible] returns are the worst in [illegible] years, and all sectors that make up the wool industry are getting together for a big effort to [illegible] the situation.

Wool production in 1927 was valued at $375,000,000. The 1928 production equaled $345,000,000. The 1929 clip was [illegible] reach $200,000,000.

LOCAL STOCKS REFLECT DROP IN NEW YORK

Prices Here Fall Back Two to Four Points as Liquidation Continues

The wave of [illegible] which swept [illegible] the securities market [illegible] of the [illegible] week was reflected in the [illegible] of values [illegible] the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange where [illegible] dropped from [illegible]. The persistence of the decline which had been in progress for [illegible] three weeks had the effect of dislodging stock from accounts which had been impaired during this period and also brought in a measurable volume [illegible] account of investors who had become tired of waiting for an advance and had come to the conclusion that stocks could [illegible] be repurchased at [illegible] terms later on.

LONE STAR ACTIVE

Principal activity [illegible] market centered in Lone Star Gas which fell back steadily but not without meeting [illegible] resistance on the decline. Lone Star's record over the past many years recommends it to investors who are willing to wait for their profits and it was thought the buying this week was for long-pull investment as well as for account of interests in close touch with the company's affairs and [illegible] aware of the stock's possibilities for the future. On a close of 35¾, Lone Star was off [illegible] points for the week and [illegible] points above the [illegible] the year. Other [illegible] but the volume of [illegible] individual issues was [illegible].

INDUSTRIALS HIT

Industrial issues [illegible] the widest [illegible] of the week. [illegible] Manufacturing dropped [illegible] points and failed [illegible] despite the fact [illegible] declared the regular [illegible] dend of [illegible] and Steel Spring and Pittsburgh Steel Foundry [illegible] each and National [illegible] preferred sagged [illegible] the year at 35.

A noticeable feature of the week's dealings was [illegible] firmness in Joseph Horne Company shares which advanced [illegible] points in the face of the weakness in other sections.

Several new low records for the year were chalked up as a result of the week's declines. In the bank section a block of 60 shares Fidelity Trust was traded Saturday at 165 a drop of 22 points from the last previous sale recorded last January.

Board Upholds Sale Of Five Vessels

WASHINGTON Sept 27 The Shipping Board has approved the sale to the Southgate-Nelson Corporation of five vessels of the government's maritime fleet together with the trade name and good will of the American-Hampton Roads line at $60,486 per ship. The ships are 7825 and 7840 dead weight tons and ply between North Atlantic ports and the United Kingdom east coast.

Texas Pacific Coal To Build Refinery

FORT WORTH Tex Sept 27 Texas Pacific Coal and Oil Company has purchased land at Temple on which it proposes to erect a 2,000-barrel refining plant in the near future. The plant will be designed to skim crude oil chiefly from West Texas and to supply the recently acquired string of stations in Central Texas with gasoline and kerosene. Fuel oil will be marketed to local industries. The new plant will be sufficiently near to major pipe lines to utilize them for delivery of crude.

Situation in Europe No Retarding Factor In Nation's Progress

NEW YORK Sept 27—Considerable stress has been placed in some quarters on nervousness over European conditions as an active influence in the recent selling on the Stock Exchange. Without doubt there has been real concern in financial circles over the outcome of the Hitler movement in Germany, and various agitations for revision of the Versailles peace treaties and the reparations agreements. However the best opinion has been that little attention would be paid to these developments in the United States were it not for the economic readjustment in progress on this side of the water.

Ten years ago it was argued that the welfare of this country was inextricably interwoven with that of Europe. At that time conditions abroad were in much more tangled shape than now, yet business in the United States started on its prolonged advance. Several years of prosperity had been enjoyed on this side before Europe began to recover. Hence it is felt that the domestic situation might well in the near future arrive at a balance between production and consumption and turn for the better, irrespective of foreign complications.

COTTON PRICES CLOSE LOWER

NEW YORK Sept 27—A continuation of the recent selling movement in cotton was reflected by a further decline during today's trading with new December contracts selling off to 10.40 or 11 points net lower. That delivery closed at 10.41 with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 5 to 16 points.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 148,000 bales against 160,000 last year.

BYERS COMPANY TO OPEN PLANT ON OCTOBER 8

Production of Wrought Iron Placed on Quantity Basis At New $12,000,000 Mill

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

Marking a revolutionary change in the wrought iron industry, the $12,000,000 plant of the A. M. Byers Company will be formally opened at a ceremony to be held on October 8.

Part of the plant has been in production for over a month so that operating crews will be thoroughly familiar with all phases of their work by the time the equipment is inspected by leaders of Pittsburgh industries at the opening ceremony.

Iron is being processed blooming mills and plate mills are in operation and additional finishing mill equipment is being installed. The last units at the new plant will be ready for production by the end of the year.

DISCOVERED BY ASTON

The giant plant on a tract of 112 acres stands as a monument to Dr James Aston, discoverer of the process which has given new life to one of Pittsburgh's oldest industries and which promises to vastly increase the market for wrought iron.

Forty years ago Pittsburgh was the great iron puddling center but the discovery of the cheap Bessemer process for making steel and the later perfection of the open hearth process relegated wrought iron to a minor position. The exceptional resistance of the metal to corrosion and to crystallization from shocks still left a portion of its former markets where these advantages warranted a larger expenditure.

Until the perfection of Byers' new process, wrought iron was made in small puddle furnaces. The cost was substantially higher than that of steel due to the large amount of expert labor required for production.

MASS PRODUCTION

Dr. Aston's discovery and the new plant have put the manufacture of wrought iron on a mass production basis with a low labor cost comparable to that of steel.

The old hand puddler working his diminutive furnace produced balls of wrought iron weighing about 200 pounds. The new plant is making puddle balls weighing as much as two tons.

The new plant will have a capacity of from 45,000 to 50,000 tons a month. This compares with a capacity of 4,000 tons a month at the old hand puddling plant at Girard O. which is being abandoned. About the same number of men will be on the pay roll at Ambridge as at the Girard plant.

Railroad Seeking 10,000 Tons Rails

NEW YORK Sept 27—Pere Marquette Railway is inquiring for 10,000 tons steel rails, according to Railway Age.

Following are answers to queries received from readers. The advice is prepared with great care to aid investors in employing their funds to best advantage.

NO DIVIDENDS

O F—What is your opinion of American Seating? I own some of the stock at higher levels.

Answer—American Seating's quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, due July 1, was omitted. For six months ended June 30, 1930, operations resulted in a deficit of 79 cents a share, compared with net of 26 cents for corresponding six months of 1929. There was a slight improvement in the eight months ended August 30, 1930, net profits amounting to 48 cents a share. Earnings in 1929 were $2.38 a share, contrasted with $2.99 in 1928 and $4.08 in 1927. An initial dividend of 50 cents a share paid October, 1926, was increased to 75 cents a share January, 1927, maintained quarterly to October, 1929, then reduced to 50 cents. No one can predict future prices.

LOW YIELD

C B—I own $2,000 Morris Plan certificates and want to buy stock. Would National Biscuit be all right?

Answer—National Biscuit is selling at a level to yield only 3½ per cent. That puts its temporarily in the class of speculation on dividend prospects. Dividends in varying amounts were paid on the old common stock from 1899, the present stock, issued under two-and-one-half for one split March, 1930, pays $2.80 a share. Earnings last year were $3.28 a share, against $2.92 in 1928, for six months ended June 30, $1.48 a share. How much cash have you? Morris Plan 5s are sound.

GET MORE CASH

I N—I have saved $1,100. What would you say to a purchase of International Telephone and Telegraph. Please give some information about it.

Answer—Based on earnings so far this year, International Telephone and Telegraph is speculative. Unofficial agencies, however, think unless an unforeseen drop in business occurs the company will cover its $2 dividend in 1930. For the first six months net income was equal to $1.04 a share. This contrasted with $1.56 for first half of 1929. In the full 1929 year earnings were $3.01 a share; in 1928, $3.42 and in 1927, $3.69. Dividends of $6 a share annually were paid on the old stock from 1920. The rate on the present stock, issued in three-for-one split May, 1929, is $2 a share. In our opinion you should give no further thought to the purchase of securities until you have saved at least $3,000.

THREE PER CENT

F T—I am a salaried man with about $6,000 in good securities. I want to buy stock. What do you think of American Can?

Answer—Were you to buy American Can now you would get only 3 per cent, based on the current $4 dividend. Regular payments, however, have been distributed from 1923. Net income for 1929 was equal to $8.02 a share, compared with $6.86 in 1928 and $4.11 in 1927. According to reports, 1930 earnings should approximate 1929. Buying stocks that yield less than savings bank interest is unbusinesslike, unless you want to speculate. Of course, we could give no advice on that.

TWO STOCKS

M B—I own at higher levels 20 shares American Locomotive common and 25 S. S. Kresge. What is your opinion of them?

Answer—American Locomotive common is speculative. Because of poor earnings, reflecting lack of buying on the part of railroads, directors recently put the stock on a $4 annual basis, contrasted with the $8 rate maintained since 1925. Dividends have not been earned in recent years, but payments were continued because of strong financial position built up in years of marked prosperity. S. S. Kresge can pay the current $1.60 dividend. Earnings last year were $2.68 a share, compared with $2.80 in 1928; in the first half of current year, $1.19 a share, against $1.26 for first half of 1929. Dividends at varying rates, with extras, have been paid from 1913. Sales for eight months ended August 31, 1930, amounted to $89,750,011, from 627 American and 29 Canadian stores. For first eight months of last year sales were $92,332,-510. We do not know future market prices for these stocks.

FOR BETTER INCOME

H A—I am a working man with dependents and have noticed your excellent advice. I have $7,000 in a savings bank. What shall I buy for a better income?

Answer—Don't reduce your surplus in the bank below $2,000. It may come in handy. Buy $2,000 Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad general and refunding mortgage, series "A," 4½s, 1977; add 10 shares each Associated Gas & Electric $6.50 preferred, St. Louis-San Francisco preferred and 15 Jamaica Water Supply preferred. The anual income from the stocks, costing less than $3,000, will be $181. The bonds yield 4½ per cent at maturity.

INCOME FROM ONE

D T—I own 50 shares Shell Union Oil and 25 Standard Oil of New Jersey, both at higher levels. Shall I hold or sell?

Answer — Your problem is speculative. We can be of no assistance. You can count on income, however, from Standard Oil of New Jersey. Earnings have been satisfactory for many years and dividends, with extras, have been paid since dissolution of the old Standard Oil more than 17 years ago. Shell Union Oil common is a speculation. Because of necessity for conserving cash, quarterly payment of 35 cents a share expected September 30 will be omitted. Dividends had been paid from 1922. Net income in 1929 was equivalent to $1.28 a share, contrasted with $2.04 in 1928, $1.10 in 1927 and $3.05 in 1926. For the first six months of this year, deficit was 10 cents a share.

OMITS AMOUNT

Miss G B—Past advice has proved beneficial. What is your idea of a purchase of Lambert?

Answer—Lambert Company has paid the current $8 dividend from April, 1929, though payments, with extras, were distributed from July, 1926. Net income in 1929 equaled $10.04 a share, compared with $8.92 in 1928, and $7.86 in 1927; in the first six months of current year, $5.02 a share contrasted with $5.08 for first half of 1929. At recent levels the yield was 8 per cent. What securities have you? How much can you spend?

A GOOD RECORD

I P—I have $2,000 in a savings bank and want to invest $1,000. Would you approve Texas Corporation?

Answer—You could count on income from Texas Corporation. Dividends of $3 a share annually have been paid from 1912; 10 per cent extra in March, 1921, and April, 1927. Earnings in 1929 were $5.12 a share, compared with 5.66 in 1928 on a smaller capitalization. You could get 20 shares for less than $1,100. The annual income of $60 would be close to 5 per cent.

TWO STOCKS

M J—Before the stock market crash last October I bought 50 shares Packard Motor at 27. Later I bought 50 more at 18, then 100 at 13. What do you think of it? I also have 50 shares United Gas Improvement at higher levels. Shall I keep it?

Answer—United Gas Improvement can pay the $1.20 dividend rate established on the present stock March 1, 1930, following initial quarterly payment of 25 cents December 1, 1929. In the first six months of current year earnings were [illegible] cents a share for 19[illegible] $1.46 a share, [illegible] in 1928 and $1.16 in 1927. Payments in varying amounts have been distributed since 1885. Of course, no one can forecast future prices. Packard Motors is a speculation. The company's earnings have been adversely affected by the severe business depression. An official, however, has denied rumors that the December dividend would be omitted. You [illegible] in putting [illegible] much of your capitol into a single stock. At recent levels you had a paper loss. How you can avoid that loss is conjectural.

INCOME FROM ONE

E T—I own ten shares National City Bank at considerably higher levels, also fifty shares Alleghany Corporation at a loss. What is your opinion of them?

Answer—Alleghany Corporation pays no dividend. To that extent it is a speculation. Net income for ten and one-half months ended December 31, 1929, equaled 38 cents a share; for six months ended June 30, 15 cents a share. We think you can depend on the regular income from National City Bank. Of course, we cannot comment on the market positions of these stocks.

A GOOD STOCK

E A—I have had excellent advice from you on former occasions. Now I want your opinion of a purchase of General Gas and Electric $6 preferred. This stock looks like a bargain if it ranks with the two senior preferred issues, which are quoted much higher.

Answer—General Gas and Electric $6 preferred "A" ranks equally as to dividends with the $7 and $8 preferred "A" stocks. The lower price probably reflects shareholders' lack of interest in the convertible feature, because of the decline in the common stock. At recent levels the yield was close to 8 per cent. Earnings for the company, however, controlled by Associated Gas and Electric, are excellent. We wish you had mentioned the amount of cash you have, but you may buy a reasonable amount of the stock to hold for income.

Averages differed as to whether or not the leading issues established new lows for the year, although many of the [illegible] minor issues continued the decline. Taking the market as a whole it is probably within a point of the extreme bottom of the November [illegible] Weakness in wheat and [illegible] both of which slumped to new lows, continued a source of discomfort to the [illegible]

As [illegible] the movement broke [illegible] the public utilities, but these stocks as a group held steady throughout the day. Consolidated Gas was again used as the bear target and sold within a fraction of 100, under which level there supposedly are large supporting orders, unless the bids have been discouraged by the continued weakness of the market.

POWER SUPPORTED

American and Foreign Power was again strongly supported by interests credited with being its principal sponsors, while Electric Power and Light also [illegible] a slight gain. The public utility stocks form the battleground of the most intense conflict waged between the bulls and bears. If successful in halting the bear drive against their favorites, the public utility supporters may encourage a general recovery in the entire list. Should the bears be successful in bringing out sizeable liquidation of utilities, the entire market would suffer.

American Can was hammered steadily by the bear element, but their efforts were overcome by strong support furnished this issue, to which many competent observers look for leadership in any rally of prices. The stock closed up over a point on the day. Steel common was also under pressure but closed off only [illegible]. It is the resistance shown by such issues the last few days that encourages the feeling that at least a technical rally is in the making.

COVERING HELPS

That short covering played a leading role in the relative firmness of many issues cannot be questioned. A tremendous amount of covering took place today in many speculative issues where the shorts have sizeable profits. Thus Radio closed up fractionally despite general knowledge of little improvement in its business. Radio-Keith was also inclined to firmness, probably on short covering. The shorts found little difficulty in taking back their stocks, so steady was the public liquidation around the low levels. The short interest probably has been substantially reduced by reason of the sharp decline.

Oil stocks continued their decline, with many of the group's leaders establishing new lows, including Texas Corporation, which yields over 6 per cent. The coppers likewise suffered additional liquidation. The selling which came into the market was obviously more than bear raiding in a great many stocks, particularly those in the low priced area where the public's interest is largely concentrated. Such selling in many instances was either forced or liquidation by banks on collateral against loans.

Indiana Standard Reduces Gasoline

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Standard Oil Company of Indiana has reduced service station and tank wagon price of gasoline and kerosene 2 cents a gallon, effective September 29. The cut will be made throughout the company's territory except where local adjustments to meet competition already has been made.

Chicago price of U. S. motor gasoline at service stations will be 17 cents a gallon, including the 3 cents state tax. Tank wagon price will be 1 cent less. Texas Company has met the reduction.

PRICE INDEX AGAIN LOWER

AUBURNDALE, Mass., Sept. 27.—(AP)—The average level of commodity prices during the week just closed declined moderately from the previous week, according to the McGill Commodity Service. The weakness was largely due to agricultural products, which reached a new low. World wheat production this year promises to exceed last year by around 4 per cent. The volume, however, is under the previous five year average. Wheat prices, the lowest since pre-war, tend to discount oversupply. Out of 15 individual commodity indices, three advanced last week, nine declined and three remained unchanged.

The most important price changes for the week were as follows:

Predicts Five-Year Boom for Building

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Truman S. Morgan, president of F. W. Dodge Corporation, said that although the country at large experienced a low ebb of construction last month, activities in the metropolitan area are showing a gain in contracts awarded and contemplated projects, and the next five years will be an era of unprecedented prosperity in the industry.

Extends Date for Exchange of Stock

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The National Supply Company has extended the date of exchange of its shares for Spang, Chalfant & Co. shares to November 5. Under the plan of acquisition announced early in the summer, National offered to acquire Spang on a basis of one-half share of National preferred and one-half share of National common for each 3½ shares of Spang Chalfant.

Inventor of quick selling, low priced automobile accessory desires additional finances for national expansion. Large number already sold locally. Good proposition to capable man financially able to handle national distribution.

In Memoriam 1-B

IN MEMORY of John Chescott, who died eight years ago today in Butler County.
Some day I hope to meet him,
Some day, I know not when,
To clasp his hand in another land
And never to part again.
Sadly missed by his wife, Mrs. Gem Chescott.

Boy's Hoop Shuts Off City's Power

DOVER, O., Sept. 27.—Five electricians worked two hours to repair damage done by a boy who threw a wire hoop over high tension wires of the municipal light plant. Power and light in one section of the city were cut off.

Ex-Wife Blocks Italian's Naturalization Here

When Teanstino Beltrame, 35, an Italian of Curtisville, appeared yesterday before Federal Judge R. M. Gibson for a final hearing on his petition for naturalization, opposed by the naturalization authorities on the ground the applicant was not of good moral character, he found his wife and the chief witness against him.

The wife, Mrs. Jocatine Beltrame, 21, and attractive, told the court her former husband was a "Red Communist" and wanted her to be one, that he sold bootleg liquor and became angry with her when she would not help him sell it.

Mrs. Beltrame told of marrying the petitioner in 1926 when she was 17 years old, and of obtaining a divorce on November 1, 1928, because of alleged cruel and barbarious treatment.

After the divorce, she testified, Beltrame went to her father's home and told her that if she married again he would kidnap her and put a bomb under her father's home.

She testified her ex-husband bragged about being a Communist and after the divorce she had him arrested twice for annoying her.

The arrests were corroborated by testimony of Constable Bennie Roose. Her father, a brother and sister, also testified for the government.

Counsel for Beltrame called attention of the court that the fact that all testimony with the exception of the constable was given by members of the family of the divorced wife and asked a continuance of the hearing, which the court granted, for resumption October 3.

OBITUARY

Samuel Harper

Funeral services will be held tomorrow from the West End Methodist Episcopal Church for Samuel Harper, 80, who died Friday at his home, 64 Wabash avenue, West End. Mr. Harper had spent most of his life in the Pittsburgh district. For the last 30 years he was in charge of the Saturday and Sunday Hospital Association and a member of the old Central Board of Education. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary Smith Harper; two sons, William T. and Clarence P. Harper; three daughters, Mrs. Joseph Harrington, Mrs. George R. Cobain and Mrs. Edward Rynearson; 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Walter B. Eichleay

Funeral services for Walter B. Eichleay, 52, secretary and treasurer of the John Eichleay Jr. Company, who died Friday, will be held Tuesday afternoon at his home, 204 Lytton avenue, Oakland. He was a member of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, Milnor Lodge No. 287, F. & A. M.; Zerubabbel Chapter No. 162, R. A. M.; Mt. Moriah Council No. 2, R. & S. M.; Pittsburgh Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar; Pennsylvania Consistory, Syria Temple, Masonic Veterans Association, Rotary Club and Duquesne Club. He leaves his wife, Rebecca Duvall Eichleay; a daughter, Miss Margaret Duvall Eichleay, and three brothers, John P., Harry O. and Roy O. Eichleay.

Patrick Gaffney

Funeral services for Patrick Gaffney, 81, who died Friday, will be held tomorrow morning from the home of his son, Thomas Gaffney, 1364 Fourth avenue, Coraopolis, followed by high mass of requiem at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Coraopolis. He was born in Ireland and came to this country 65 years ago, settling in Oswego, N. Y. He had resided in Coraopolis for eight years. He was a pioneer section foreman for the New York Central Railroad and helped to lay the first tracks. He leaves his wife, six sons, Thomas H., Coraopolis; John W., Utica, N. Y.; James, of Onset, Mass.; Joseph E., Providence, R. I.; Robert, Wolcott, N. Y., and C. J. Gaffney, Harrisonville, R. I.; two daughters, Mrs. John Ambrose and Mrs. Della Gaffney, both of Onset, Mass., and a brother, W. J. Gaffney, of Syracuse, N. Y.

LACHER NAMED PROBATION AIDE

Charles C. Lacher, of 409 Melrose avenue, for 14 years crier for the United States District Court, and the second eldest attache of the court in length of service, has been appointed a federal probation officer by the judges of the court. George G. O'Brien has been promoted to chief probation officer.

Mr. Lacher will assume his new duties Wednesday. He entered the service of the court in 1913 as a bailiff, being appointed by the late Judges James Young and Charles B. Orr. Three years later Judges Orr and W. H. S. Thomson appointed him court crier. During the administration of John F. Short as United States marshal of Western Pennsylvania, in addition to court crier he also was a deputy marshal.

C. C. Lacher

There are now 430 government prisoners under probation of the district court and the new appointment was made to relieve Chief O'Brien of some of the work. Mr. Lacher is married and has two children.

M. E. PASTORS, LAYMEN MEET

By THE REV. C. T. MURDOCK
Special Correspondent

The eyes of local Methodism during the coming week will be focused on the Mt. Lebanon Church. Three hundred preachers and an equal number of laymen of the Pittsburgh Conference will meet to discuss church problems. They are the followers of John Wesley, the Moses of Methodism and the outstanding religious genius of the eighteenth century.

Today Methodism—taking its four divisions in the United States, Great Britain, Canada (now merged into the national church) and Australasia—has 49,000 ministers in its pulpits and some 30,000,000 in its pews. It has built 88,000 separate churches. It teaches in its schools every Sunday 8,000,000 children. Every fifteenth person in America belongs to Wesley's Church; in Australia one in nine; in Canada one in six. The Methodist Church in the United States recently raised $220,000,000 in a single effort—the largest sum ever raised by a single church in a single effort in Christian history.

It is interesting to note that the Methodist preachers gathered in the southwestern corner of Pennsylvania almost exactly equal in number the famous band Wesley left behind him as the result of his life work—300. When Wesley died in 1791 his "societies" numbered only 76,000, whereas the Methodists of the Pittsburgh conference alone—and it is only one of 137 such divisions—number 112,000.

POLISH LEADER SENT TO EXILE

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The arrest of Adelbert Korfanty, nationalist leader, and other resigned members of the Silesian Diet has caused excitement but no open disturbances.

Korfanty has disagreed with Marshal Pilsudski since 1922. Apparently he was prepared for his arrest, having a small suitcase packed. He was sent to Brest-Litovsk.

Another Silesian deputy, a communist, also was arrested, but there is some doubt as to how many others were taken. The ministry of the interior is silent on the subject.

No announcement was made of the charges against Korfanty, who was opposition leader in the Diet. New Diet elections have been set for November 23.

Surgery Tools Of Primitives Found in Cliff

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Discovery of what archaeologists identified as a prehistoric surgical kit beneath a cliff dwelling near the Utah-Arizona border was reported by Zeke Johnson, guide of the Charles L. Bernheimer Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History.

The kit, containing a variety of wooden instruments, was contained in a hollow wooden tube covered by the skin of an animal.

Johnson said archaeologists in the party expressed belief the surgical instruments were used by basket weavers long before the coming of the cliff dwellers.

BOY VIOLINISTS' TEACHER HALED BEFORE COURT

Woman Must Explain Why She Has Denied Father Right to See Prodigies

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—A writ of habeas corpus was served today on Miss Beth Lackey, violin instructor, ordering her to produce her two young charges, Ruggiero and Giorgio Ricci, in court Monday at 10 a. m.

The writ charges her with refusing admittance of the father, Pietro Ricci, to her apartment to see the boys, and with failing to carry out a previous order of Justice Valente which specified that the boys should be taken to the Catholic church.

SERVED BY FATHER

Miss Lackey said the papers in the case were served on her personally by the father, who had come to hear the boys play. The writ was issued by Supreme Court Justice Cotillo.

In habeas corpus proceedings before Justice Valente last summer Miss Lackey won temporary custody of the boys, both of whom are violinists, until after December 15, when the case was to be reopened.

PLANS CONCERT TOUR

Ruggiero, who is 10, is scheduled to start a concert tour of the Eastern half of the United States next month. He made a sensational debut in New York City last winter, being haled by the critics as a second Yehudi Menuhin.

Miss Lackey won a Supreme Court decision in California yesterday which upheld her guardianship of the boys. The ruling was on an appeal by the parents from a decision of the Superior Court of Alameda County. She formerly lived in Berkley, Cal.

MYSTERY SHOT KILLS FAMOUS WAR ENGINEER

Griffiths, Briton Who Blew Up Messines Ridge, Dies In Boat Near Cairo, Egypt.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Sir John Griffiths, prominent engineer and governing director of the Norton-Griffiths Company, public works contractors, was found dead today under mysterious circumstances.

While no official statement has been issued it was said in reliable quarters that Sir John paddled out in a surf boat from the beach at the San Stefano Casino early this morning.

Later it was noticed that the boat, a long way from shore, appeared to be unoccupied. Investigators found Sir John lying dead with a bullet in his temple.

DEATH A SENSATION

Coming as it did after the suspension of work on the heightening of Assuan dam which was being carried out by the Norton-Griffiths Company under a contract with the Egyptian government, the tragic discovery caused a great sensation.

It was stated that the Egyptian ministry of public works was notified Sunday that work on the dam was being stopped because of the conditions imposed by the Egyptian resident engineering staff.

TROUBLE ON DAM JOB

A government communique on the same day said the contractor had written a letter three days earlier to the Egyptian premier pointing out the difficulty of the financial situation and asking the government for financial help.

Sir John was subsequently reported as explaining that payments from the government for the work already executed had fallen far below anticipations owing to the slowing up of the estimated rate of work by circumstances over which the contractor had no control.

He declared it was unfair to connect the suspension of work with the financial question, as this would have been inevitable on technical grounds.

DISTINGUISHED SOLDIER

Lieut. Col. Sir John Norton Griffiths had a distinguished career both as an engineer and as a soldier. Born in 1871, he became an engineer, but broke his career several times to serve in the British Army. He was in command of scouts in the Matabele War in 1896 and then was in the South African field force, later serving in Lord Roberts' bodyguard.

During the World War he was attached to the staff of engineer-in-chief to organize and initiate tunneling companies. He was mentioned in dispatches three times and received the D. S. C.

Sir John, world-famed engineer, who by virtue of his notable activities in the various parts of the British domain was known as "Empire Jack," was the man who originated and worked out in detail the blowing up of famous Messines Ridge, one of the most notable operations of the World War.

Wilkinsburg, Carnegie Tie

Two powerful scholastic elevens, each of them as heavy as the average college squad, wore themselves out with fruitless pounding at airtight lines yesterday as Wilkinsburg High and Carnegie High battled to a scoreless deadlock at Graham Field, Wilkinsburg.

Carnegie, fresh from a triumph over Homestead last week, proved a tough proposition for the untried Wilkinsburg machine which was playing its first game of the season. The game was witnessed by about 4,000 wild-eyed fans who shouted themselves hoarse at the sight of two such evenly matched teams battling each other to a standstill.

Wilkinsburg started off strongly, holding Carnegie, running their punt back to midfield and then sprinting to a first down on the first play. Bad luck stepped in a moment later, however, when a Red and Blue allowed a loose ball to slip through his fingers, Carnegie promptly gathering it in. Carnegie in turn ran for a first down, but was stopped dead. The ball was traded when Carnegie fumbled on its own 20, recovering the rolling ball on the 10. Its punt was short, going out of bounds on the 30. The first scoring threat of the game was stopped when Carnegie held the powerful Wilkinsburg line and took the ball on downs on its own 20.

Carnegie penetrated to the Wilkinsburg 40 early in the second half but fumbled, a Holy City player recovering the ball for no gain. With Myers and John cracking the line repeatedly, the Red and Blue marched 40 yards to the Carnegie 20, where the visitors again held for downs. On the first play of the third period, Carnegie punted from deep in its own territory, the ball bounding over the other goal line. After bringing the ball out to the 20, Wilkinsburg was handed a 10-yard penalty, and a moment later fumbled on its own 15, where Carnegie recovered. Lacking a yard of a first down, Carnegie lost the ball on downs as Wilkinsburg held stubbornly. From then until the final whistle the teams traded the ball on long punts, each one hurling a desperate series of passes in an effort to clip over a score, but each pass fell incomplete and the game ended in a scoreless tie.

Wilkinsburg scored five first downs from scrimmage, Carnegie four. Wilkinsburg gained about 30 yards more from scrimmage than did the invaders.

Mack and Myers, with John and Kemble, stood out as the stars for the Holy City crew, while Kerdyl, Fulkes, Chidlow and Misik shone for the Carnegie outfit. The lineup:

California Teachers Tops Millersville

MILLERSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 27.—California Teachers College traveled to Millersville Teachers College and was victorious, 12 to 6, in a well-played and hard fought game before a crowd of 3,000 fans. In the first half it was a kicking contest, neither team being able to advance the ball within the 20-yard line. Early in the third quarter California plunged the pigskin over for a touchdown. Near the close of the third quarter Millersville plunged over for a touchdown. In the last quarter Coach Steers substituted Patterson for Matheus and he started a series of line plunges which resulted in pushing over the winning touchdown. The lineup:

Yale Beats Maine, 38-0

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Yale opened its 1930 football season here today before a crowd of 30,000 by beating Maine 38 to 0. The Elis, slow in starting, hit their stride in the final period to score three touchdowns. Yale used three teams.

Albie Booth, ground gaining ace of the 1929 campaign, played a bit more than one period and scored one touchdown. McLennan, Yale's starting quarterback, led the scoring with two touchdowns.

The lineup:

| Yale 38 | | Maine 0 |

South Hills Bows To Beaver Falls

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 27.—Beaver Falls High unleashed a powerful attack here this afternoon, led by Curt Young at fullback, to defeat South Hills High, 23 to 0. The Tigers scored in every period and completely outclassed their city rivals. Merriman, Tiger right half, turned in the most spectacular play of the game when he ran 72 yards with an intercepted pass for a touchdown.

The Beaver Falls forwards played a good game today and gave the backs plenty of time to execute plays and with the giant Young tearing the line with his vicious drives and leading other plays the visitors found themselves completely stumped. The lineup:

| B. Falls 23 | | South Hills 0 |
|---|---|---|
| Rimbey | L. E. | Blum |

Tubers Top Glassport

Spurting momentarily in the third and final periods to score a touchdown each time, McKeesport High School's football team successfully opened the 1930 grid campaign yesterday with a 13-to-0 triumph over a fighting Glassport High eleven at the World War Memorial Field, McKeesport.

A pair of "breaks" paved the way for both of the Tubers' scores. In the third quarter, Glassport held for downs deep in their own territory, punted, but the kick was bad and went out of bounds on the 22-yard line. On the first play Capt. Leo Flynn of McKeesport hit the line for a 12-yard gain and first down on the 10-yard mark. He went through again on the next play for three yards and then Eddie Sundin was stopped without a gain. Glassport was offside on the next play and suffered a five-yard penalty, placing the oval on the two-yard mark, from where Sundin went through center for a touchdown. His dropkick for the extra point was low.

Late in the final quarter, Billy Stallings, McKeesport's right end, recovered a fumbled punt on Glassport's 30-yard line and another successful march to the goal line was started. Flynn, on the first play, hit the center of the line for 11 yards and first down on the 19. A double pass, Flynn to to Ennis, who ran through left tackle, was good for seven yards, and on the next play Flynn made it first down on Glassport's nine-yard mark. Sundin hit the center of the line for five yards and then went through left tackle for three more. Flynn then went over for McKeesport's second touchdown on a through-center play. Sundin sent a perfect dropkick through the uprights for the extra point.

McKeesport was unable to get going properly during the first half, during which period Glassport presented a stubborn defense. The Tubers, while not overimpressive in their inaugural, played good football throughout the contest, Flynn and Sundin standing out especially in the backfield with Stallings, Speer and Jackel showing up well on the line. Davis and Holroyd performed well on Glassport's line, while the losers' chief ground-gainers were Kenneth and Shoultis. McKeesport registered 10 first downs against two for Glassport, and completed one out of three forward passes. Glassport resorted to the aerial game on seven occasions and was successful three times, with one of the heaves being intercepted. The lineup:

|---|---|---|
| Jackson | L. E. | Davis |
| [illegible] | L. T. | [illegible] |
| [illegible] | L. G. | [illegible] |

Score by quarters: McKeesport 0 0 6 7—13. Substitutions: McKeesport, Ennis, [illegible]. Glassport, [illegible]. Touchdowns—Sundin, Flynn. Point after touchdown—Sundin (dropkick). Referee—[illegible], Duquesne. Umpire—Horgan, [illegible]. Linesman, [illegible].

Greensburg Downs Westinghouse, 20-13

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—Greensburg High School staged a great last-quarter rally to defeat the crack Westinghouse High School eleven of Pittsburgh here today, 20 to 13, and remain in the hunt for the class A W. P. I. A. L. title.

Taking the lead in the first quarter, Greensburg saw itself tied in the second and outscored in the third, largely through the sensational broken field running of "Showboat" Ware, Westinghouse's Negro halfback.

In the final period, Greensburg gathered itself and launched a successful drive after being held on the one-yard line at the start of the period. A few moments afterwards, the Brown and White negotiated another score with Shaffer lugging the ball over against the fast tiring Blue and Gold.

The game was a brilliant display of high school football throughout, with Large, Phillips and Anderson starring for Greensburg and Ware and Zeigler for Westinghouse.

13 WOMEN NOMINATED

The records of the Republican and Democratic [illegible] the names of [illegible] women qualified as candidates of the major parties for Senate and House.

The outstanding woman candidate is Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, who scored a triumph in the Illinois senatorial primary and carries the Republican standard in the present campaign. If she wins she will be the first woman senator by virtue of a popular vote.

Miss Thelma Parkinson of Vineland, N. J., is the other woman senatorial candidate of a major party. She seeks the short term seat as a Democrat.

BLOC FACES LOSS

The House feminine bloc may decrease because Mrs. McCormick is seeking the senatorial toga while Mrs. Pearl Peden Oldfield of Arkansas did not seek renomination.

Other women members are candidates for re-election. They are Mrs. Florence Kahn (Rep., Cal.), Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Rep., Mass.), Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt (Rep., N. Y.), Mrs. Katherine Langley (Rep., Ky.), Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Dem., N. J.), Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen (Dem., Fla.).

GIVEN MEDAL FOR HER WORK

Mrs. Harper K. Beegle of Gibsonia has won high commendation in transforming her farm home surroundings into a bower of beauty and floral delight.

For her work in beautifying her home and carrying the work of floriculture into the home of her neighbors, Mrs. Beegle has been awarded the Peter Pan bronze medal of the Horticultural Society as the best amateur gardener in Western Pennsylvania.

She was the organizer of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association and for 10 years has been its president and guiding spirit. In collaboration with Henry R. Eby, county farm agent, she is organizing farm women in a movement to transform the landscape in the section in which she resides.

IRISES MAKE GOOD BORDERS

What is more lovely in springtime than a mass of exquisite irises along a walk or in the border. These dainty flowers are easy to grow and offer the greatest amount of floral beauty for the least amount of effort. They [illegible] under neglect, which [illegible] a [illegible] in two weeks [illegible] ground that would [illegible] a [illegible] to a shade [illegible] which is drained and [illegible] will [illegible] them. But [illegible] gardener would [illegible] apples are [illegible] treatment and [illegible].

Irises are broadly classified into three groups, the Tall Bearded, the Japanese and others. It is difficult to select favorite varieties but the pale blue and lavender sorts of the taller kinds seem most popular although yellow, mahogany, smoky apple and the other dull soft shades are equally attractive.

For most pleasing color effects plant irises in masses, at least three or four of each variety. The waves of color which result from masses of varying hues are as delightful as the lovely rainbow and it is easy to understand why the iris has been called the "rainbow flower."

There is an ever-increasing interest in the Japanese iris, the most gorgeous of the family. They are easy to grow and as far as magnificence and beauty go there is no doubt that these oriental cousins stand at the head of the list. Japanese irises like rich soil and they should be watered heavily every day before they bloom and while they are in flower. During their flowering season they can scarcely be fed too much.

3 Noted Speakers Here Columbus Day

The church, the law and literature will be discussed by three speakers at the annual Columbus Day banquet of the Knights of Columbus, which will be held October 11 in the banquet hall of the William Penn Hotel. Judge Frank E. Patterson will be toastmaster and addresses will be made by the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. O'Reilly, bishop of Scranton; Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh of Chicago and John B. Kennedy of New York, associate editor of Collier's Weekly.

North Side Church Marks Anniversary

Special services have been planned for this week to mark the fortieth anniversary of the organization of the St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church, Montgomery avenue, North Side. The Rev. J. M. Lambert, pastor, will have charge of the Harvest Home services to be held today.

Further services will be held each night this week except Saturday, and will be brought to a close next Sunday evening with a musical service.

Farm and Garden Topics

There is no hard and fast rule for autumn planting as each part of our country affords different opportunities. Some portions enjoy a long open fall in which much can be accomplished; others can plant through most of the winter months, while those in the arid and northern regions are able to do little after the middle of October.

A cleaned garden in the autumn will offer an easier garden in which to perform the multitudinous tasks that confront us in the early spring.

October is a favorable month for the setting out of fruit trees. Water and mulch are the prime essentials for successful autumn planting.

Move old-established shrubs and plant new ones. Water to the nonsaturation point and then mulch heavily with grass clippings, leaves or marsh hay, in order that the tiny rootlets may get a firm hold before the heaving and thawing of frost sets in. This applies to perennials and trees as well. Dry freezing results in serious winter injury.

Keep the grass cut until winter sets in.

Give the late chrysanthemums a protection of gauze covering at night.

Make notes of the places in your garden that lack autumn and winter color. Write for an early fall delivery of berry-bearing shrubs, trees and vines with interesting and colorful twigs and foliage. European cranberrybush, Viburnum opulus; dogwood in variety, willows, birch, mountain-ash, bittersweet vines and the winged euonymus are a few members of the substantial garden family that furnish interest in the bleakest of winter gardens.

After cutting back the phlox in October there will be a new growth started. This is an opportune time to divide the roots, replanting only the newer growth that has started on the outside.

245 CRIMINAL TRIALS LISTED

Continuing the drive to catch up with the summer accumulation of cases in Criminal Court, 245 trials have been listed for the coming week. Most of these are cases of minor importance.

One murder case is to be tried Monday when Margaret Williams, 28, Negro, of 3508 Butler street, will be tried for the shooting of Fred Walker, Negro, 28, of 3203 Penn avenue, last April 30. He died 19 days later in West Penn Hospital, the result of a bullet that pierced both thighs. At the time of the shooting the woman declared the man had been tormenting her.

Members of the election board of the Thirty-fourth District of the Nineteenth Ward are to be tried Tuesday for conspiracy to return a false count at the last September primary. The defendants are Spencer Love, judge; Margaret Frick and Agnes N. Cook, inspectors, and Mary M. Otterman and A. N. Plato, clerks. It is charged the board credited Coroner W. J. McGregor and the school visitors with 225 votes each while a true count gave them from 354 to 435 votes each. The votes of other candidates were similarly treated.

300 VARIETIES OF PEONY GIVE CHOICE RANGE

Growers Society Suggests Planting New Kinds To Beautify Gardens

Peonies are such hardy, thrifty perennials that they just grow and grow and soon become firmly established. We are apt to overlook the fact, however, that new and improved varieties are constantly making their appearance.

Sometimes it is well to dislodge the old varieties we get so used to seeing and substitute in their places some of the more recent introductions. These newer, finer sorts are sure to delight you with their improved qualities and it will be interesting to plan a different arrangement of the Peony planting.

The American Peony Society publishes an authoritative manual in which about 300 selected varieties are carefully described. It is interesting to note that in this manual are listed the names of hundreds of other Peonies which the society recommends to be discarded, not because the flowers are unworthy but because the selected list contains newer types of similar appearance which are much more desirable.

An ideal background against which a Peony may display its magnificent flowers is a group of shrubs. Take care that sufficient space is allowed for the peonies as their roots forage deep.

Peonies are such delightful flowers that it is difficult for one not to become an enthusiast to the point of growing dozens of varieties. If peonies become one's hobby arrange the plants so they are displayed to best advantage. Create a special garden for them and interplant some Delphiniums, hardy Phloxes, Asters and perhaps Chrysanthemums to provide interest when the peonies are out of flower.

Turk, 156, Rallying From Auto Injuries

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Zaro Agha, the 156-year-old Turk, whose gadding about town was rudely interrupted when he was struck by an automobile Thursday night, is expected to be out of bed by Monday or Tuesday, physicians said today.

Zaro slept from midnight until late this morning and ate a good breakfast when he woke up.

DAVIS SPEAKER AT RIVER RALLY IN VANDERGRIFT

Lauds Hoover Relief for Jobless, Sees Five-Day Week as Future Prospect

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., Sept. 27.—James J. Davis, secretary of labor, speaking here today at a meeting of the Kiskiminetas-Conemaugh River Improvement Association, said it is wholly up to the people as to when, how and to what extent navigation in local rivers is to progress.

He said:

"Whether rivers in this section will be improved in 10 years or 100 years depends entirely on how well the people seeking these improvements are organized."

Asked concerning the progress of the steel business, Mr. Davis said labor-saving machines have done little to take the burden of hard work from employes in sheet mills and at puddling furnaces.

A five-day week, the secretary said, likely will come some time.

He lauded President Hoover's efforts for relief of the unemployment situation. He cited the President's restricted immigration plan and also the $8,000,000 expenditure for public improvements to relieve the jobless.

Other guests here today included Col. Jarvis J. Bain, U. S. engineer in charge of the Pittsburgh area, and Congressmen M. L. Strawn and J. R. Leech.

The party had lunch at the Penn-Grant Hotel and Davis was slated for a speech late today at Gristio Park. Dr. S. J. Mains, secretary of the river improvement body, was to preside and introduce the speakers.

19 Seized in Raid On Wheeling Cafe

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 27.—William (Bill) Lias and 16 of his alleged henchmen were arrested by federal officers here today after a raid last night on the Cafe of the Allies, South Market street. Tear gas bombs were used during the raid. Two complete bars were found in operation.

Lias, who had served a term in Atlanta, was released under $2,000 bond for a hearing Tuesday and the others were released under $1,500 each. Undercover agents have been at work in the district for two months and 12 of them took part in the raids today, warrants being issued by United States Commissioner John W. Kindelberger.

Sun-Telegraph Offers Prizes for Flower Photos

The Sun-Telegraph will offer cash prizes for photographs of the loveliest home-grown flowers. If you have some prize flowers photograph them, either in the garden or as a bouquet. # POLES TO HOLD JUBILEE MEET

Pittsburgh has been named as one of the 50 American cities in which the golden jubilee of the Polish National Alliance of America will be celebrated. Beginning last August 10 and continuing until January 1, 50 mass meetings in as many cities in the United States will be held to celebrate the beginning of the Polish fraternal organization.

C. W. Sypniewski

October 5 has been assigned for the celebration in Pittsburgh which will be held in Soldiers' Memorial Hall. Attorney C. W. Sypniewski of Pittsburgh and the highest officer of the Alliance will be one of the principal speakers. Other activities during the day will include services in St. Stanislaus Church, Twenty-first and Smallman streets.

The local committee is headed by Dr. Thad A. Starzynski, chairman; John Maslowski and Mrs. Henry Kazmierski, vice chairmen; W. Sierocki and B. Budrewicz, secretaries; A. Dretkiewicz, treasurer; W. Borkowski, marshal. Dr. A. S. Mallek is chairman of the program committee and M. Roszycki is secretary.

OPEN SALVATION ARMY CAMPAIGN

The Salvation Army will open its tenth annual home service appeal Wednesday. The campaign will be conducted for 11 days during which time a house to house canvass will be conducted throughout the county.

The appeal will close October 11 with the annual Red Shield tag day. The home service fund is used for all Army relief activities here and all funds contributed are [illegible] in the county.

Lieut. Col. Charles B. Campbell, divisional commander, has called attention to the fact that the Army does not employ paid solicitors in its annual campaign, nor does it pay any commissions on money collected.

Judge Joseph Buffington has been named president of the advisory board and will be assisted by H. C. McEldowney and Attorney George E. Alter.

JEALOUSY—MOST CRUEL PAIN

Copyright, 1930, by N. Y. American, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

> Of all the emotions, passions, feelings, hatreds, and suffering that drive and whip mankind, the worst is JEALOUSY. It creates the phantoms upon which it lives. It torments itself deliberately, and tears open its own wounds. It listens, seeking with infinite cunning to obtain knowledge that will be, to it, like sharp daggers. There is no AGONY like Jealousy, no DESPAIR so great, no HOPELESSNESS so absolute. Fight against THIS, the worst of all the plagues that torment unfortunate human beings.

"Jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame."
—The Song of Songs, VIII, 6.

FEW living, deliberately and knowing what they were doing, would torture another human being with a red-hot iron. But there are millions that have inflicted and do inflict upon others a suffering more intense than any burning, or any tearing or stretching on the rack. The suffering that jealousy inflicts upon its victims is so fearful that no words describe it. Jealousy is so fiendishly persistent, following the victim into sleep and into dreams, that no other persecution can be compared with it.

The greatest geniuses that have written have endeavored to express jealousy and its pain, but not one has expressed it. It is a suffering, an agony beyond expression. It deadens and tightens the heart, benumbs the brain, yet adds acuteness to every faculty, magnifies every fact by ten thousand, and CREATES self-torturing facts where there are none.

Beware of jealousy is the best advice that can be given to man or woman, yet, unfortunately, it is advice absolutely wasted.

In this striking cartoon Mr. McCay shows, with his usual great power, how jealousy torments itself, watching and spying to increase its own suffering, how all sorts of evil assist and urge and suggest fresh horrors.

The extract at the top of this article is one of the most powerful in the Bible, yet it expresses jealousy but feebly.

Shakespeare does his best with the words he puts into the mouth of Othello, old, black, ugly and married to a young wife whom he unjustly suspects:

(Othello, Act III., Scene III.)

"She's gone, I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses."

When Shakespeare makes Othello say that he would rather be a toad and live upon the vapour of a dungeon than suffer the pangs of jealousy, he puts it very mildly.

He might also have made Othello say that he would rather be condemned to the lowest pit in Hell, to suffer there the worst agony that human or Satanic imagination has ever invented, rather than endure the mental torment of jealousy.

Physical pain has its limits, it is only torture of the BODY. Mental pain has no limit, it tortures the soul and the spirit.

And of all torturing, jealousy is the worst.

About jealousy, and such a picture as this, portraying jealousy as it is, little that is helpful, constructive or useful, unfortunately, can be written.

Hundreds of thousands of men and ten times as many women in this country are slowly dying of jealousy as you read this. Their spirits are drying up; they know not a happy day or a happy hour. And, apparently, there is no help for them. If only they could know how others feel, if they could realize the excess of despair and frenzy in other hearts, they might control the bitter sorrow in their own.

Byron, crippled, therefore self-doubting, suffered jealous pangs, as did Shapespeare. Of jealousy Byron said that it was "as though the dead could feel the icy worm around them steal, and shudder as the reptiles creep to revel o'er their rotten sleep, without the power to scare away those cold consumers of their clay." That is strong, but not as strong as jealousy.

Jealousy is the most unfortunate, the most utterly wasteful of all the passions that agitate and torment the mind. It injures itself and can do others no good. It brings upon itself that which it fears; men and women, jealous without cause, often by the irritating force of jealousy create the cause.

Burke said: "A jealous lover lights his torch from the firebrand of the fiend." And it is true, except that the fire of jealousy is worse than any imaginary real fire.

Jealousy not only believes what it does not know, but creates horrible imaginary scenes and circumstances with which to torment itself. "What frenzy dictates, jealousy believes."

No microscope ever magnified the object on the slide as watchful jealousy magnifies every little incident in life. "Trifles, light as air, are, to the jealous, confirmation strong as proofs of Holy Writ." Trifles are taken as proofs, and the very absence of them is taken as proof.

It has been said most foolishly that jealousy is close to love. It is as far from love as the grave is from happy life. Truer is the saying, "Jealousy is the sister of love, as the devil is the brother of angels."

Cervantes, the great Spaniard, says that jealousy makes "of dwarfs giants, of suspicions truths."

They say that jealousy is the offspring of love. But a saying with more truth is that "unless the parent make haste to strangle the child, the child will not rest until it has poisoned the parent."

Occasionally, those that suffer pain actually find relief in increasing it, as a child will press upon a sore tooth. Jealousy constantly seeks to increase its own agony. The real horror of jealousy, the wasted strength, wasted watching, wasted hating and wasted hoping can never be expressed.

Read to a jealous man or woman these lines by Darcy:

"Ten thousand furies lash my soul with whips,
At ev'ry look sharp stings transfix my heart,
And my chill blood thrills cold through ev'ry vein."

You will be told: "That does not half express it."

Hannah More wrote:

"O jealousy, thou ugliest fiend of hell! thy deadly venom preys on my vitals, turns the healthful hue of my fresh cheek to haggard sallowness, and drinks my spirit up."

Strong words, but feeble, compared with jealousy, as any jealous spirit will tell you.

It is with jealousy, as with some other misfortunes, such as drink and gambling, argument, remonstrance or sympathy, do little good.

The answer to all that can be said is: "Yes, but YOU do not KNOW."

It is useless to tell the jealous person how little the object of the jealousy amounts to, how little worthy that object is.

Jealousy is a tyrant, a master, a torturer, a monster—as Spenser says:

"Yet is there one more cursed than they all,
That canker-worm, that monster, jealousie,
Which eats the heart and feeds upon the gall."

Perhaps some that suffer jealous torments, if they could know how many thousands of others suffer as they do, how worthless, without purpose it all is, might find some comfort and relief. But it is doubtful.

The best to be hoped from an editorial on jealousy is that it may cause thought, perhaps remorse and self-control, in some of those that inflict upon others, through jealousy, the worst torments that the human spirit can possibly endure.

Every man that inflicts jealousy's torment upon a woman, and every woman inflicting the pain of jealousy upon a man, if they know that they do it and continue it without remorse, are torturers that persist in torturing. And they inflict pain worse than could be inflicted with whips and coals of fire.

Nazimova's Agent Given An Earful

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

ELMER KENYON is in town. The Theater Guild sent him back to his native village to tell its women's clubs and other organizations all about Alla Nazimova, Turgenev (Ivan Sergyevitch Turgenev) and "A Month in the Country." [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. [illegible] Turgenev and "A Month in the Country" as a matter of course.

We are obliging Elmer in this respect—that is, we think we have published his plug for the author [illegible]

We had expected [illegible] the Stepper, flourishing a smoking bomb and a membership card in the Soviet Republic—or whatever it is called officially. Instead of which he was clean shaven and the smoke that curled around his head was from an American cigaret and not a bomb.

It appears that the realism with which the Guild stages its Russian plays does not extend to its press and exploitation departments, hence

STEPPER

From Europe and Harlem Comes Varied Amusement To Pittsburgh Theaters

By GEORGE SEIBEL

EUGENIE LEONTOVICH, coming to the Alvin Theater this week, they say is Russian. The comedy, "Candlelight," in which she appears, is taken from the German of Siegfried Geyer. And the adaptation to American taste has been accomplished by that amusing Briton, P. G. Wodehouse. There may be a few Turks, Portuguese and Patagonians concealed somewhere about the Alvin stage to carry out the portentous foreign atmosphere—but a cursory examination of the basic plot of "Candlelight" gives me the impression that we have just another variation of "She Stoops to Conquer."

Need Not Grumble About That

If that is so, we need not grumble. Goldsmith's comedy was good enough for generations of dramatists as a model. Sad to record, few of them have been Goldsmiths, and many of them have been [illegible].

There is an old proverb, "Choose neither women nor linen by candlelight," which is the reason why of the title. In the comedy a valet masquerades as his master and a maid as her lady, while the real gentleman and the real lady masquerade as the servants.

Plenty of opportunity for humor in that, and we know that Wodehouse can be very humorous, whether he is embroidering Goldsmith or Molnar.

It happens that I saw Eugenie Leontovich in the play about Samuel Pepys, "And So to Bed," in which she played Mistress Pepys. There was little Russian about her except the suggestion of the name. Yet they say that eight years ago she could not speak a word of English. Her case has been somewhat similar to that of Leo Ditrichstein—poor Leo Ditrichstein, who died in Florence just as he was beginning to enjoy life!

Ditrichstein was in the old Irving Place Company playing in German. He went to one of the theatrical Napoleons and asked, "If I learn English, will you give me an engagement?" The rest is history.

Many great actors have come to the American stage in this way. Albert Bruning, who recently died, leaving Mary Hall a widow, came to America from Germany with Edwin Booth. Modjeska, Janauschek, Nazimova and a dozen others could be named easily.

The Lady Leontovich is a good comedienne, with just a tang of the exotic to give her work special piquancy. We'll look at her by "Candlelight" to confirm this impression.

There's Mabel Kroman

But speaking of foreign stars, there's Mabel Kroman. Isn't she a Dane like Hamlet? She is rather proud of the fact, so there is no reason to conceal it. I have met her father and her mother and can assure the public that the Danes are a highly civilized people. And the public knows that the Danes, as typified by Mabel and her sister, Ann Forrest, are also good actors.

Now this Danish star in our Pittsburgh skies, along with Jean May and the rest of George Sharp's Players, will have another chance to shine in the first mystery thriller the Pitt has offered this season. "The Wasp's Nest," it is called, but there is no reason to believe that the patrons will be stung. The stock company always does well in such things. It is a lark to mystify and scare the audience, and they enjoy the lark.

And it is a pleasure now to confirm the earlier impression that George Sharp has one of the best companies he has ever had and that their hard and intelligent work is meeting with deserved appreciation from large audiences. Along with the other

Indifferent Audiences Just Suffer

By GILBERT W. GABRIEL,

By GILBERT W. GABRIEL,

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.

AT THE END of a fortnight of many plays, all sorts and condition of plays, there is not much left to hail excepting Frank Craven's amusing comedy, "That's Gratitude." And, while I am grateful and all that, I find myself doing what I often do in the theater itself, leaving the stage alone and looking around the audience.

I think our American audiences are peculiarly unfriendly. Not unfriendly to the play, but among themselves. I cannot see how any crowd can gather for the specific purpose of seeing the same play, the same footlighted glimpse of life through the same keyholes, and not experience a certain sense of comradeship and at least passing friendship for each other.

Sociability Absent

Audiences in Chinese theaters are always passing the teacups and hot towels and preserved delicacies. Audiences in Germany are always devoting their intermissions to beer and wurst and a free-for-all philosophical discussion of the play. There's no such effort towards camaraderie over here. We may go out and churn around the sidewalk between acts, but we never get beyond borrowing a match from the other man.

In fact, the air I sniff in every New York theater is full of suspicious, almost hostile "Yeah, well, what are you doing here?"

I've noticed that the rougher the play the more polite its audience is. And of course vice versa. I can't give good reasons for it. It's simply so.

Patrician Boors

Behind me the other night at a play which was at least enormously sincere and sometimes rather touching sat a party of New York's richest and proudest New Yorkers. Their bell-wether was a celebrated young banker, a gentleman with better blood in him than he evidently deserves, and to either side of him sat ladies of a most patrician caste. I am sure of that because of their thin necks, their loud voices and their bad grammar.

Now, I'm rather used to rudeness in the theater. Especially in the upper-class theater. My business made me attend the Metropolitan Opera every night

'Luana' Is Minus 'Nina Rosa' Click

By BUSHNELL DIMOND

ROY ROGERS is one of the cut-ups of the stage presentation in the Enright.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.

"LUANA" AND "Nina Rose" have enough superficial points in common to crowd a page with their enumeration. Each is a sumptuous, expensive, lengthy, declamatory, color-bright musical comedy. And between the two lies the great and unfathomable gulf that separates a dull evening from a delightful one.

My critical acumen is not sharp enough to tell just why "Luana" should be a scarcely mitigated bore and "Nina Rosa"—which is just as conventionally patterned—great fun. But I imagine that some fingering of situation, some imaginative touch in the direction makes the difference.

Contrast of Scenes

Let me illustrate that remark by taking a "big scene" from each production and contrasting their treatment. In "Luana" the whole sweep of the action is pointed up toward that moment when the disconsolate Hawaiian princess, deserted by her white husband, seeks to appease her gods by plunging into the flaming throat of Mont Pelee.

It should be, even in operetta, a good smashing scene, redolent of Sardou. But the emotion never comes off, for the reason that the monotony of the girl's character has become so intolerable that her extinction is a relief—that, and the fact that so much pageantry has preceded the suicide (which should come like the blow of a knife) that your eyes are dim and your mind wanders.

Agony Effective

In "Nina Rosa" the librettist has contrived a crisis in the second act that is quite the most effective thing of its sort since the blood-drinking scene in "Show Boat." The wicked gaucho has trapped the brave young American engineer and tied him to the whipping post. Lash in hand, he is about to cut his victim to ribbons. But it is not to be. The heroine, who, oddly, is named Nina Rosa, cries out that she, she who hates this gringo—if isn't true—must wield the knout. This provides a vigorous fillip to the villain's delightfully simple sadism.

He hands the lady the whip and tells her to do the job;

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.

There is a rumor that some of the heavy monied interests have sent out sleuths to find out about the moral angle of Hollywood. If this is true I am afraid the sleuths are doomed to disappointment. There is less dissipation in Hollywood than there has been at any time. The talkies are making it necessary for stars to work night and day. The chief interest of our motion picture folk is to make good pictures and anything that would tend to lessen their chances is put out of their lives as harmful. There have never been so few all-night parties in the history of this town. I venture to say if Hollywood were to be contrasted with any city of its size in the United States Hollywood would be given a clean bill of health. Just because a few motion picture people get the reputation of being high flyers our town gets the name of being a second [illegible] Gomorrah.

Movie Man Throws Party for Film Ape

By BLAND JOHANESON

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.

WHAT FUN, what freaky fun, the movies have afforded this wretched little village this week! Nothing as ordinary as a visiting movie star, a new underworld picture, a startling announcement about wide film! The boys have been hard at it to give the citizens some unique stunts.

First United Artists tips off dignity and steps out in its undies to announce the inauguration of a "rumor department," to tell anyone who asks embarrassing questions not to be a dunce. The rumor department happens to be identical with the press agent department, both incarnate in one Mr. Warren Noah, who thought up the dual personality right out of his own dear little head. The first thing the rumor department did was formally to deny the rumor that Gloria Swanson was in town.

Monkey Business

Then the enterprising Mr. Al Selig, of Tiffany, gives a party to introduce an ape. Mr. Tiffany Chimp, star of the popular all-talking monkey comedies, appears in town to preview his latest releases and to meet the critics. The debonair Mr. Chimp, "Tiff" to the boys, is being lugged around to luncheons, interviewed and feted like any star. His discretion and simplicity have been pronounced exquisite. His charm has been extolled. And he has not been involved in scandal.

The Warner stunt of the week has been to fill the Hollywood Theater exclusively with newspaper people for the opening show of "Outward Bound." Not a Broadway celebrity in the place. One hundred newspaper people, sober and in clean collars. Also from Warners: A living stenographer and a living tired business man pose on the Winter Garden marquee in a provocative scene from "The Office Wife," so that all the suspicious wives in town may get an advance taste of the revelations in the photodrama.

Then the Capitol comes out and pays Al Jolson $20,000 and a percentage of the gross to play one week of personal appearances. Biggest money ever

GRAND OPERA opens here Monday for nine performances, but the advent of the Chicago and Metropolitan songbirds will in no way affect the happy carrying on of the legitimate stage.

While Queena Mario and Gigli are warbling the melodious strains of "La Boheme" in Shrine Auditorium, Pauline Frederick will be playing her first night in "The Crimson Hour" in the Belasco. # The Screen and Its Players

Barthelmess Gives Mates Full Chance

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

[illegible]

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.

THE SPOILED, petted movie star who seeks a monopoly on closeups and who considers his part the only role of consequence in the entire picture is no more. Better stories and a more even distribution of acting honors is evident in all the screen successes of the current year.

Richard Barthelmess, who for eight years or more has been under contract to First National and who for 13 years has been a picturesque figure on the screen, encouraged all concerned to build up the part given young Douglas Fairbanks in "The Dawn Patrol."

Rival for Star

"It is a part," he said, "in many ways better than my own. But it will weaken the story if we take away anything from its strength."

Young Doug, grateful to Dick for his attitude, says that he owes what success he has achieved in this picture to Mr. Barthelmess.

"Dick discussed the character of 'Spotty' with me and paid as much attention to it as he did to that of Courtney, the Barthelmess stellar role," said young Doug. "I shall always feel that he has been largely responsible in giving me my greatest chance."

How much better than if young Doug were to say:

"The part was good, but it was killed in the cutting room. It interfered with Barthelmess' chance to make Courtney a dominating factor."

Of the Old Guard

Perhaps Dick's appreciation of the importance of each individual characterization is the reason that he alone remains of the old guard who started with David Wark Griffith. He, too, is the only remaining survivor of the expensive First National galaxy, namely Corinne Griffith, Colleen Moore, Billie Dove and Alice White.

"Why were you willing to let Douglas Fairbanks and Neil Hamilton share your honors?" I asked. "Why didn't you demand that they be sidetracked?"

Dick, who, in his quiet way has steadily plowed ahead each year gaining in popularity and refusing the shortcuts to spectacular success, smiled.

"I learned about the value of individual characterizations from David Wark Griffith," he said. "If you saw 'Broken Blossoms' and 'Way Down East' you will know that neither Lillian Gish nor I alone made the picture. Lowell Sherman in 'Way Down East' was as potent a factor and George Biegmann as the father in 'Broken Blossoms' was just as much of a figure

JOE COOK appears to have been caught at something or other—maybe both; you never can tell. In "Rain or Shine," screen feature in the Stanley, you see how it comes out. It's a film of Cook's recent stage vehicle.

Swanson Not Too Proud To Praise Her Associates

By JERRY HOFFMAN,

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.

TOURISTS STOPPED their cars and rudely gaped at us seated on the portico. Oddly enough, the resentment was all on my part—to Gloria Swanson it mattered not.

It was her home and her porch. The morning sun was too inviting to permit conversation indoors. If people chose to stare—why let them!

Meanwhile I racked my brain for a topic of conversation. What to write? Seemingly everything that could be said has been written regarding Gloria Swanson. From the time of her birth in Chicago writers have traced every episode in her life through schoolgirl years at the art institute there, the early days at Mack Sennett's, and her successive marriages to Wallace Beery, Herbert Somborn and the Marquis De La Falaise.

For Public Schools

Thus I worried while we discussed casually the various pictures she had made. Our talk drifted to children, and I was quite surprised to discover Gloria Swanson's enthusiasm for public schools. Both her children, Gloria, age 9, and the younger brother attended a grammar school in Beverly Hills.

Naturally I had thought they were sent to the most private of private educational institutions. Miss Swanson doesn't disapprove of them, in fact plans them for her children, but at a certain time of their lives.

A young man employed by Gloria for several years approached. While he was still out of hearing she praised him to me.

"I've been very fortunate with those associated with me," she remarked—almost gratefully.

I had my story. A film star really loyal to those who work for her. Oh, there were other subjects one could seize upon. I could tell of how anxious Gloria is to do various types of characters, changing them in each of her pictures. Frankly, while all that seems very interesting I can't get over the thrill of a beautiful woman occupying a glorious position in the eyes of the world, sought by royalty and worshiped by men and women who says gratefully, naively that she is fortunate because of those who work for her.

Two Boyds Are Friends

By KENNETH R. PORTER,

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.

WHAT'S IN a name?

"Plenty," said William Boyd (of the stage), "especially if two people have the same name and are in the same profession."

Which is exactly the situation. There is, and has been for several years, a William Boyd who began his career on the screen. With the invasion of stage people to Hollywood came another William Boyd, born of ancestors linked to the American theater. Both now are favorites in their respective positions. A delightful friendship exists between them.

However the confusion wrought by by such a coincidence is strangely amusing. To add to an already complicated affair, the Boyd boys live practically within hearing distance of each other in the same street. Imagine the likely tangle.

The meeting of the pair was satirically funny, as related by the Broadway Boyd.

"I was appearing in a play at a local theater when I first met my namesake," said Bill. "The colored stage attendant came to my dressing room after my first performance and announced that a William Boyd would like to see me. I hesitated, not thinking of the screen Boyd, but finally said to show him in. It was a perfect introduction."

Some Confusion

It was some time before the two met again and in different surroundings. In the meantime telephone messages, mail and deliveries were constantly becoming confused with subsequent banter and kidding from both.

"We are both subject to practical jokes. I was never so tempted as when I received a fan letter from an ardent admirer of William Boyd. The girl declared she was in love with a William Boyd and it was rather discouraging to discover she meant Bill, for she proposed marriage. I was about to forward a ticket and have her come out as a surprise for Bill when I thought of the same thing happening to me. No, it just wouldn't do—not even for a laugh.

"Say," said Bill in conclusion, "don't forget this interview is with William Boyd of the stage."

La Swanson, Joe Cook in New Talkies

By MILDRED FILLMORE

GLORIA SWANSON goes in for clothes in a big way in her newest talk film, "What a Widow." In fact, her appearance is heralded as being a regular fashion show. She wears almost 30 different dresses, negligees and wraps.

The picture, which is the Penn booking, is Miss Swanson's first comedy in several seasons. She is seen as a romantic young madcap who suddenly finds herself the possessor of a million dollars and a restless urge to go places and do things. The story transports its characters across the Atlantic in a luxurious liner and back again in a mammoth airplane.

Lew Cody, who hasn't been prominent on the screen for some time, has a part in "What a Widow." Other players include Owen Moore, Margaret Livingston and William Holden. The film was directed by Allan Dwan.

Comes Joe Cook

The new booking in the Stanley is "Rain or Shine," based on the stage production of that name. And it has Joe Cook, the one-man show, in the same role he portrayed in the original version. The picture is heralded as a hilarious comedy.

Romance is brought into the production by Joan Peers and William Collier, Jr. The cast also includes Louise Fazenda, movie comedienne, and Tom Howard, the droll fellow from the legitimate stage.

Another of those rough-riding, gun-barking westerns is in the Aldine. It is titled "The Last of the Duanes" and is based on the Zane Grey story.

George O'Brien has the starring role. Others in the cast include Myrna Loy and Lucile Brown.

The story concerns a cowboy who returns home to find his father murdered by a shot in the back. He discovers the murderer, avenges him and becomes an outlaw. In the course of events he is charged with various crimes, but always manages to elude the law. And then he meets the girl.

Movie Gangster

"The Czar of Broadway" is the feature on the Harris screen. It presents the story of a man who rules the underworld of the earth's maddest city with an iron hand, of a man who dictates how hundreds should live—and when they should die. And this sure sounds melodramatic. However, we have been quoting the exploitation sheets.

John Wray, last seen as Himmelstoss in "All Quiet on the Western Front," is cast as the gang leader. Betty Compson, who had a weary time of it with Richard Barthelmess in "Weary River," has the leading feminine role. Other players are King Baggott, John Harron and Edmund Breese.

The Warner is presenting "Scarlet Pages" for a second week. This is a courtroom drama. The cast features Elsie Ferguson, John Halliday, Marion Nixon and Grant Withers.

The new picture in the Sheridan Square is "Leathernecking." It is a comedy drama dealing with Marine Corps life. The cast features Benny Rubin, Ken Murray, Louise Fazenda, Lilyan Tashman and Ned Sparks.

"The Last of the Lone Wolf" is the attraction in the Enright. And again it is Bert Lytell in the Lone Wolf role. Patsy Ruth Miller is the heroine.

The Garden is presenting Jack Oakie in "Let's Go Native."

WEST

MYRNA LOY has a leading role in "The Last of the Duanes," western film on Aldine program.

True Mozart Atmosphere In Concerts

By J. FRED LISSFELT,

SALZBURG.

A RAINY summer that was killing the dispositions of tourists as well as the harvests suddenly broke into glaring sunshine for 10 days in Salzburg, and the chalky paving stones soon became thick with white dust, while pedestrians scudded their way to the festival halls. In Cafe Bazaar on the town bridge, and in the narrow streets one meets the old standbys and a lot of inquisitive newcomers.

Franz Schalk, the veteran Viennese Mozart conductor, has already passed when Bruno Walter raises his hand in greeting Louise Willer, Munich's Waltraute; Moissi, Reinhardt's Everyman; Richard Mayr, the incomparable Baron Ochs from "Rosenkavalier," sip their afternoon coffee. Their students, in excited approbation or disapproval of a concert, or mountain climbers with guttural dialects add their voices to the hurly-burly of the noon-day crowd.

In Two Groups

The entertainments of the festival falls into two groups, stage productions and concerts. Let us consider the concerts first, for they remain truer to the original purpose of the Salzburg jubilee, that is to Mozart.

The finest Mozart during the month is played during the Serenades concerts made up of his most charming dances, romances and other miniature compositions and performed by the strings and woodwinds of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. The strings of this orchestra have an honest reputation for their warmth. Nowhere else do they show to such advantage as in these delicate Mozart symphonies. The Serenades play at twilight in the court of the archbishop's residenz; the setting is quite as it was in Mozart's day, and the public comes more in the spirit of worship than when it attends the theater.

Entirely Mozart

But we must not forget the exhilarating orchestral program dedicated entirely to Mozart, and led by Schalk. In style, perfection of orchestral technique, sheer beauty of tone, this concert will always stand out in our recollection of orchestral music. The concert came sixth among programs which included Mahler and Bruckner, Brahms and Beethoven, Old Viennese and French music.

Clemens Krauss directs the romantic music. He is a young and vigorous spirit, whose tempo and unfailing beat create irresistible nuances. Bruno Walter finds his place between Schalk and Krauss. His devotion to Mahler has made his reading of those scores authoritative, and though we heard only the "Kindestotenlieder," under his baton we sat dumb in the spirit of their overwhelming pathos. Beethoven's "Egmont" overture and the Tschaikowsky "Pathetique" symphony completed this program of ecstatic depression.

Choral Music

'Rain or Shine' Stanley Picture

"Rain or Shine" is on the Stanley screen. Starring Joe Cook, the maniacal "one-man show," in the same role that he portrayed in the stage version.

"Rain or Shine" is said to tell a rollicking story. Romance is brought into the picture by Joan Peers and William Collier, Jr. Louise Fazenda and Tom Howard also are in the cast. On the Stanley stage Ed Lowry is present in a second Warner-Publix revue, "Dollies Follies." It includes a number of featured entertainers. Lowry offers a new dance routine. Bernie Armstrong is at the organ.

Bill Robinson Star in Nixon

"Brown Buddies," new Negro musical comedy co-featuring Bill Robinson and Adelaide Hall, will be presented at the Nixon Monday night. It was written by Carl Hickman. There are two acts and 10 scenes with 19 musical numbers. Bill Robinson, noted tap dancer, who heads the show, was a vaudeville headliner for many years. Miss Hall is a star of international fame, popular in Paris as she is in New York. The supporting cast includes Ada Brown, Alma Smith, Shelton Brooks, James A. Lillard, John Mason, "Little Ferdie" Lewis, Putney Dandridge, Andrew Tribble, Charles Moseley and Carroll Tate.

A REVOLVER speaks in this scene from "The Last of the Lone Wolf," Enright film, and it says "Hands up." So Bert Lytell, being a wise Lone Wolf as well as a wise actor, takes his cue and up goes his hands. The film is another of a series of crook tales.

More Films For Arliss

George Arliss, whose "Old English" is proving a worthy successor to "Disraeli," is expected to return from his vacation in England soon with a few plays by an English author. He intends to star in one on Broadway in what will be his first stage appearance since his first Vitaphone appearance.

He will, however, continue to make pictures for Warner Brothers. Two vehicles are now ready for him: "The Devil," the Molnar play in which he successfully scored on the stage, and "The Ruling Passion," based on the novel by Earl Derr Biggers, the dialogue for which has been specially prepared for Mr. Arliss by Booth Tarkington.

Warner Retains 'Scarlet Pages'

"Scarlet Pages" has been held over at the Warner for a second week. Elsie Ferguson, Marian Nixon, Grant Withers and John Halliday have the leading roles. The plot of the film is that of a woman who had to leave her child in an orphanage because she was penniless. And then 19 years later, famous and respected, she is called upon to defend the child against the entire world.

Sheridan Books 'Leathernecking'

"Leathernecking," a comedy drama of the Marine Corps, is the new feature on the Sheridan Square screen. A number of songs are featured in the production. The cast includes Irene Dunne, Ken Murray, Louise Fazenda, Ned Sparks, Lilyan Tashman, Eddie Foy, Jr., Benny Rubin, Rita La Roy, Fred Santley and Carl Gerard. Short screen entertainment is on the bill.

Newman Series Here October 14

E. M. Newman, traveltalker, will return to Pittsburgh with a new series of traveltalks. These will be offered for five consecutive Tuesday evenings, beginning October 14, in Carnegie Music Hall. The titles will be "Seeing Italy," "Rome and the Vatican City," "Oberammergau," "Switzerland" and "La Vie de Paris."

Beegle Concert Offers Baritone

John Charles Thomas, baritone, is to be one of the early attractions in the May Beegle concerts at Syria Mosque. Thomas first became known as star in the operettas "Maytime" and "Apple Blossoms." It was not long after his success in these that he was claimed by the more searching and exacting field of concert and opera.

From Europe and Harlem Comes Varied Amusement To Pittsburgh Theaters

[illegible] Broadway success, [illegible] "Brown Buddies," [illegible] comedy [illegible] Bill Robinson and Adelaide Hall, with about 60 colored singers, dancers and comedians are in the cast.

One thing we are sure of in these Harlem revues is good singing and dancing. The comedy also has often a flavor of racial humor that is refreshing, ranging from "The Green Pastures" down to Amos 'n' Andy.

Bill Robinson has been known as the "Dark Cloud of Joy" and has been in vaudeville for about 30 years. His staircase dance is a rhythmic revelation [illegible] in neatness and finish.

Adelaide Hall, his partner, has a very pleasing voice and personality, and they say she's as popular in Paris as in Gotham. She was born in Brooklyn and made her first appearance as a showgirl in "Shuffle Along." Now she is being named as the successor of Florence Mills and the rival of Josephine Baker.

She puts her artistic gospel into four words—"Nothing succeeds like pep." And it is safe to predict that there will be plenty of pep in this Nixon revue of "Brown Buddies," which tells about some African war heroes from East St. Louis.

Stars Seek Quiet Life

Just as the seamen have "shore leave" so do the Hollywood players, between their picture appearances, have their "leave of absence."

Disappearing with no forwarding address bringing interruptions to their leisure they start out to fulfill their own type of amusement.

So secretive has Joan Crawford been as to her preference that no one has been able to penetrate her hide-away. Greta Garbo is another whose rest periods are taken away from "the madding crowds."

Zane Grey Film Aldine Booking

Adapted to the talking screen from Zane Grey's novel, "Last of the Duanes," featuring George O'Brien, is the feature screen attraction in the Aldine. The story centers around Buck Duane, a fearless two-gun outlaw, and the beautiful girl he daringly rescues from the leader of a dangerous band of cattle thieves. Later he is instrumental in exterminating the rustlers and as a result earns a pardon for killing the man who murdered his father. The cast includes Lucile Browne, Myrna Loy, Walter McGrail, James Bradbury, Jr., and Nat Pendleton. Gene Dennis, the psychic demonstrator, is appearing on the stage for a final week.

Clara Bow Signs Again

Clara Bow has signed a new contract assuring her services for a further period to Paramount Publix Corporation, the company under whose banner she reached her ascendancy on the screen. Miss Bow's new contract, which starts October 1, will mark the beginning of her fifth year as a Paramount player and her fourth year as a star, this short span of time covering one of the most meteoric climbs in screen history.

Yost Quartet Gets Cellist

Samuel Khachko, Russian cellist, has arrived in Pittsburgh to accept the post as cellist with the Yost String Quartet. He will also teach at the Pittsburgh Musical Institute. Mr. Khachko was born in Kiev, Russia. In 1914, he appeared as soloist with the Odessa Capitol Theater Orchestra before the late Czar Nicholas II. In 1920 he came to America and joined the Philadelphia Orchestra. Later he was cellist with the New York Symphony Orchestra.

for seven seasons; and I found this an excellent training in the art of trodding on toes without apologies, and of disrupting a whole row of shirt-fronts with never a grunt of thanks. I'm no cranky stickler.

Worse Than Actors

But I fled before the silly, coltish behavior of those silver-spooned children of nature who were sitting just behind me at the play. They'd let me hear precious little of it. They'd given me a five times more insistent and annoying performance than the actors had. Whenever anyone left the stage, for instance, they'd all cutely croon "good-bye." There wasn't a gram of whit in a whole cocktail-shakerful of them. I decided then and there to put my money in an old farm instead of a bank, and go to the Catskills instead of Newport for my next vacation.

I happen to believe in honest heckling. I wish there were a great deal more of it in American theaters. It would help our playwrights and especially our players vastly to be hissed and hooted whenever they deserved it. It would at least prove that the audience is interested. In the final analysis, a rude audience never is really as rude as an indifferent one.

Adversity Beneficial

Over the world, in hot and cold countries, in tropical music halls and everlasting cathedrals of grand opera, I have seen and heard some cruel audiences at work. Heartily at work, yowling and cat-calling, hurling fruit and taunts and inelegant compliments. That's exciting—exciting for one and all, both sides of the footlights—and invigorating and sternly right. Great artists have been born of a wave of antagonism. (Henry Irving, for instance) who would have petered out to mediocrity if coddled in the sweet tepidity of a typical American first-night.

When an audience expresses itself it saves the critics a lot of dirty work. I've often wished the audience would. I've always come away from a play, any and every play, faintly depressed by the impression that the audience around me hadn't much cared either this way or that. Not since "What Price Glory?" have I heard a play genuinely cheered for more than a minute's ovation. I can't remember ever having heard a play hissed in New York.

It isn't the theater that is dead. It is the audience that is perennially half-dead. The audience that takes it out in bad manners towards its fellow members, and giggles and yawns, and then wonders why the critics are all such nervous dyspeptics.

The late Lawrence Reamer, most cultured of critics, once advised me, "Never criticize the audience." And under his breath he added, "Never look at them, either."

Arlen Now Sea Diver

"The Sea God," a unique and mysterious romance told on shipboard, on the ocean's floor and on a cannibal island, has gone into production in Hollywood with Richard Arlen and Fay Wray featured.

Arlen plays the role of a reckless young adventurer, a deep-sea diver in the South Seas. Miss Wray is the beautiful stowaway who faces the menace of a ship's crew of desperate men. The romance of the two, the saving of the girl and the battle with fierce natives are among the high spots of the story.

News About Events in Realm of Amusements

Barthelmess Gives Mates Opportunity to Shine, Even to Own Detriment

as Miss Gish the Broken Blossom or I was as the Chinese boy."

Back to 1917

Dick who played an extra in Billie Burke's picture "Glorious Romance" in 1917 has been on the screen almost constantly since that time. He has perhaps had a greater variety of roles than any actor and more successes to his credit than any current star.

First National a few years back foolishly began giving him stories in which he was the big shot. Minor characters surrounded him and he alone occupied the spotlight. Dick was too sane to let such a condition exist for very long. After he saw "The White Black Sheep" on the screen and heard the reports on "Ransom's Folly" he took stock of himself.

Either he could continue briefly as a star who had all the stories written around him or he could go on forever with better stories and equal distribution of acting honors.

Is Not Conceited

Dick has little self conceit. He knew the day was waning when stars were the center of attraction. He asked for stories with more backbone and which were not to be obviously written with him in mind.

He got such pictures as "The Patent Leather Kid" "Drag" "Young Nowhere" and "Son of the Gods" and last of all "The Dawn Patrol."

Looking over the film stars who started their careers with Griffith and who are almost without exception out of pictures we must say Dick's recipe is a good one. There is Dorothy Gish who was an ingenue with almost no competition. Dorothy has played on the stage but her film days are over. Lillian Gish has said she will never make another picture.

Constance Is Out

Constance Talmadge is happily married and although she is one of the greatest movie fans in the world seeing three or four pictures a week there is never any thought of her returning to the screen.

Carol Dempster is married to a very rich man and she has said she is definitely through with motion pictures. Poor Robert Harron has passed on. So has Claire Seymour. Mae Marsh is busy with her domestic duties.

Out of that crowd of Griffith stars Dick Barthelmess alone remains. Curiously enough he also is the last remaining star of the First National group signed by Richard Rowland when he was the head of First National.

We hate to say the proof of the pudding is in the eating. It is much too trite yet it has been proved that the star who endures is the one who realizes that the day of extensive close-ups and solo acting is over.

'Luana' and 'Nina Rosa' Much Alike But Differ

but there must be visible gore. While she flails the fainting hero (not very hard it must be admitted) she cheers him by whispering reassurance, cuts his thongs, then digging the dagger deep into her palm smears his naked back with the resultant scarlet. Now that's what I call theater."

Each Is Garish

Both productions have the advantage of some superb voices and each is garish. "Nina Rosa" in the Nnca manner, "Luana" in the fashion of "The Bird of Paradise" from which it was adapted with lamentable fidelity.

In the former Ethelind Terry, Guy Robertson and Leonard Ceeley—it seems yesterday he was warbling in Hope Hampton's "My Princess"—vocalize with consistent brilliance but, with the glittering, microscopic Armida in the cast, their laudable attempts to keep the audience's eyes on themselves proves hopeless. With Armida's dancing surging melodies by Sigmund Rombert and a weird Peruvian ballet "Nina Rosa" automatically goes into the long-run class.

Comedy Is Weak

For all I know, that may prove true of "Luana" which is splendidly sung by Ruth Altman, Robert Chisholm and Joseph Macauley. Neither show shines in the department of comedy, the Messers Jans and Whalen of "Luana" being notably dismal whereas the inoffensive Don Barclay of "Nina Rose" is merely a mild and transitory nuisance.

Make a note of the presence in "Luana" of a girl named Lillian Bond. Here you get beauty, grace and a sly humor rarely encountered simultaneously. But don't let the ineptitude of Rudolph Friml's score embarrass you. He is a first-class musician, but his latest ditties sound as if they had been composed during alternate attacks of drowsiness and perilously high fever.

McGlynn in Screen Play

Frank McGlynn who plays "Southard" the school superintendent in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of Lorna Moon's "Dark Star" was the original "Lincoln" in Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" on the stage. Though he achieved a perfect likeness by makeup in real life he does not in the least resemble Lincoln.

Mystery Drama Program in Pitt

"The Wasp's Nest" a mystery play will be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt. It was written by Adelaide Matthews and Martha Stanley. It is about a haunted house in the middle of a woods and people who stumble in through accident or design. Included in the number are a pair of train robbers, a girl in satin pajamas, a widow and her colored maid, a "ghost" a "villain" about to foreclose a mortgage on the property. There are mysterious disappearances and everything that a mystery play should have. The story will be interpreted by Jean May, Paul McGrath, John Winthrop, Mabel Kroman, Hugh Banks, Alice Ann Baker, Joseph Lawrence, Robert Fiske, Ed Vail, Catherine Maison and Chuck Webster. The curtain will rise at 8:25 at the evening performances and at 2:25 at the Thursday and Saturday matinees.

Lone Wolf's Last Stand in Enright

Louis Joseph Vance's famous hero "The Lone Wolf" alias Michael Lanyard comes to the end of his career on the screen of the Enright in "The Last of the Lone Wolf." As in "The Lone Wolf," "Alias The Lone Wolf," "The Return of the Lone Wolf" and "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," Bert Lytell is cast in the titular role. Patsy Ruth Miller portrays the leading feminine part. On the stage, in observance of National Safety Week, Dick Powell is offering "Step Lively and Stay Alive" as his revue. Roy Rogers, dancer, Wally Vernon who was master of ceremonies in St. Louis for three years, and the Three Aces, dance trio are featured. Milton Slosser, the singing organist, is on the bill.

week preparatory to casting their Viennese opera "The Violette of Montmartre" which goes into production shortly. Perry Askam probably will sing the leading male role.

Charlotte Greenwood opened in El Capitan last Sunday to her usual crowded houses. Although the play "Parlour, Bedroom and Bath" is by no means new here, the two Sunday performances were sold out and hundreds turned away. Capacity has been the rule for the past four days. Johnny Arthur is playing opposite.

Frances X Bushman and Aileen Pringle both headliners on the silver sheet will close their footlight engagement in "Thin Ice" in the Hollywood Playhouse next week.

Gloria Swanson Is Star in Penn

Gloria Swanson's latest screen offering the talking comedy "What a Widow" is now playing in the Penn. Miss Swanson sings three songs and wears many late fashion creations. The supporting cast includes Owen Moore, Lew Cody, Margaret Livingston and Daphne Pollard. The picture concerns the adventures of a romantic young madcap who suddenly finds herself the possessor of a million dollars and a restless urge to go places and do things. Allan Dwan directed the production.

Oakie Picture Garden Feature

"Let's Go Native" featuring Jack Oakie and Jeannette McDonald will be presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in the Garden. The picture Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be "Way Out West," starring William Haines.

Movie Go Round

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

is no man who has a greater knowledge of theater conditions than Harold Franklin. I am wondering if there had been less said about his job and the man who headed it if things would have been different. Too much publicity is something more dangerous than not enough. For a time you couldn't pick up a paper without reading something about Franklin. People who never had heard the name were forced to realize here was a man who was doing something big in the film business.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon have made a vow to have no more pets in their house at least unless they are antiseptic, sanitary and a few other things. When Ben went to New York he brought home a Persian kitten, a lovely looking animal. Kitty hadn't been in the house a week before she gave every member of the family ringworm. Carmelina, Bebe's maid had it worse than anyone else. She had such a bad case she had to be taken to the Santa Monica Hospital. She was home one day when Ben's two prize winning whippets developed a bad case of rabies and had to be put to death. The doctor not wishing to run any risks at once started the Pasteur treatment for everybody in the house, and especially for Carmelina, who had fondled the dogs on the day of her return. "Now I am wondering" said Bebe "if we should put the goldfish to death."

What the Marquis De La Falaise intends to do in Hollywood still is of great interest to those who like Henri. At the time he came here he was listed as foreign observer for Pathe. Then he and Joseph Kennedy split partnership and he came to Hollywood to get himself another position. At the moment he is the manager for Constance Bennett signing her contracts, helping her pass on her stories and seeing that she gets a break. His work for Gloria while he was living with her as her husband was in seeing that her pictures got the right breaks in foreign countries.

Doris Kenyon before the tragic death of Milton Sills was signed to give a concert featuring her songs at the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles. The opening day was set as October 16, but there seems to be little chance that she will be able to fulfill her engagement. She has been absolutely crushed by Milton's death. Friends have sought to comfort her but she does not seem to be able to get any hold of herself. Her mother who is one of the most wonderful women this writer has ever met has tried to make Doris realize she must live for little Kenyon Sills. If Doris could only bring herself to fill the engagement at the Philharmonic it would be the best thing in the world for her. Work is the finest panacea for grief.

Tennis is Hollywood's favorite outdoor sport and every tennis match of any consequence is sure to bring out the film folk in large numbers. Helen Wills Moody, agile, graceful and a tennis player that makes other people think they shouldn't play, was the center of attraction last Saturday. She played singles and doubles as well at the Los Angeles tennis Club and the number of screen notables who attended the meet made it look an illustration of who's who. I was interested to see many of the film names on the boxes. The Marquis De La Falaise, John Francis Dillon and scores of other names were on the boxes. What with the screen making it necessary for our stars to keep svelt figures there is no exercise as good as tennis for people under 40. Our eminent physicians will tell you however that no man or woman over 40 should play tennis.

The longer we live in Hollywood the more we realize that no one is so high and mighty that he isn't interested in the movies. We find two sons of President Rubio of Mexico in the Spanish version of "The Cat Creeps." We find the Marquis this and the Marquis that and the count this and the count that in the different studios. The two children of Warden Lawes of one of the big penitentiaries are working in Hollywood in pictures. The only ones who are not interested in motion pictures are those who have no chance. Still they come here every day.

'Candle Light' Alvin Comedy

"Candle Light" the comedy which comes to the Shubert Alvin Monday was born in Vienna of Seigfried Geyer. Adapted for the English stage by P. G. Wodehouse it ran for a year or more in London. Last autumn, Gilbert Miller reproduced it in New York where it enjoyed a run of six months in the Empire Theater. Eugene Leontovich, Russian actress, who appeared last year with "And So to Bed" plays the part of a servant maid who masquerades as her mistress to gain the affection of a supposed prince who is really the prince's valet also masquerading for the same reason. In support of Miss Leontovich are two comedians Evan Thomas and Vernon Steele. The play just completed 14 weeks in Chicago.

Mr. Nagel Takes Trip

Conrad Nagel is now bound for New York on his first vacation trip in six years. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, who has been one of the busiest actors on the coast since the arrival of talking pictures, will spend a couple of weeks in the East and see the new plays.

THE GIRL

JEANETTE MacDONALD is the girl in Jack Oakie's film "Let's Go Native" which is the Garden booking.

Indian Has Screen Role

Chief Yowlache, Indian concert singer has been cast in the role of a medicine man in "The Santa Fe Trail," Paramount's production of Hal G. Evarts' novel, "Spanish Acres."

Underworld Life In Harris Film

"The Czar of Broadway" is the current film in the Harris. John Wray, last seen as Himmelstross in "All Quiet on the Western Front" is cast as a cruel diabolical gang leader. Betty Compson has the leading feminine role. "The Czar of Broadway" is a story of a man who dictates how hundreds should live and when they should die. Short film entertainment and George van Why, organist are on the bill.

True Mozart Atmosphere Is An Enjoyable Feature In Salzburg's Concerts

formance still divulges every mark of his genius. Clarity of intention, perfection in caste and in form, fluency in melody carry the listener to heavenly heights. If the sacred concerts in Salzburg are the least successful of the season's music the causes lie more in the dearth of excellent singers than in the energy and sincerity of the participants.

One's love for the C Minor Mass sung in the St. Peter's Church for which it was originally written increases with every hearing. Though the quartet of soloists came from Vienna and Munich opera they are out of their field in this music and in these surroundings where uncertainty in rhythms and detonations are unforgiveable.

Motets and the Requiem, Mozart's swan song, suffer from the bad acoustics of the cathedral and we listen to these performances with considerable charity. The chorus, as suggested, makes up in enthusiasm what it lacks in the way of sufficient rehearsal.

Piano and song recitals by musicians from England, Italy and America are accepted with great patience. The quartet concerts are always excellent and need no apologies but the most cheered Italian baritone, whom we shall never hear this side of the Atlantic, committed every fault possible against good music in a program that was endless.

Paramount folds up its short subject department. No more shorts till next January. Maybe never.

And Roxy, beloved bishop of the cathedral of the motion picture, packs his ecclesiastic golf togs and departs for Europe to preside no more over the impressive theater he dreamed and built.

Business on Broadway was just spotty. "Big House" in the Astor spectacularly maintained its $18,000. "Hell's Angels" held at $34,000 in the Criterion and Gaiety. "Lincoln" in the Central slid slightly to $17,000. "Old English" in the Warner, clung to its neat $20,000.

Showboat Keeps Barroom Drama

"Ten Nights In a Barroom" will begin on second week's engagement on Capt. Menke's Goldenrod Showboat at Montrose just above Aspinwall, beginning Monday night. A novelty on the Golden Rod during the "Ten Nights In a Barroom" engagement is the sight of an oldtime bar that has been erected on the boat's deck. Favorites among Capt. Menke's players are featured in the drama's cast. Frank Anton, character actor, portrayed Joe Morgan. Other performers include Marie MacLain, Billie Smyre and Carl Replogle.

A Pleasant Afternoon Party

"DEAR ME!" sighed Mrs. Craig Carlton, [illegible] at her engagement pad. "I hope I've nothing [illegible] this afternoon. I motored around the Ocean Drive with Mrs. B[illegible] yesterday and I declare I'm simply exhausted. I really think I'm doing too much ... altogether too much!"

[illegible]

YOU CERTAINLY ARE [illegible]

[illegible]

CARLTON supplied a radio loudspeaker cleverly concealed behind a potted palm.

"And this is your charming daughter," went on Mrs. Egnog smoothly. "You look just like a flower, my dear."

"How do you do," said Sandie coldly.

"This charming house always fascinates me," cooed Mrs. Carlton, at the same time giving her daughter a violent pinch.

"SO SWEET OF YOU to say so," murmured Mrs. Egnog, her eyes already looking beyond them toward the next fashionable arrivals.

"Will you go into the garden," inquired the colonel of an army of flunkies who suddenly appeared at this point.

Thus encouraged they passed through a French window, [illegible] a Dutch oven, a Roman portico and finally a Turkish bath which gave on the Italian garden. Like the house it had been done in the modernistic manner with gun emplacements instead of flower beds.

"Did you ever see such execrable taste in your life?" hissed Mrs. Carlton.

"I'm black and blue where you pinched me," snapped Sandie resentfully.

"Well, you deserve it. You were barely civil to the woman and she has twice as much money as we have."

"That's your range of ethics," replied Sandie acidly. But her mother had spied Mrs. Whelper [illegible] and was beckoning to her [illegible].

* * *

"MY DEAR," [illegible] Mrs. Whelper as the two ladies greeted one another eagerly. "Have you had any of the sandwiches? [illegible] Cassandra dear! How [illegible]"

[illegible]

* * *

"I THINK SHE SAID [illegible] the girl, my dear, but the [illegible] engaged to Nesbit Noddy."

"Yes, I think so. What an extraordinary match that will make!"

"Neither of them has a cent, I hear," commented Mrs. Whelper with evident relish.

"And he drinks so terribly!"

"Oh, these young people," deplored Mrs. Whelper.

Meanwhile Sandie had cornered Alice [illegible].

"My dear, thank HEAVens you're HERE," she cried. "MOTHER insisted on me COMing with her and I'm so MAD I could SPIT!"

"Me too, my dear," replied Alice [illegible].

"MOTHER INSISTED with that POISonous old hag, Mrs. WHELPer, at this point," went on Sandie, "and my dear, I FLED in HASTE because I simply LOATHE her!"

"My dear, she's the most VILE SCANDAL MONGREL," said Alice bitterly. "I despise her."

"Don't I KNOW it, my dear?" giggled Sandie. "But did you EVer in your life see such a DRESS as our peculiar HOStess has on? HONestly, my dear, it would make a HORSE laugh! I sow I NEARly had hysTERics when I beHELD her. And isn't this place simply GHASTly? It's all so HORribly nouVEAU, don't you think?"

"Perfectly atrocious, my dear," agreed Alice. "Gosh, I believe they're serving cocktails at this point, aren't they?"

"My dear, I can't BEAR it!" exclaimed Sandie, following her glance. "I'm PANTing for a DRINK, no less!" And they moved off together in the direction of an on-coming tray . . .

Mrs. Carlton and Mrs. Phelper had gravitated to the tea tables where they were devouring sandwiches and drinking tea.

"They DO taste good!" admitted the former lady grudgingly. "But, then, I'm awfully hungry for some reason or other."

"SO AM I, my dear," said Mrs. Whelper, reaching for another sandwich. "Did you ever see such a prodigal display of food?"

"Rather vulgarly ostentatious, don't you think? How these social upstarts love to parade their wealth, don't they?"

After a while Mrs. Carlton "gathered" Sandie, as she expressed it, and they made their adieus.

"It's been simply wonderful!" gushed Mrs. Carlton, pressing her hostess' limp hand caressingly. "It was so good of you to ask us!"

"I've had a perfectly RIPping time!" put in Sandie a bit boisterously. "Thanks AWfully, Mrs. Egnog. It was CORKing of you to have me!"

"So sweet of you both to come, you dear people!" beamed Mrs. Egnog. "Do you really think it's been a success, my little party?" she added wistfully, casting an anxious look toward the garden where her 750 odd guests were trampling her flowers, gorging her victuals, guzzling her punch and calling her names . . .

ROPING THE NEWS by Will Rogers

Mark Twain's Country Doings

WELL ALL I KNOW is just what I read in the scandal sheets, and what I hold a clinic over as I prowl hither and non.

Well Sir I must tell you more about that mining town of "Bodie," Cal. It was one of the famous mining camps of later days, but had been practically deserted for years, but with the demand for gold here lately and the improved and cheaper method of extracting it, there was a revival of the famous old place.

Harry Carr, one of the best newspaper men on this or any other coast had been up there writing wonderful stories of what it meant to a mining town to be [illegible] and [illegible] reach good health again. He claimed the thing was running almost as wide open as one of our big cities that the gambling and drinking was in a small way on a comparison with New York or Los Angeles.

WELL IN MY TIMES I am [illegible] one of the early Pioneers. I have seen some of the boys [illegible] and at times otherwise [illegible] a small wager on the outcome of what later would be apparent as a hazardous game. And in passing by I had peeped in under swinging doors and there would be men sipping [illegible].

Well Mrs Rogers and I were just out prowling around. We were working on spoiling a fine old classic and had been taking a great part of the Scenes on the original site where the play was laid at Lake Tahoe. Mr Henry King our Director had told me that he had seen just about all of my face that he desired for exterior photographic purposes and that if I wanted I could head for home, and as they had a few more days work without me I needn't be in any hurry to get to home.

Well that was right up my alley. I bet a lot of you like this too. I love to drive around and look over queer old places, especially historic old spots. Well that Country up around in the mountains of California, why you could be there from now on just looking at places that you had read about all your life.

RIGHT UNDER OUR NOSE was Donner Lake, the place where the most famous of all pioneer stories of hardships, why there was where they had spent the winter within 15 miles of the summit but just too late to get over. That's where perhaps the only case of cannibalism was ever practiced in our country. It was afterwards admitted on the very best of authority that they actually had to resort to the use of human flesh to exist. It was one of the greatest stories of pioneer life. If you haven't read the "Life of the Donner Party" you don't know nothing of suffering and hardships.

The California Societies are doing a great deal to preserve the spirit and history of these things and they have a fine monument to commemorate the spot.

Then we went over practically the route that they hoped to make from Donner Lake to Sutters Fort (now Sacramento) and through the old fort as it is preserved today by patriotic citizens and it should be but its kinder a travesty on justice that while they kept the Fort, they did nothing for the man that made the Fort and saved the early settlers. He died destitute in Washington trying to get a little dab of money from our great Government, a mere pittance of what he had spent on preserving the life of some of the early settlers.

THERE IS A STORY, the life of that fellow Sutter. All the gold was found on his place. He owned all the country, he developed it, he improved conditions there, and yet by the aid of thieves, courts and injustice, he lost the whole thing. Yet he had done more for his Country, real constructive work, than Washington had, up to the time he was chosen to lead our Army.

California should have maintained him in splendor for the balance of his days if he had lived even till Farmers got relief. But you get the life of this fellow Sutter, and it will make any other Autobiography look like the life of an Interior Decorator.

BUT WE GOT to be on our way. Then we went down through all the old early 49 camps, Sutter Creek, Angels Camp in Calveras, that's the exact home of Mark Twain's Jumping frog and really the story that did more to make Twain than any other one thing he ever did. They have Frog Rodeo there every year. Frog Singing, Frog Jumping and wind up by eating all the frogs that had contested and everybody wind up with a Frog in their throat.

Then Brete Hart was there and all his stories are around in that country. Jackson, one of the early ones. I had made two pictures there previously and hadent been back for ten years.

THEY GOT a great bunch of folks, Italian Americans, fine citizens and the most hospitable people on you ever saw. Sure glad to see the old place again.

Then to Senora, another old timer but which held on fine, and is today a real little town. Then over Senora pass. Scenery, Oh Boy what views. But its getting late we must get to Bodie. It's away over near the Nevada line in the sage brush desert. My wife was afraid to go, she had read Carr's articles and she was looking for whooping, shooting and gambooleering.

Well the poor Devils the night before, just 24 hours to correct the announcement, why the pro-H.'s had raided the place, broke all the booze in 13 saloons, put 15 men under $1,500 bonds and you should have seen the place this night. Our car was the only thing moving in the town.

INDIGNATION meetings consisted of two and three huddled in front of what had been a saloon door. It was still lighted up, but sasparilla was their diet.

It was a real surprise raid. The mines hadent opened that day for they had had no sustenance for 24 hours and couldent work. I talked with them but it was almost like speaking over the body of a fallen comrade. Their voice was not only reverent but parched.

They couldent understand why they out of 120 million people should be discriminated against. Why should they be the only example of Prohibition? They felt that their work demanded as much or more liquid fortitude as is allowed toilers on Wall street.

They estimated in low tones the amount of Bootleggers that these officers must have passed in their trip away out in this desert from San Francisco where they had come. It will always remain in my memory as the daddest one town I ever saw.

The Saga of Rufftown —By ARTHUR "Bugs" BAER

You Can't Win By Blocking Kicks

FROM TIME immaterial, civilization has stood akimbo at the high order of civilization reached in the municipal riots at Rufftown.

You can locate the city on any map by looking at a hospital chart. It stood on the worse bank of the Ruff River about a mile west of whatever was going to happen next.

We all know the amazing facts which have smothered Rufftown in obscurity. We all know that the reason Old Man Ruff didn't wait for the third day at Gettysburg was because he thought it was a miniature golf course.

We all remember that the little children played tiddlywinks with manhole covers.

The old grannies crocheted doilies out of barbed wire and used safe crackers' tools for knitting needles.

The town was a Soda and Gomorrah.

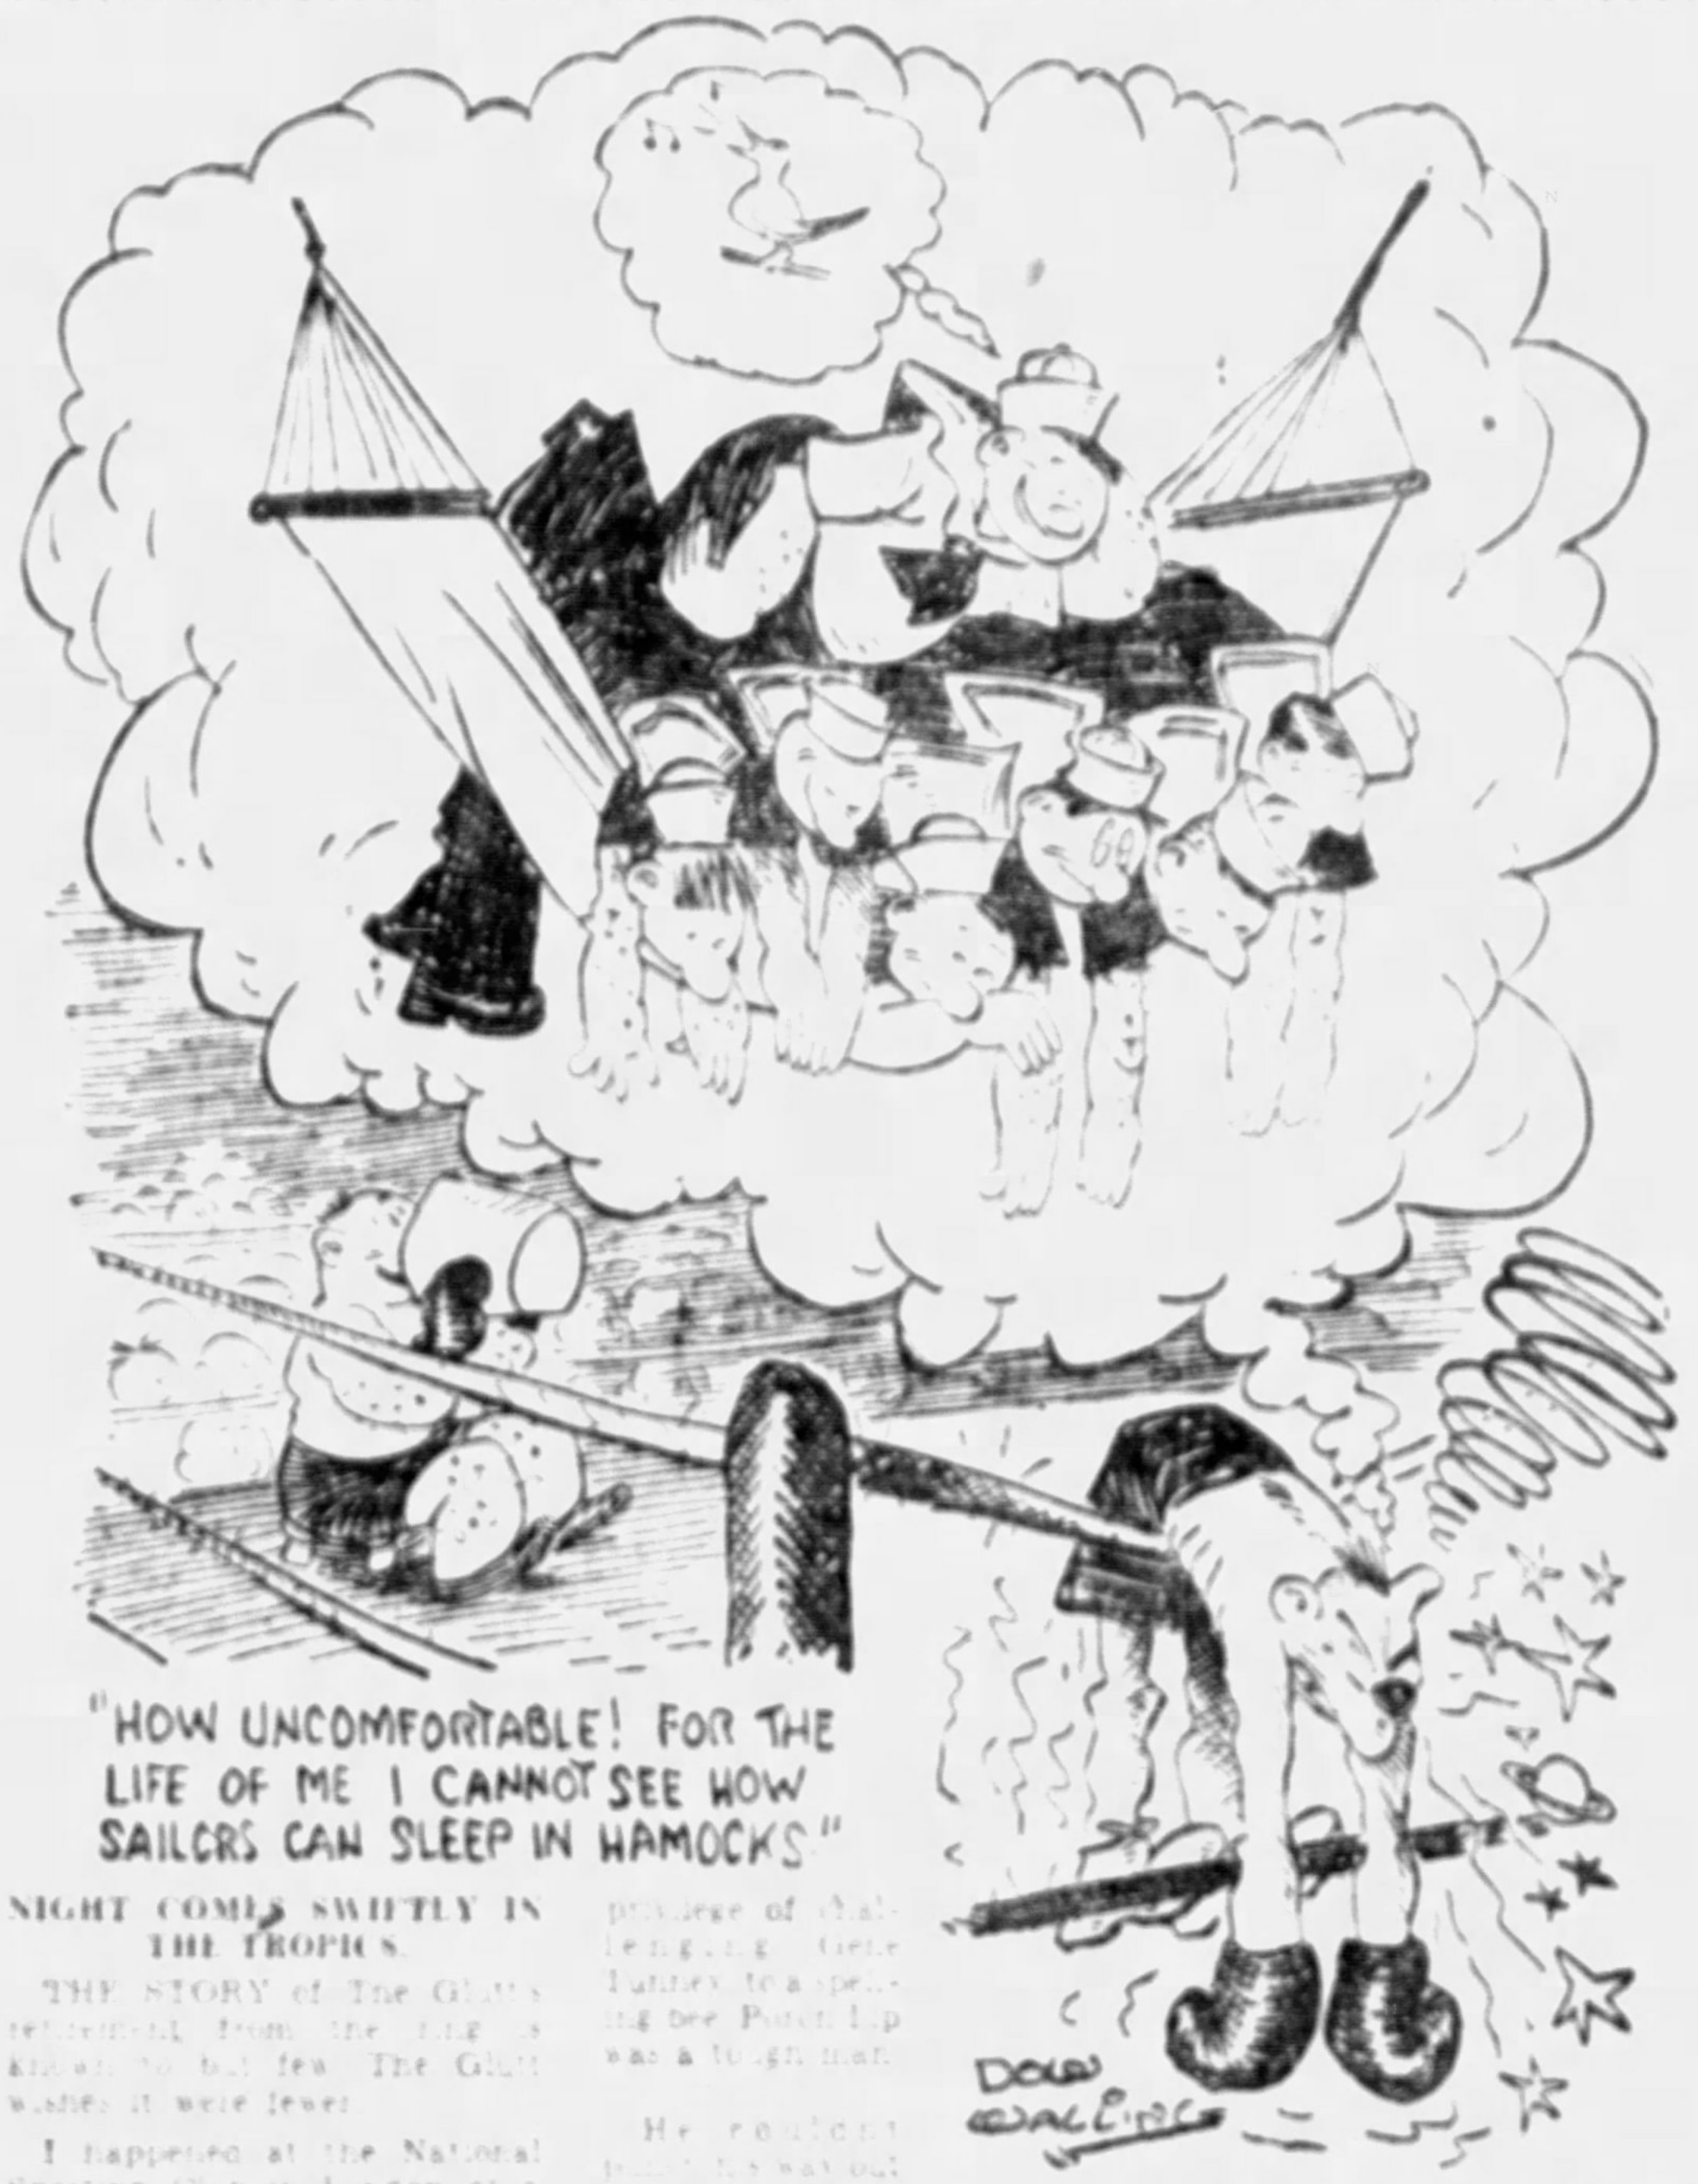
It was in this enervating and effeminate atmospheric pressure that Ging Fowler first saw the light of day and reached for his smoked glasses.

Old-time fight fans remember Gink as the Eagle of the Ropes and the Monarch of the Canvas. Fowler was named after his favorite blow. His chin was rare old porcelain of the Ming Dynasty. Gink could give it. But he hated to count his change.

He had pulled back his head so often that a shell started to grow on his back.

His only rival was The Glutt. Which was an abbreviation of the word glutton. The Glutt was the mathematician who discovered that the shortest distance between two points was a dive.

Porch Lip Joe was another great fighter of those good old daze. He was eliminated from the tournament by Duck Face Duffy who was so crooked he couldn't fall down an elevator shaft.



"HOW UNCOMFORTABLE! FOR THE LIFE OF ME I CANNOT SEE HOW SAILORS CAN SLEEP IN HAMOCKS"

NIGHT COMES SWIFTLY IN THE TROPICS

THE STORY of The Glutt's retirement from the ring is known to but few. The Glutt wishes it were fewer.

I happened at the National Sporting Club in London at a time when the national sport was bobbing-for-apples, to Queensbury rules.

The National Sporting Club was so exclusive that even its members were not allowed inside. They telephoned in their reservations and then pulled the [illegible] up around their necks.

The Glutt was scheduled to fight Porch Lip Joe for the privilege of challenging Gene Tunney to a spelling bee. Porch Lip was a tough man.

He couldn't punch his way out [illegible].

But his footwork was beautiful. He used to lay on his back and wave 'em in the air.

The referee told both fighters to step to the center of the ring and shake hands.

That was the last time that night that either fighter led with his right.

The Glutt was at the [illegible] in a [illegible].

He always dressed in the hiatus of fashion.

The Glutt was overweight by sixty pounds of gooseflesh.

The fact that he wasn't seated indicated he was still subnormal.

Crash! The fighters had glared at each other and then rebounded to the ropes.

Stove Lifter Used to Take Off Hat

[illegible] came [illegible] opened [illegible] fans [illegible] before his [illegible] hat on.

[illegible] circles [illegible]

[illegible] than [illegible] round [illegible] and made [illegible]

[illegible] Porch [illegible] He dived [illegible]

THEN YOU ASK ME WHY I'M SAD

PORCH LIP [illegible] The Glutt. But he didn't [illegible]. The Glutt's [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] drug [illegible].

The Prince of Wales was at the ringside. It was his own fault. When he [illegible] ticket [illegible] never [illegible] going.

The Prince said to the referee:

"[illegible] a favor, [illegible] find that [illegible]."

The referee [illegible] from the [illegible].

"Your Highness, did you pay [illegible]?"

His Highness said:

"Oh, I forgot that I'm the Prince for a moment."

The referee explained that he couldn't stop anything that had not started yet.

Which was just as good a reason as [illegible].

IT LOOKS LIKE A WHITE CHRISTMAS

The Glutt's head was so flat he had to take off his hat with a stove lifter.

In the last and almost final round Porch Lip bammed The Glutt over the ear with a right. The Glutt picked himself an armful of daisies. He thought:

"When a man is drowning it must be terrible to come up for the second time."

As he was hanging over the ropes like the week's laundry he became very philosophical and figured:

"How uncomfortable. For the life of me I cannot see how sailors can sleep in hammocks."

The Glutt's manager threw in the sponge.

The Glutt said:

"Now throw in the slate, too, and I'll go back to school."

As the sponge bounced around the ring The Glutt fell on it for a touchback.

The referee's decision was important to sport and the future of Rufftown. It read:

"YOU CANNOT WIN A BARROOM BRAWL BY BLOCKING KICKS."

That's how The Glutt got his start in the hotel business.

He saved everything his manager threw into the ring.

RUFFTOWN gave The Glutt a glorious reception when he arrived back in town. But The Glutt fooled the Civic Improvement Society by coming into town the back way.

He immediately went to the Ruff House, ordered a room and bath and used the room.

He challenged Duck Face Duffy best two out of three falls. The winner was to sue the stakeholder.

"HERE, MY GOOD MAN, YOU MUST NOT STRIKE THIS DEFENSELESS FELLOW"

T R C

—By Corey Ford

"OH, MY, what a bad dream I must have had!"

Such were the words which poor Sam uttered to himself when he came once again to full possession of his senses after his narrow escape from drowning.

He rose on an elbow and gazed about him. [illegible] He was lying on the bunk of a ship in a small [illegible] cabin.

A pitcher of water and a single crust of bread were beside him, but the porthole above him was covered so that he could not distinguish night from day. He did not know whether it was supper or breakfast.

IN VAIN the poor youth tried to piece together the events of the past. As our young readers well know, he found himself with [illegible] "the Rollo boys" are three in number [illegible] eldest [illegible] Tom [illegible] as [illegible] meat [illegible] Sam [illegible] the [illegible] trio. We have had many exciting adventures together as related in the previous volumes of this interesting series.

During the last instalment of the aforesaid series, I ventured too far out swimming in Lake Cayuga and was seized by a cramp, but how I was rescued from this cramp and what my present captor [illegible] remainder of this instalment alone can tell.

At that moment there sounded a faint [illegible] the next instant the door of the cabin opened and a burly youth crossed over to the helpless Sam and pulled his nose vigorously.

"Oh," groaned Sam and opened his eyes [illegible] dream. Then he recognized the newcomer and stared as if he had seen a ghost.

"Dan Baxter!" he ejaculated. "Can it be possible!"

"Yes, it's me," retorted Dan with small regard for grammar. "Did you know that you are in my power, Sam Rollo?"

"I—I—don't understand," gasped Sam weakly.

"RECKON YOU'LL understand before this trip is over," sneered the bully, for as our readers well know Dan Baxter had never been anything else. "While you were unconscious in the water I seized you on board this boat where I intend to keep you prisoner. You Rollos thought you could crow over me, but now the crowing will be done with the other foot."

"What are you going to do with me?"

"You'll find that out soon enough. I intend to make a big thing out of you, Sam Rollo."

"You were always good at bragging, Dan Baxter," retorted Sam boldly. "You are a cad, a bully and a fellow."

"You shut up, Sam Rollo," roared Baxter, his face scarlet, and then he struck out and slapped the helpless Rollo heavily on the cheek and Sam knew no more. A moment later Dan Baxter had locked the cabin door behind him, and the boat was steaming across the broad waters of Lake Cayuga with poor Sam a prisoner in the hold.

Have Hope, Sam! Rollo Boys Are Rescue Bound

AND NOW, gentle reader, let us turn back and see how Dick and Tom are faring.

When the youths first learned that their unfortunate brother Sam had been abducted by Dan Baxter, needless to say the two were much discomfited. In fact, as Tom expressed it, they were "up a stump."

"Let's not wait here where we are [illegible] the end of the [illegible]" [illegible] Tom. "Sam's bound [illegible] again before the [illegible]."

"I have a better suggestion than that," replied Dick [illegible]. "Let us inquire along the waterfront whether anyone has information regarding [illegible]. Perhaps some [illegible] of our missing brother has [illegible]."

As the two brothers started down the [illegible] cobble-stone [illegible] their [illegible] hope [illegible] the swinging doors of a saloon were suddenly flung open and a tall, slim individual toppled backward onto the curb, his face bleeding from a nasty cut upon the temple. As he lay helpless, the towering figure of the bartender stooped over him, a wooden bung starter grasped menacingly in his fist.

"I'll teach yez to cheat Tim Sullivan wid worthless scalawags," growled the irate bartender and made as though to strike the helpless longshoreman once more.

"Oh, please do not strike me again, Tim," groaned the victim.

"THIS MAN is evidently in difficulties," whispered Tom to his brother Dick as they hurried toward the scene of the altercation. "Let us intervene or the bartender will surely kill him." And darting forward he arrested the angry bartender's arm in the nick of time.

"Here, my good man, you must not strike this defenseless fellow," interposed Dick.

"Sure, an' he tried to pass off a counterfeit dollar bill on me," grumbled the Irish proprietor of the saloon. "That is the third one this week I've been after [illegible]."

"I will make good your loss," said Dick generously, handing the mollified barkeep a genuine greenback in exchange for the counterfeit bill. "Now pray leave this helpless fellow alone."

"Wh—who are you?" queried the longshoreman, sitting up weakly and facing the two young samaritans.

"My name is Richard Rollo," began Dick, [illegible] the longshoreman's face went white with surprise and he seemed to shrink back in terror.

"Rollo!" he gasped. "Be you any relation to a young lad named Sam Rollo?"

"He is our missing brother," ejaculated Tom. "Do you know his whereabouts?"

"I'll say I do," replied the longshoreman. "He is at present being abducted by Dan Baxter aboard the Dastard and carried a prisoner to Smuggler's Isle."

"Are you sure?"

"As sure as my name is Honest Luke Simpson," replied that individual. "I was first mate of the Dastard and when Baxter fired me yesterday he paid me off in counterfeit bills. Dan Baxter and his cronies have a large cave on Smuggler's Island where they manufacture imitation money. Oh, but I'd like to get even with him," sighed the former first mate, rubbing his aching temple.

"Show us this Smuggler's Isle where Sam is hidden and we shall reward you well," offered Dick Rollo.

"Done," replied Honest Luke, "but look ye, I don't need no reward. It will be satisfaction enough to see that bully Baxter brought to justice at last. Come, boys!"

"To the rescue!" echoed Tom as they raced toward a nearby yacht. Soon they were under sail under the able direction of Luke Simpson, but how they reached the secret island, and what adventures befell them in their attempt to rescue their young brother will all be related in the next volume of this fascinating series to be entitled "The Rollo Boys on Smuggler's Isle, or The Secret of the Island Cave." And here let us say good-bye.

Good-bye.

PRESIDENT URIBURU SAYS:

'Revolt Was Only Way to Stop Graft And Save Argentina From Utter Ruin'

"DOWN WITH IRIGOYEN"—A snapshot of a crowd of revolutionary sympathizers in Buenos Aires after they had torn down a statue of the former President of Argentina during recent uprisings and were dragging it through streets.

'IRIGOYEN PILED UP MILLIONS IN DEBTS'

Provisional President Tells of Political, Economic and Moral Disorders Under Previous Regime That Paralyzed Progress.

By JOSE E. FRANCISCO URIBURU,
Provisional President of Argentina.

(By Special Cable.)

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 27.

REVOLUTION came to Argentina because its people felt that Dr. Hipolito Irigoyen would carry the country to ruin.

In order fully to comprehend the extent of the revolutionary movement, it is necessary to contemplate the general situation of the country from the year 1916 to the revolution itself.

Later, in this series of articles, I will tell the program of the provisional government at home and abroad.

Properly speaking, the evils of the country began with the first administration of Dr. Irigoyen. In effect, one may say from a purely social viewpoint that from the very first hour of his administration Dr. Irigoyen failed to seek the collaboration of the ablest men.

Executives Not Capable
Lack of Talent Demonstrated in Slowness of Business

With some exceptions the executive corps of the first administration were very inferior when we consider the difficulties of the positions they had to fill. Thus, the results of the lack of coordination in the public services were soon seen. The lack of talent was demonstrated in the slowness of governmental proceedings and the disorderly application of the means of government.

With the passage of time, these defects were accentuated and many others appeared. Little by little departmental laxity began to envelop everything. The payment of tips or gratuities came to be the most efficacious method by which one could obtain the speedy settlement of any official business.

The first administration of Irigoyen was distinguished by the grave allegations against the honesty of its proceedings, these denunciations being made in Congress by responsible deputies who, like the present Minister of the Interior, proposed in the Chamber of Deputies that impeachment proceedings against the President be brought forward in the senate in accordance with the Argentine constitution.

In this period also came the celebrated accusations against the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Agriculture made by the same deputy, with respect to the business of exportation of sugar, merchandise in transit, exportation and transportation of gold, dishonest negotiations touching the state railroads, exportation of wheat, the purchase of flour and the purchase of jute sacks and sisal fiber.

RULER—Provisional President Jose E. Francisco Uriburu, of Argentina, who succeeded the deposed President, Dr. Hipoliti Irigoyen, and who tells, in the accompanying article, what caused the recent revolt.

The considerable majority which Irigoyen always had at his disposal always drowned the voice of the opposition. It was not always possible to adopt the measures that seemed necessary to satisfy the public demands for vengeance. And the evil that might have been entirely extirpated by means of energetic corrective legislation extended itself to all the organs of government, thus infecting them.

At the end of the first Presidency of Irigoyen his prestige had waned considerably on account of the diffusion through the entire body politic of the dishonest management of his administration. But Irigoyen, with cunning that everybody recognized, immediately sponsored the candidacy of Dr. Alvear as his successor. Alvear possessed a charming personality, he was widely cultivated socially and his honor was indisputable.

Alvear represented, for the great majority of the opposition, a hope for betterment of conditions. But despite his own power and that of his collaborators in the government, the influence of Irigoyen fettered his activities. Alvear sacrificed public interests to a poorly conceived and little understood sense of loyalty, as was seen when he himself was obliged to recognize his impotence in his efforts to arrest the triumph of Irigoyen.

Greedy
Followers Sought Profit Only for Selves

Thus we arrive at the second administration of Irigoyen which was made possible by a widespread wave of self-seeking. Many of those who voted for him did so in the hope of deriving personal profit from his administration. These ambitions were fostered by Irigoyen.

In his two administrations, Irigoyen totally disorganized the country in every respect. In the institutional order of things he mocked at the constitution and crushed the autonomy of the provincial government where he had intervened by simple decrees and for causes both arbitrary and capricious.

Once he had intervened because a provincial governor, although a model executive, such as Marcelino Ugarte in the province of Buenos Aires, was his adversary; at other times, as in La Rioja, because there existed a vacancy in the Federal Senate and he had not yet obtained the majority in the legislature of the Province necessary to assure the election of one of his followers. He intervened in Tucuman because a possible candidate for governor of that province, even though of his own party, was not acceptable to him.

All of these interventions responded to the crudest concepts of "Personalism" (the

Mussolini Says:

'Fascism in Italy Stays Aloof From Foreign Movements'

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy

By Special Cable,

ROME, Sept. 27.

SINCE the advent of Fascism to power, there have been very few nations which have not had at least a beginning of movements which were called Fascist movements. Peculiar local conditions seem to have caused their existence and doubtless viewing the efficacy with which the Italian Fascist regime ruled, they projected a similar result for their own country.

BENITO MUSSOLINI

Some were born of anti-Communism, others fought the inaction of the ruling party, some were anti-Catholic and still others anti-Semitic. The variety of aims, the origin and their formation, indicate that while these movements were called Fascist movements, there was no general conception of one idea nor was there even any relation between the several organizations of the various countries.

Italian Fascism has kept scrupulously aloof from all these so-called Fascist movements for the reason that ours is all our own, originated and built up in our own country to meet our own peculiar aims and purposes.

Fascism Birth
Unattended by Infiltration Of Foreign Influence

The birth of Fascism was unattended by any infiltration of foreign or political dogmas or of parental post-natal influences similar to the movement beyond our frontiers.

It was conceived and organized and developed on Italian soil and designed to meet the needs of the Italian nation which came out of the war with its victory disfigured not alone by foreign artificies, but also by the inability of our own statesmen to enforce the Italian demands for a just share in the spoils of the conquerors.

Since we established our regime and have experienced a notable share of success, we have attracted the interest of statesmen and politicians all over the world who have wondered whether Fascism could be well fitted into their own systems of government.

England, France and the United States have had their own attempts to organize a Fascism, while in Germany a party headed by Herr Adolf Hitler, which has recently sometimes been called the Fascist, made notable progress in the German elections of September 14.

The results of those elections have been heralded as a triumph for Hitler and they unmistakably show the trend. A parliament with 20 or more parties as experience has shown, especially in this post-war period makes government delicate and difficult whereas it should be strong and decisive.

When Fascism first entered the Italian Parliament our party had 38 deputies out of 535, but when we seized power we stiffened governmental strength by mustering to our ranks the real leaders of our country's life, and continued from then on to rule.

We do not trace a parallel in the German situation but above all the sign of the times

'LIFT YOUNG PLAN BURDEN OR GERMAN MASSES WILL BE DRIVEN TO BOLSHEVISM'

"National Socialists Demand Return of Polish Corridor to Germany; Our Party Will Get Control of Government With Ballots, Not Force," Declares German Fascist Leader.

By ADOLF HITLER,

[illegible]

MUNICH, Germany, Sept. 27.

LET not the world deceive itself. Germany will either become a free nation again or, losing faith in any other future, will be driven into the beckoning arms of Bolshevism.

That is no mere phrase, no threat, no prophecy, but just a statement of fact, of the sentiment of the German masses of today.

I know that sentiment as no other statesman or politician in Berlin. That choice between freedom and the right to live and Bolshevism lies less with the German people than with those who have laid the impossible conditions, the unbearable burdens upon Germany for generations.

If you proletarianize a people economically, their proletarianization politically is bound to follow. That is what is taking place in Germany today. The German election of September 14 is a warning.

It tore away the veil and revealed the German soul. It gave a glimpse into the misery and suffering of the German people.

It gave the lie to that press and those German statesmen and political parties who acquiesced in the enslavement of an entire nation and created the impression there[illegible] that the German people were resigned and even happy in their [illegible] transmission of their own livelihood from Germany to France, England and America.

The election was a signal of the approaching revolt of the German soul. Therefore, the shock and surprise abroad and among those political and press circles here in Germany who have little contact with the working people, and who don't know, or ignore, the sentiment and feeling of desperation of the present and the hopelessness of a future that precludes happiness, which begins to pervade all classes in Germany.

Can Be Saved

The patient can only be saved by reopening the festering cuts and thoroughly removing the causes that make his recovery hopeless. That must be done before the inflammation goes too far.

Germany may still be saved by reopening the Versailles Treaty and the Young Plan. When delirium sets in it will be too late.

The statesmen of the former enemy league and those German statesmen and political parties who have governed Germany since 1919 are playing a dangerous game with Germany. That game has been going on for more than 10 years.

Promises upon promises have been made to the patient, industrious, hard working, [illegible] order loving German people. Every year the conditions have grown worse, every year the burden heavier, the suffering greater and the future darker.

Our people have lost faith in promises and those who make them, and confidence in the old political leaders and parties. If the German people should definitely lose faith in a future of their own choice, then the gravest developments are inevitable.

The National Socialist party has been born out of the suffering of the German people. Our aim and our purpose is to free Germany from the political and [illegible] conditions that mean enslavement, from [illegible] burdens that are impossible, and that no nation can carry for generations.

'National Socialists Demand Return of Polish Corridor to Germany,' Warns Adolph Hitler, Socialistic Leader

Learned Nothing From Volcanic Rumblings

[illegible]

When we say Germany cannot pay the impossible tribute and live, France says I am a "danger," and that Germany means war. When we speak of the outrageous injustice of the Polish Corridor, that spear in our side, France and Poland say we are getting ready to make war.

When Germany protests against the grossest injustice, when it demands its rights, when it refuses to further submit to humiliation, when it points out how its former enemies have broken their solemn promises, when we point out that the economic ruin and Bolshevization of Germany cannot possibly be helpful to a world in a great economic crises, the world is immediately told we are "getting ready for war."

What then is the method of the National Socialists to obtain first, the control of the German government, and second, the revision of the Versailles Treaty and the Young Plan.

The first is by perfectly legal means. The second by the united will of the German people until there is a conviction on the other side.

With 107 seats in the Reichstag, and with the absolute certainty that the next election, less than a year and a half off, even if there is no dissolution before that time, will bring us a tremendous gain, we have no need of a "putsch," no need of resorting to force to obtain control of the government.

Others may use force, however, to prevent us from taking over the government. We are not thinking of a "putsch." The election has shown us the way to government.

The Communists, recognizing in it the greatest danger to their assumption of power in Germany and believing that if we can be prevented from having any success in the near future that many of our followers will become impatient and [illegible] to them, are devoting all their attention and effort to discredit us and distract attention from themselves by painting us as a great danger to Germany. Let those who want to be deceived, believe them.

Socialism
Individual Valued in Hitler's Scheme

What is my understanding or definition of a "Nationalist?" One in whom duty to country or community comes before self-interest—in other words, one for all, but with justice to the one where interests clash.

"Socialist" I define from the word social, meaning in the main "social equity." One serves the common good without having to give up his individuality or personality or product of his personal efficiency. Our adoption of the term Socialist has nothing with the Marxistic Socialism of the Socialist Party.

Marxism is anti-property, true Socialism is not. Marxism places no value on the individual or individual effort or efficiency.

True Socialism values the individual and encourages him in individual efficiency at the same time holding that the interest of the individual must be in consonance with that of the community. All great discoveries, inventions, and achievements were first the product of the individual brain.

It is charged against me that I am against property, that I am an atheist. Both are false.

Europe is passing through one of the gravest crises in its history. The Versailles Treaty and the Young Plan are the axis around which much will revolve in the next years. You cannot ruin or Bolshevize Germany and think that the rest of Europe will remain immune. That is blindness.

The German people are not resigned apathetically to a tragic fate that their enemies, knowingly or unknowingly, are forcing on them.

Thank God, they are not resigned. They have a spirit of determination and will. United properly, they will survive and live to benefit the world. My confidence in the German people is unlimited. My aim is their freedom. That is my mission!

"A New Slant on America"

Vivid and interesting impressions of the United States through the eyes of a Frenchman are contained in the book "Un Oeil Neuf Sur L'Amerique" by Paul Achard, the noted French writer. M. Achard visited the United States for a short time last Winter and when he returned to France wrote the book which had a large sale throughout the continent and in England.

The opening chapter of M. Achard's book was published last Sunday in the March of Events Section and other chapters will appear in early issues. The translation was made by Margaret Gaffey Mel, who also has translated the American edition titled "A New Slant on America," to appear later this Fall. She is well known for her translations of other books from the French, German, Spanish and Italian, as well as her children's stories and her articles on California gardens.

SECRETS of the TAFT-ROOSEVELT SPLIT

President Nearly Wept as He Heard About T. R. Grieving at Oyster Bay

Private Letters Tell How 'Boss' Penrose Forced Appointment Of Biddle as Commandant Of the Marine Corps

IN LAST SUNDAY'S instalment Major Butt, military aide to Presidents Taft and Roosevelt and confidant of both, told of the political maneuvers of the Fall campaign of 1910, particularly in connection with the New York gubernatorial campaign in which ex-President Roosevelt was an active figure.

The November election resulted in heavy G. O. P. reverses. John A. Dix, Democrat, defeated Stimson for Governor in New York, and the Democrats made large gains elsewhere through the country. The opening letter of today's instalment was written the day after election, when President Taft and his party had just returned from Cincinnati, where the President voted.

By MAJ. ARCHIBALD W. BUTT,

Military Aide to Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, in Letters to His Sister-in-Law, Mrs. Clara Butt.

G. O. P. BOSS—A close-up of United States Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania, dominant figure in the Senate when Taft was President and a reigning power in Republican national politics for many years.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9, 1910.

MY DEAR CLARA:

Back from Cincinnati this morning. If the Republican party feels as gloomy as did the members of our party, the G. O. P. is indeed in a bad way. We had on board, besides the President, Norton and myself, the President's brother Charlie; the Secretary of State, Secretary MacVeagh, for a short time while we were in Pittsburgh and where we really got the worst news of the day's voting; Wade, Ellis, Voorhees of Ohio, and that ubiquitous John Wesley Hill. Mrs. Wallingford and Mrs. Laughlin, Mrs. Taft's sister, came aboard at Pittsburgh.

MAJOR BUTT.

Everyone took a whack at the Colonel. Each one said that he and he alone was to blame for the national disaster to the party, and what was proclaimed made the ears of Jimmy Sloan and myself tingle with indignation. Finally the President said:

"Well, that may be all so, and I fear Roosevelt did not help the ticket very much, but I am inclined to think that even had he remained in Africa the result would have been just the same."

Whatever the President may have thought, he still hoped that the State of Ohio would go Republican. He sent his [illegible] there, and the slogan of the last few days was:

"A vote for Harding is a vote for Taft."

The President was given the telegrams first, and he read most of them aloud. Often he would get me to figure for him. As I am not an expert, sometimes the assembled company would be detained before I could give a correct answer.

"Draper's head seems to be the first to fall," said the President. "In spite of what you say, Charlie, I fear Harding will be the next to show up with defeat. But I'll tell you one thing," he added, "if Harmon is re-elected and I am re-nominated, I would rather have him as an opponent than any man the Democrats could put up."

Secretary Knox said:

"It seems to be a landslide, doesn't it?"

The President said:

"Well, from what you tell me I should say it was not only a landslide but a tidal wave and holocaust all rolled into one general cataclysm."

Kipling's 'If'

Taft Felt Poem Was Written for Him

WASHINGTON, November 24, 1910.

DEAR CLARA:

We went yesterday to the Westmoreland Club (in Richmond, Va.), where we had the most wonderful dinner that famous old club has ever served.

Hemphill read aloud the latest poem of Kipling, called "If." I have heard the President say that he could almost feel that Kipling had written the poem for him.

The first thing we learned when we returned to Washington was that the ex-President, when here during our trip to Panama, had seemed as well and as joyful as if the press had not tried to lay the burden of the last election to him.

Mrs. Taft had gone to New York with Helen, and so there was none to welcome him at the White House save the servants and the clerks, but the warmth of their reception cheered his heart as nothing else could have done. Hoover, the chief usher, told me that he recalled every old servant by name, even the scullery maids. When he saw one of the assistant firemen he turned to Hoover and asked:

"Which is the villain? It was a fireman who married Mrs. Roosevelt's maid."

And when he learned it was the man to whom he was speaking, he said:

"I'll bet you she has made a good wife, and if you have not made her a good husband you ought to be shot."

Delighted

Saw South Reaping Benefit of Conservatism

When he saw Alice, the kitchen maid, he asked her if she still made the cornbread. Alice told him that she sometimes made it for the servants, but no one ate it upstairs.

"They show bad taste, and I'll tell the President so when I see him."

Alice brought a piece to him on the plate, and he went on over to the office eating it as he went and greeting gardeners and laborers as he passed.

December 4, 1910.

MY DEAR CLARA:

The conversation turned on the subject of John Sherman and the time that Justice Day was the Assistant Secretary of State under him. He (Justice Day) told the President that Sherman's mind was infinitely worse than the public supposed it to have been. Day never dared leave him alone for a minute.

"It was published at the time and was taken as a joke," said Justice Day, "but he did once decide to declare war against Austria between the State Department and the White House."

"Didn't Mr. McKinley put him in the Cabinet just to make a place in the Senate for Mark Hanna?" innocently asked Mrs. Day.

"My dear," said her husband, "there are some things we do not admit even to ourselves."

WASHINGTON, December 11, 1910.

MY DEAR CLARA:

Not only does White get the Chief Justiceship, but Lamar gets one of the other places. I am delighted, of course, that the South seems to be reaping the benefit of her conservatism, but just how the President will explain it to Justice Hughes I do not see. But that is his own lookout.

I had gone to the White House last evening to accompany him to the Gridiron Club dinner at the New Willard, and when I was announced he sent for me to come to his room. He was still dressing.

"Well, Archie," he answered to my question of how he felt, "I am feeling better, for I have got the Supreme Court off my mind. I am going to name Lamar for one of the vacancies. Do you think he will accept?"

Then I laughed, for I knew it was the fondest hope of both Mr. Lamar and his wife. He told me to telephone to Hughes and ask him if he could call at the White House at 6 o'clock the next afternoon. The President said:

"I will have an uncomfortable half hour, but Hughes is young enough to wait, and if he makes good on the bench I may yet be able to appoint him."

Wanted Right

To Patch Up Truce With Roosevelt

December 18, 1910.

DEAR CLARA:

I met Hilles at the club this afternoon. Hilles is the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and he has recently resigned to enter business in New York. I expressed regret over the fact that he was leaving the administration, and he told me there was a possibility of his remaining. He said:

"I have got to have an understanding with the President, for if I remain he will have to give me authority to patch up some sort of truce with Col. Roosevelt."

I made the engagement for Hilles to take a walk with the President at 5 tomorrow afternoon.

"THE SPHINX"—One of Homer Davenport's famous cartoons published in the New York American at the time when ex-President Roosevelt's intentions regarding his candidacy for the 1912 Presidential nomination were an enigma to President Taft and national politicians.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26, 1910.

DEAR CLARA:

I think I see signs of the clouds which have been hanging over the President and Col. Roosevelt breaking up. It may be the result of Hilles' conference with the President, but there are signs, at least as far as the President is concerned, of kindlier feelings. They speak more kindly of him at the White House.

ARCHIE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19, 1911.

DEAR CLARA:

I had a conversation with the President about Col. Roosevelt. I repeated to him what Mr. Griscom had said to me the night before at the diplomatic dinner which had saddened me very much. I could not get out of my mind all day the picture he drew of Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. He and Mrs. Griscom had gone down to spend Sunday, and he said that he had found the Colonel in a most depressed state of mind.

Mrs. Roosevelt, he said, seemed more depressed than the Colonel, and this I realized came from the state he must be in, for if she could have her wish it would be never to hear of politics again.

At any rate, I told the President just what Griscom had told me, and when he got to the White House he asked me to come in, as he wanted to talk, and while I took off my things he walked ahead of me and turned on the lights in the Red Room and sat down with his overcoat on.

PEACEMAKER—Charles D. Hilles, successor of Charles D. Norton as President Taft's private secretary who undertook to patch the rift between Taft and T. R. and who since has become a prominent figure in New York Republican politics.

"Tell me again what Griscom said. It is strange he never told me any of this."

I told the President that Griscom had said he would not repeat it to anyone else but myself, for he knew my love for the family.

"Archie," said the President, "I don't see what I could have done to make things different. Somehow people have convinced the Colonel that I have gone back on him, and he does not seem to be able to get that out of his mind. But it distresses me more deeply than anyone can know, to think of him sitting there at Oyster Bay alone and feeling himself deserted."

The President reached up and wiped his eye. I don't know whether a tear had formed there or not, but I could see that something of a big nature was going on in his mind. When he broke it again, it was to say:

"It may be that a break had to come. The situation was a most difficult one for both of us, but no harder for him than for me, and I don't think he ever saw my side of it. What he is undergoing now may be the thing most needed to get him back to a normal frame of mind. The American people are strange in their attitudes toward their idols.

Blamed

Roosevelt for Permitting Situation to Develop

"Where I do blame Roosevelt is for allowing them to get him in this position. I don't know when I have had anything to affect me as deeply as the picture which this conversation brings to my mind. To feel everything slipping away from him, all the popularity, the power which he loved, and above all the ability to do what he thought was of real benefit to his country, to feel it all going and then to be alone! I hope the old boy has enough philosophy left to take him through this period, that is all. If he could only fight! That is what he delights in, and that is what is denied to him now. The papers in the East have adopted a policy of ignoring him, of never mentioning him.

"I had heard that this was done with a view of driving home the iron. This leaves him in a way without an audience. I hear Pinchot has deserted him and that his old allies are weakening. It is all sad."

[illegible] came yesterday of [illegible] Senator [illegible]. Nearly everyone is [illegible] now that it is a [illegible].

'Election in 1910 A Cataclysm,' Said Taft

Taft Grouchy

Feels as If He Were Held Up

WASHINGTON, [illegible] 2, 1911.

DEAR CLARA:

The President was rather grouchy, I thought, over his appointment of a commandant of the Marine Corps. He says he feels as if he were held up on the road and relieved of his purse and his watch. He had intended to name Major Waller, and this in spite of the fact that Waller had once been court martialed for shooting a few of the little Brown Brothers in the Philippines without a [illegible]. But Waller is the idol of the corps and certainly the one man who has any fitness for the position.

His appointment was recommended by Meyer and agreed to by the President, and his name was practically written, when Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, called on the President, and in five minutes Waller was sidetracked and Col. Biddle elevated to the place in command. He happened to be a cousin to the junior Senator from Pennsylvania.

The whole thing was characteristic of Penrose. And if you could once see and know Penrose, you would wonder how he could have anything done.

Penrose Acts

Quickly Drives Butler Out of Marine Fight

Penrose is a gentleman by birth, but a guttersnipe by instinct. He owns Pennsylvania, and every member from that State in the House and every office holder back in the State is an abject tool to him in politics.

For instance, Representative Butler, of the House, who has a son in the Marine Corps and who is Waller's greatest friend, withdrew his endorsement on a whisper from Penrose.

Butler had actually fought for Waller and told the President that unless Waller was appointed his son would resign from the service. Penrose went to him and said:

"See here, I want you to withdraw from this Marine Corps fight at once," and Butler fell from it as if he had fallen from a ladder.

Penrose then went to the President and said: "I want the appointment for Biddle," and when the President told him of his reluctance, his only reply was that Biddle was from Pennsylvania and the ranking officer of the corps. The President said he never saw a man more vulgar in his demand.

When the President told him he did not see how he could very well name Biddle, Penrose said to him:

"Well, you can't expect me to aid you in your legislative schemes if you can't give me an appointment which is mine by rights."

'German Elections Indicate Fascist Trend'—Mussolini

can be seen in the way youth rallies to the new standard, leaving behind it the old shibboleths of liberalism, democracy and socialism.

We do not know how much Fascism could do for other countries because that is not within our scope. We insist that other nations should stay out of our internal affairs and for the same reason we are staying out of the internal affairs of others.

We are committed to the good that Fascism does for Italy and if there are factors which can with certain measure of efficacy be adopted by their countries, they are at liberty to appropriate whatever is good and convenient for them. To ask that anyone adopt our methods has never been within the slightest dream of our policy.

Since the "Nazi" (National Socialists) or so-called German Fascists have now attracted the attention of a large international public, all eyes are being turned towards them. They are a German creation, wholly directed by German leaders and with a political campaign policy which is wholly German.

Perhaps the only feature about them is that they are referred to as Fascists, while as everyone knows today, the word Fascism was coined to apply to the spirit of solidarity which has bound members of our organization since it was founded.

And then in so many other countries where so-called Fascist movements have come into existence, there is such a variety of aim of these organizations, these aims differing with different conditions.

The movements in the United States which have been likened to the Fascist movement have been violently anti-Catholic, and yet such a stand on the part of the Italian Fascism could not even be countenanced as the Catholic church plays such a part in the life of our people.

Then, too, there has been a mixture of royalist and republican tendencies on the part of some, but in this the Fascism of Italy could not under any circumstances participate as we brought with us into power a reverence and worship of our reigning house which has strengthened and dignified it in the minds of all Italians.

The English Fascists seemed anti-labor, and yet we have enacted more labor legislation than any other country in the world. The movements in other countries are therefore completely apart from us, as Fascism as we know it, is our own creation and was conceived for Italy.

There is no doubt that abroad the full significance of Fascism as a governing force is not yet completely understood.

We have created a new state and when we refer to the Fascist revolution, we mean just exactly revolution, for what has transpired has been as truly a revolution as any in history.

We have created a whole new code of government, a whole new system of government. That our creation is a success is attested by the fact that we are a strong nation within and without.

What is perhaps little understood abroad is that the work of the regime touches the whole population. It is a reorganization of the whole country to meet its particular economic needs. To fight the economic battle in the world market, we have evolved the relation between producing and directing groups which is designed to increase the production of national wealth and to insure a fair distribution of that wealth.

No government in the whole world has yet undertaken schemes so extensive and colossal as the Fascist regime; schemes which have completely changed the old system of the country's economic life by placing greater stress on agricultural riches and developing the nation's latent potentialities there, rather than letting land lie idle and allow congested cities to grow to consume the nation's living.

It would take volumes to tell of the reforms enacted by the government in social well being, maternity assistance, industrial compensation, pensions, insurance, etc.

Whether those movements which are called Fascist abroad will be able to enact a program as broad as ours can only be told after they have had a chance of directing the country.

There is this significant fact, however, that the nations of the world have recognized the efficacy of the Fascist rule and have already begun to move toward the adoption of many Fascist principles.

The ills of vacillating democracy are today striking some of the nations rather serious blows and well we may wonder in this stifling international competition how many are going to survive.

THE BOOK SHELF by GEORGE SEIBEL

Are You Educated? And How?

There is more Education in the world than ever before and fewer educated people than ever before. That is a mystery tempting one to delve into the latest book of Albert Edward Wiggam, "The Marks of an Educated Man" (published by Bobbs Merrill), hoping that he may shed some light upon the problem. And he does.

One of his chapters is headed, "You Can't Sell Him Magic." And that chapter is about the most important in the volume. The medicine man of the Eskimos and the voodoo priest of Jamaica have a horde of brothers in America—even in Pittsburgh—selling us magic. And we buy it.

There are hundreds of people who believe in "luck," charms, signs, special days, black Fridays, blue Mondays, unlucky thirteens, numerology, astrology, palmistry, black cats and numerous other relics of the Dark Ages.

And most of them also contribute to send missionaries to educate the Heathen.

They do not realize that they are the Heathen, and that they need education sadly, no matter how many years they may have spent in school or college.

Wiggam assures us that the educated man "cultivates the open mind." He forgets, however, that too many of these minds are altogether too open. They are open to "bearded mystics, enshrouded occultists, bob haired and rouged clairvoyants, dark room mediums, oriental voodooists, applied psychologists, character analysts, pseudo psychoanalyzers, hocus pocus humbuggers, and in-tune-with-the-infinite bunk shooters, and are trying to get God out of ouija-boards."

At the same time Wiggam tunes in with the infinite himself every now and then.

But this book is very suggestive and helpful. Perhaps his best service is in calling attention to the point John Burroughs made — getting people with fixed beliefs, whether in philosophy or politics or anything else, to answer "the awful question, are they true?"

So that in the end it all resolves itself into an attitude of mind. Emerson, Amiel, Montaigne, Bacon and their brethren are the touchstones.

And mystical jargon is the earmark of the other school. When Wiggam tells us that his Educated Man "cultivates the habit of success, and knows as a man thinketh so is he," he gets close to the mystical jargon of Coue himself. But, of course, it isn't easy to walk straight in a fog.

Among the New Novels

I. ADAMS BECK has written a group of stories dealing with the occult. As the author hints in her title story, they may be interpreted as pure fantasy or may be understood as having a deeper meaning. "The Openers of the Gate" (published by Cosmopolitan) belongs among romances like Bulwer's "Zanoni."

The stories at first deal with the happier phases of this occultism with what she calls "the spiritual occult with only a suggestion of the horror of the ugly physical occult."

"The Openers of the Gate" is told by a physician about the psychic development of a woman patient who discovers that dogs have a sense of the spiritual denied to most men. "The Mystery of Iniquity" finds him attempting to cure a patient who is a victim of misdirected powers, a modern vampire—not the blood-sucking kind but one who by drugs and mental projection destroys other lives.

The author also deals with reincarnation in both its horrible and its possibly pleasant phases. In "The Horoscope" an Englishman finds himself reverting to a previous incarnation, that of a Maharaja of India, with results that are fantastic and a bit humorous in the mood of Anstey. In "The Thug," with reincarnation again the subject, there is no humor, but much of the kind of thing that makes you jump at the mere striking of a clock.

The concluding story, "The Man Who Saw," is the psychic experience of one whose visions intermingle past and future and for whom the famous Shalimar Garden in Kashmir is again peopled with the "thought images" of those who once lived there.

I. Adams Beck, known as E. Barrington when she writes biographical romances, is a sincere believer in occultism and is striving to make her readers realize the superconscious.

The Vandekkers

Another example of "ten twent' thirt'" thrills is Russell Thorndike's "The Vandekkers" (published by Appleton), a tale of horror and black magic. The adventures that befall a young hero of the eighteenth century, who tries to reclaim his inheritance on an island in the West Indies from a beautiful devil-woman, are worthy the imagination of a Poe. Thorndike proves himself a first-class blood curdler.

Molly Moonshine

The vicissitudes of a charming young girl left an orphan at an early age and passed along from one person to another through various hardships and sufferings are told with pathos and humor by Gertrude Knevels in "Molly Moonshine" (published by Appleton). There is a dash of mystery and a tentative atmosphere of romance in the tale, primarily designed for the girl in her teens.

Julio Jurenito

A mad and merry intellectual phantasmagoria for the ultra-ultra is "Julio Jurenito" (published by Covici-Friede). Ably translated by Usick Vanzler from the original of Ehrenbourg, the book has apparently lost little if any of its satire. It is for the dabbler in Nietzschean philosophy who has not forgotten his sense of humor. A high-brow but never boresome fantasia on the human theme, it runs the gamut from the sublime to the ridiculous, tongue in cheek and thumb to the nose of philosophic thought.

CHAPTERS IN HISTORY

The principle John Richard Green followed in his "History of the English People" also animates Willis Mason West in his "History of the American Nation" (published by Ronald Press). Instead of military leaders, battles and campaigns, the progress of social and economic forces is traced, the spread of ideas and ideals. Prof. West's work is remarkably lucid and fair, even in its treatment of the great war, almost too recent to be seen in perspective. It is the best one-volume American history since Elson.

A Post-Bellum Governor

Henry Clay Warmoth pictures the stirring drama after secession in "War, Politics and Reconstruction" (published by Macmillan). Born in a log cabin, educated in a village school and printing office, he left home at 18 and opened a law office in Missouri. With the election of Lincoln and the secession of South Carolina, Warmoth was among the 600 men armed with shotguns and rifles who marched into Lebanon, Mo., took down the Lone Star flag and raised Old Glory. They held the fort until Gen. Franz Sigel came to the rescue. After the war Warmoth was appointed governor of Louisiana, where he remained as a leading spirit of the Republican forces with duels, canings, knifings and riots as a regular political program.

Moses to Herzl

Years ago Israel Zangwill wrote a book called "Dreamers of the Ghetto," now almost forgotten like his "Children of the Ghetto." But a new book on the same theme, Morris S. Lazaron's "Seed of Abraham" (published by Century), summons the same array of shadowy and brilliant figures from the cave of Engedi. From Moses to Theodor Herzl they form an inspiring procession. David, Jeremiah, Mary, Jesus, Spinoza, Heine, Marx and Disraeli are all presented in simple and attractive style.

A Faithful Apostle

Bainbridge Colby's lecture before the Missouri Historical Society, entitled "The Close of Woodrow Wilson's Administration and the Final Years" (published by Kennerley), is very eulogistic of Wilson. "He faced every problem. He never shirked. He met every challenge." Colby believes Wilson's fame will increase and that his life has left a permanent imprint on history.

Revolt Saved Argentina From Ruin

Irigoyenists were also known as "Personalists," which was endeavoring to impose itself by all possible methods, including those of confiscation of private wealth and assassination, such as [illegible] occurred in the Provinces of Mendoza and San Juan.

In the Department of Foreign Relations, disorder prevailed, and the Argentine Republic was placed in an unenviable position. There can be cited, for example, the retiring the Argentine delegation from the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva, and that of failing in the due observance of the rules of international courtesy, such as when the Argentine Ambassadorship at Washington was left vacant for more than a year and a half and up until the date of Irigoyen's overthrow.

Incredible details in the routine business of the Foreign Department were left in disorder; there was lacking the most elemental attention which the Minister of that Department owed to the Foreign Diplomatic Corps in Buenos Aires as well as to the Argentine diplomats accredited to foreign governments.

In the realm of finance the same bad conditions prevailed. The budgets were never sanctioned in accordance with the needs of the country. Extraordinary expenditures were decreed by ministers directly against the provisions of the national accounting laws. The number of official posts were increased by thousands and were filled with the sole purpose of assuring additional votes for the administration. All loans were contracted on unfavorable terms; there was an excessive issuance of treasury notes.

One may calculate that the first administration of Irigoyen cost the country more than one billion pesos (approximately $400,000,000) wasted in unnecessary expenditures and illegal gratuities. In the very few days that the new Provisional Government has been in office, we have been able to prove in preliminary investigations that in the year and 10 months of the second Irigoyen administration there has been lost to the nation in the same manner a sum exceeding six hundred million pesos (about $250,000,000).

A final investigation will reveal that the Radical Government had made the country debtor to the extent of the tragic sum of two billion pesos (approximately $800,000,000) or almost half of the country's total debt.

In the Department of Public Instruction, posts of primary teachers were filled by thousands of persons who did not even hold a degree of master. In the secondary schools, where the same sort of appointments were made, and in institutions of higher learning such as universities, etc., disorder prevailed. Since 1918 the universities have passed through a period of violence never previously conceived of in the institutions of higher culture. Strikes and protests of university students became the normal state of these institutions.

In the army and the navy the organic laws were freely thrust aside. Discipline was relaxed. The future was closed to officers of merit and through this situation there were extraordinary occurrences such as the incorporation in the army of officers who had been retired for misconduct, giving them the rank which would have been theirs had they remained continuously in the service, and paying them corresponding salaries for all their years of inactivity.

The electoral triumph obtained by the Opposition in the Federal Capital in the elections of last March and the resurgence of the same opposition in the Provinces of Buenos Aires, Cordoba and Entre Rios, made it clear at last that the people had comprehended the pernicious and dissolvent effects of the Irigoyen policy.

It was evident, however, that the country would not wait. Irigoyenism, which was sure to be defeated in subsequent elections, would nevertheless remain in power until such elections were effected, or for practically all the remaining years of Irigoyen's presidential term. In other words, everyone was sure that the next President would not be an Irigoyenist, but it was also a certainty that the country could not wait for the normal replacement of its legal and official authorities. Such was the state of the country in the last week of the Irigoyen regime.

ART COMMENT by PENELOPE REDD

Westinghouse Memorial Only One in City With Setting Prepared for It

A memorial with a setting prepared for it, instead of granite and bronze stark against a barren site, has never occurred before in Pittsburgh.

That it has occurred this time in the Westinghouse Memorial we surmise is largely due to the fact that the entire plan was in the hands of an architect, and, moreover, a Pittsburgh architect who had a citizen's pride in presenting the memorial appropriately.

Last week the art critics from New York came on to prepare a review of the memorial as an object of national interest. In their impersonal regard, it was just another monument with sculpture.

The Westinghouse Memorial in Schenley Park, however, is immeasurably more. To begin with, Henry Hornbostel, the architect in charge, had a definite conception of a memorial that should do more to fulfill the desire of Mr. Westinghouse's colleagues to symbolize his achievements suitably.

A Perfect Site

Mr. Hornbostel wanted a memorial so designed and so placed that the passerby might be interested enough to pause and in pausing inevitably find that he had been persuaded into thought and thus genuinely complete the circuit of the memorial idea to remember deeds accomplished that are now accepted commonplaces.

This effect has been secured by the selection of a site conducive to contemplation. The natural charm of graceful trees and a lily pond was further enhanced by masses of rhododendrons. Then the memorial was designed as the center of interest in the landscape.

The Westinghouse Memorial is not approached by a path directly on the long axis of the scheme, but by two paths which lead to the sides. The memorial is composed of three panels arranged in a semi-circular form as in the old "exedra." It differs, however, in that it is made up of three free parts, not connected, as are the classic examples.

The material which Mr. Hornbostel has chosen is daring and opulent. He has used a base of black Norwegian granite. Upon this base the large central bronze panel flanked by two semi-circular wings rests.

The panels are pure sculpture and were modeled in wax by hand exactly as they stand today in bronze.

The chief sculptor was Daniel Chester French, who had been a friend of Mr. Westinghouse for long years. He had made a portrait bust of George Westinghouse and knew well of the great engineer's achievements.

French, the Sculptor

Mr. French designed the entire central panel, which contains a medallion portrait of Mr. Westinghouse bending over his drawing board. The tondo-portrait is supported by two figures, one a skilled mechanic and the second an engineer with a slide rule. These three figures are in full relief.

The rear of the panel shows the backs of the two figures on either side of an oak tree whose foliage forms the pierced pattern of the front.

Beneath the inscription describing Mr. Westinghouse, the first train to be equipped with the Westinghouse airbrake is shown in relief sculpture.

The flanking wings likewise have three panels each in which Paul Fjelde has shown the concrete results of George Westinghouse's engineering ability.

The entire memorial, other than the work of Daniel Chester French and Paul Fjelde, was modeled by Massaniello Piccirilli.

Con Amore

The inscriptions on the panels, and there are of necessity a number, have been a labor of love intelligently accomplished by John F. Miller, a member of the trustees' committee of the Westinghouse Memorial Association.

"A shining mark for the guidance and encouragement of American youth" is Mr. Miller's final summary of Mr. Westinghouse's career and when we come around to the front of the memorial there we find the statue of youth which Daniel Chester French has done in heroic size.

The bronze with its covering of gold leaf is resplendent as one views it in turn through the plumes of drooping willows in the foreground.

When the 60,000 Westinghouse employes who have contributed to this fund view it on the day of its unveiling, October 6, one anticipates that they will find the Westinghouse Memorial impressive.

"CANADA DRY"
PALE GINGER ALE

HAVE YOU TRIED—?

Canada Dry's new Golden Ginger Ale. Never before have you tasted a golden ginger ale with such a marvelous flavor. The secret of its delight comes from a secret and exclusive process of beverage making.

Canada Dry's new Sparkling Lime. This wonderfully refreshing beverage brings you the lure and romance of the tropics. Let it win you with its keen, cooling lime taste as it is winning countless others daily.

SUN SHINES on sparkling green of grass . . . steady their stance . . . graceful their swing . . . these are sportsmen, clear-eyed, suntanned, vigorous, healthy through exercise. They stride across the course with ease, while matching the excellence of their play is the beverage they drink, "Canada Dry," refreshing, exhilarating and thrilling as the click of a well-stroked drive.

The excellence of "Canada Dry" appeals to every lover of sport

You are a sportsman. Then you probably drink "Canada Dry." You know what the qualities of sportsmen are. You cherish excellence of all sorts, both in your play and in that of your friends. And that is why you drink this fine old ginger ale. For it, too, has the qualities which every sportsman, every lover of sport, recognizes. The Champagne of Ginger Ales has basic excellence.

The very foundation of "Canada Dry" is "Liquid Ginger"—which we make from selected Jamaica ginger root by a special process. This process is exclusively controlled by us and, unlike any other method, retains for "Canada Dry" all of the original aroma, flavor and natural essence of the ginger root. Rigid laboratory control assures uniformity, purity and highest quality. A special process of carbonation enables "Canada Dry" to retain its sparkle long after the bottle has been opened.

Such careful procedure produces a ginger ale which has won the approving nod of connoisseurs the wide world over. Go to London, dine at a famous restaurant, and there you will find "Canada Dry" served. In the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa "Canada Dry" is a favorite beverage. In New York at well-known clubs, on transatlantic liners, on famous limited trains across the continent, this fine old ginger ale is the choice of many, many people.

Countless homes from one end of this country to the other serve it. Its unforgettable flavor adds pleasure to dining. Its refreshing qualities make a meal more pleasant. Its joyousness, its bubbling, sparkling presence, contribute to the gaiety of any party. Serve "Canada Dry." Order it today.

Fashionable Weddings on Fall Calendar

By PATRICIA PITT.

Intermingled during the coming week with the delicate, drifting leaves of scarlet and saffron and with the rich-hued garden flowers of autumn will be wedding flowers. For beginning with this week end and continuing throughout the week fashionable weddings will star the final days of September and the opening days of poet-praised October.

There's a harmony between a stately bridal procession and a rich, haze-hung autumnal day, don't you agree?

Before we talk about the weddings of the coming week, I want to describe a wedding of much interest to Pittsburgh folks, which took place in the East yesterday.

Married in East

Elizabeth Cheswick Schmertz, daughter of Mrs. Edward A. Schmertz, of Atlantic City, and formerly of Pittsburgh, is the bride, and Dr. Wilson Arbogast Foust, of Allentown, Pa., is the bridegroom.

Elizabeth is a niece of the Junior William E. Schmertzes and of the Louis R. Schmertzes and a cousin of the W. E. Carnahans, all of whom were guests at the wedding.

The wedidng took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Olivet Presbyterian Church of Atlantic City, with the Rev. Harold G. Gaunt as officiant. Palms, cibotium ferns and dahlias in the rich, deep hues of fall, decorated the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother,

Young Society Folks to See Marionettes

Many society folks will entertain their children and their friends' children at the marionette show "The Yellow Knight of Oz" to be given Saturday afternoon in the Carnegie Lecture Hall. Each year the marionettes' arrival results in theater parties for the very young set.

Among those who are planning to attend and who have given their patronage to the event are Mrs. George M. Laughlin, Mrs. Eric Fisher Wood, Mrs. F. W. Edmondson, Mrs. Harvey Childs, III, Mrs. Harry Dangerfield, Mrs. T. J. Gillespie, Jr., and Mrs. Knowles Woodwell.

Others who have shown their interest in the marionettes are Mrs. T. M. Jones, III, Mrs. Harry Le Fever, Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, Mrs. Charles M. Brown, Mrs. D. M. Craig, Mrs. J. A. Christy, Mrs. W. G. McKee, Mrs. R. J. Frank, Mrs. James M. Shields, Mrs. R. P. Griffith.

Also giving their patronage are Mrs. William Gibson, Mrs. H. H. Permar, Mrs. Carlton Leonard, Mrs. Grant B. Shipley, Mrs. J. C. Whetzel and Mrs. Ira M. Smith.

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

[illegible] put into action its slogan [illegible] the Pittsburgh Branch Women's International League for Peace and Freedom will hold a benefit party the evening of Friday, October 10, in Webster Hall. Cards, dancing, entertainment and of course refreshments [illegible] features of the affair. There is to be a [illegible] booth with Mrs. [illegible] in charge.

[illegible] Mrs. Cha[illegible] president [illegible] Miss Louisa K[illegible] chairman [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Pe[illegible] Mrs. George [illegible] W[illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. W[illegible] Ralph W[illegible] Miss Max[illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Kaufman, Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. Joseph [illegible] Mrs. Norman W. Stoter, Mrs. [illegible] C. Riggs, Mrs. [illegible] Miss [illegible] Miss Elizabeth Rataan, Mrs. Harry G. Samson and Mrs. [illegible] W[illegible]

Unique Invitations

[illegible] invitations in the shape of leaves have been sent out for the affair [illegible] that [illegible] many [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] heads the [illegible] committee [illegible]

The committee meetings at which plans for the benefit are being formulated [illegible] of the days when the Pittsburgh W. I. L. was being organized. It was [illegible] following the signing of the armistice that 25 or [illegible] women [illegible] at a [illegible] enthusiasm met, among them such prominent members of the community as Miss Mary Bakewell, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, Miss Myra Johns, Miss Louisa Kn[illegible], Miss Helen Glenn Tyson, Mrs. David Alter, Mrs. George Hebel, Mrs. Amelia Zugsmith and Mrs. Dudley D. Pendleton.

In 1920 and '22 the branch brought Jane Addams, the League's founder and international president, to address gatherings here.

Absurd Criticism

Coming into existence as it did shortly after the World War, the League has been subject to bitter and absurd criticism, some of which was merely postwar hysteria. Even today, when thinking men and women all over the world are uniting their efforts to popularize world peace, echoes of these same misinterpretations that were bred of [illegible] crop out occasionally.

The League has existed since 1915 as an international body with branches in almost every civilized country. Its objects, character and work, both national and international, [illegible] are plainly stated in its literature, which is available to any one. Furthermore, its meetings are public. It has no relations with any government or government agents, and when it desires to take action in regard to any matter of public policy it proceeds in the usual way by means of petitions, resolutions, delegations, personal interviews or through the press. It is financed in the customary way by membership fees and [illegible] contributions from bequests and special funds.

At one time the preposterous idea somehow got abroad that the W. I. L. had some mysterious connection with Soviet Russia. The truth is that the League is distinctly opposed to every form of dictatorial [illegible] in revolution [illegible]

Following Old Policy

The basis of this misconception [illegible] the fact that the League has advocated the recognition of the existing government of Russia [illegible] following the policy of Washington and Jefferson with regard to the recognition of the government of France.

Its policy is based on no approval of Russian principles or policies, but, as Emily Balch, prominent League member, expressed it, on the traditional American belief that to enter into normal relations with all countries makes for peace and world order.

A point that from time to time evidently needs elucidation is the policy of the League in regard to disarmament. The League maintains that while general disarmament is the goal, little progress can be made if everyone waits for everyone else. It urges that in each country efforts be made to educate that country towards disarmament. It is also Miss Balch who says it is not a change in human nature that is needed, but development of the full capacities of human nature as it is and an application of as much intelligence towards making the mechanism of world relations function without friction as now goes into mechanical miracles.

Ventnor Girl Married to Trafford Man

On Monday afternoon Miss Edna Elizabeth McAllister, daughter of Mrs. Mary A. McAllister, of Ventnor, N. J., formerly of Pittsburgh, became the bride of Dr. Floyd Snyder, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Snyder, of Trafford, Pa. The wedding took place at 2 o'clock in the Church of St. John-by-the-Sea, with the Rev. William Allan Dean officiating. The marriage was a quiet affair owing to the recent death of the bride's father.

Dr. Snyder is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Dr. and Mrs. Snyder will live in Trafford when they return from a honeymoon in the New England states and Canada.

Historical Group To Fete President

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. W. F. Fetree and with her aides of the social committee and Mrs. James S. Biggs' music committee assisting, the Keystone Association for Historical Research will hold its president's day reception October 6 in the Congress of Clubs. Miss Virginia Harmon will present the musical program at the affair, which is planned in honor of Mrs. Eugene S. Gaskill.

City Club to Hear About Style Key

"Discrimination, the Key to Style" is the attractive sounding subject upon which Miss Helen Kendall, decoration consultant of New York, will speak Thursday afternoon before the Woman's City Club, illustrating with materials. Miss Kendall will also answer questions pertinent to her topic.

Miss Maxwell Is to Marry On Tuesday

Miss Irene Maxwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vincent Maxwell, of Morrow avenue, has named her wedding day as Tuesday. She will become the bride of Frederick Craig, son of William Craig, of Charleroi, and the ceremony will take place in the Wilkinsburg Christian Church with the Rev. D. Park Chapman as officiant.

Mrs. Helen Maxwell, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, will be the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Irene Casey and Miss Ruth Craig, sister of the bridegroom-elect. Harry Vincent Maxwell, Jr., brother of the bride-elect, will be the best man, and the ushers will include Edward Runnells and W. Earl Higley. The flower girl will be small Doris Jean Koerbel.

After the wedding there will be a reception in the Maxwell home.

Alice Kerr Is Married In Church

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Kerr, of Freeport, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Alice Kerr, to Thomas Lehner, son of Mrs. John Lehner, of Kittanning, which took place Wednesday morning in St. Mary's Catholic Church, Freeport, with the Rev. Stephen Benson officiating.

The bride wore brown lace and tulle with a matching hat and carried yellow Pernet roses. Miss Marie McNally, of Pittsburgh, who was the bride's only attendant, wore tangerine crepe with a hat of autumn brown velvet and a corsage of Killarney roses. The best man was Charles Ellermeyer. Mr. and Mrs. Lehner will be at home in Kittanning after an eastern motor trip.

Chartiers Women Postpone Meeting

Because the president, Mrs. Walter R. Fleming, does not sail for home until October 4, the Chartiers Women's Clubs Association has postponed its opening reception from October 9 until October 23. It will take place as planned in Mrs. Fleming's home, Pioneer avenue, Dormont.

Sheraden Women To Hear Reports

Reports of officers and committees, installation of officers and presentation of the year book, together with a program by the entertainment committee, have been arranged for the Sheraden Monday Club on October 6. Mrs. A. R. Kaufman is hostess and Mrs. Floyd Beatty, leader.

Aides Named For Southern Club Affair

Aides for the reception to be given Friday, October 10, by the Southern Club will include Mrs. Frank Barrington, Mrs. Arthur B. Lynn, Mrs. Herman R. Bickle, Mrs. E. G. McCormack, Mrs. Alan Chandler, Mrs. Robert Riddle, Mrs. Maitland Dubois, Mrs. T. H. Robertson, Mrs. L. Fred Kloos and Mrs. Q. S. Snyder.

The affair is in honor of the president, Mrs. James McFall, and will be marked by a fine musical program. Oscar Davis, young violinist, will be heard, accompanied by Janet Spaugh, and Eeln Glen Campbell, coloratura soprano, will sing to the accompaniments of Adalaine Merrill Biddle. Mrs. Joseph Marsh and Mrs. C. Perry Kiefer are the hostesses.

Open Year At Clairton On Thursday

Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston, Congress of Clubs president, is to be the principal speaker Thursday at the opening meeting, a reception for new members, of the Clairton Woman's Club. Mrs. Johnston will have "The Business of Being a Club Woman" as her topic. Other speakers listed in the new yearbooks are Mrs. A. I. Stroud, of the Family Welfare Association; Dr. Roswell H. Johnson and Dr. Robert T. Hance, University of Pittsburgh; Miss Isabelle Anderson, assistant to the Pitt dean of women; Miss Margaret McClennahan, director of women's athletics at Pitt, and Mrs. Helen Glen Tyson, who is to speak on "Are Parents Really Necessary?" The club's eleventh anniversary is included among the special events of the season.

Club Plans Exhibition Of Antiques

To increase their building fund, members of the Bridgeville Woman's Club will hold an exhibition of antiques at the home of Miss M. Cora Murray Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Supper will be served at 5:30. Bridgeville has an interesting historical background, which fact in itself promises something especially interesting for the exhibit. Club activities chairman Mrs. James White is managing the affair and Mrs. George P. Murray is head of the supper committee. Mrs. Thomas P. Hughes is chairman of the committee on antiques and Mrs. Joseph Donaldson of the candy committee.

Seton Hill Alumnae Ball Group Named

Mrs. Richard King Foust, president of the Seton Hill Alumnae Corporation of Seton Hill College, Greensburg, has chosen her committee for the annual ball to be held in the Activities Building on the campus Friday evening, October 10.

Miss Rose Boggs is chairman of the invitations and ticket committee; Mrs. J. Pierre Vogel, door committee; Miss Helen Schmadel, decorations; Miss Kathryn Faragher, refreshments, and Miss Eleanor Roland, checking.

Miss Martha Raab, Miss Elizabeth Mooney, Miss Helen Hecholtzer and Miss Kathryn Bolsam are assisting Mrs. Foust on the general committee.

Year Starts October 16 At Oakmont

"Some High Spots in Pittsburgh History" will be discussed by Frank C. Harper at the luncheon which is to begin another year for the Oakmont Woman's Club on October 16. It will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, where the club has arranged to conduct the majority of its meetings this season, and Mrs. Earl Loomis will furnish a program of vocal music.

Honors will be shared by Mrs. H. M. Beibel, the new president, and her predecessors in office.

Miss Julia Morgan Harding, Mrs. Clinton Hale, Penelope Redd Jones, Judge Sara Soffel, Miss Sarah Moot, Mrs. M. M. Redenbaugh, Mrs. DeHaven Woodrow, Stanley Ashe, B. S. Joice, Chester Marvin Wallace and Attorney Ella Graubart are among the speakers listed for this year by the organization.

Janet Reid Weds, Father Officiates

On Tuesday morning Miss Janet Reid, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. William J. Reid, of Aiken avenue, became the bride of A. Victor Crookston, Jr., son of Col. and Mrs. A. Victor Crookston, of McPherson boulevard, in the home of the bride's parents, with her father officiating.

There was a wedding breakfast after the ceremony. The bride's sister, Miss Helen Reid, was her only attendant and the best man was McLain Crookston.

Alliance to Hold 'Observatory' Night

An added October feature on the Outlook Alliance's calendar of events is the "Observatory evening" on the seventeenth, when the members, their husbands and guests will visit the Allegheny Observatory and hear a talk by Dr. Frank Jordan.

The official opening of fall activities will be the benefit card party, white elephant and candy sale on Thursday in the Keystone Athletic Club. Mrs. H. D. Stark, president, is serving as honorary chairman, with Mrs. S. J. Corbett as general chairman. Mrs. C. L. Stevenson and Mrs. Marian Smith will be at the candy booth. Mrs. A. J. Dally is taking reservations.

Club Begins New Season At Carnegie

An afternoon of varied interests claimed the attention of Carnegie Monday Club members last week when they gathered in the Y. W. C. A. with Mrs. W. H. Roberts as hostess. At the close of the annual business meeting, Mrs. W. B. Holt sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. J. H. Sanford; Mrs. P. W. Heck handed the gavel to Mrs. W. W. Booth; Mrs. Norman Glasser outlined the year's plans, and Mrs. Nina H. McCullough presented a paper on "The Indian," which was supplemented by a Cadman number sung by Mrs. O. S. Heck. A social hour followed.

Auxiliary to See Fashion Revue

A fashion revue and musicale have been prepared for the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary, North Boroughs branch, Y. M. C. A., on Wednesday afternoon. The revue will be presented through the courtesy of McCreery and Company. The music will be by Mrs. Martha Gerber, soprano; Mrs. William L. Stone, contralto, and Mrs. Charles Fulton, accompanist.

State Jewish Women Will Meet Oct. 19

Pittsburgh Section National Council of Jewish Women will be the hostess group at the tenth annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Conference, to be held from Sunday evening October 19 to Tuesday, October 21, with headquarters at the Hotel Schenley. The program for the convention on which the committee headed by Mrs Alfred M Oppenheimer has been working all summer, is now complete and will offer three days of diversified business and social sessions.

An unusual feature is the fact that no speakers are listed for the business sessions. Instead the time will be devoted to reports of the year's work by state chairmen of departments and discussions of the work under round-table leaders. The conference will open with a supper at which Mrs Leo I. Half, Pittsburgh president, will be hostess to the presidents of other sections and this will be followed by a session at the Y. M. & W. H. A.

Luncheon at the Hotel Schenley will be held on both Monday and Tuesday. Monday evening is banquet night, when Miss Mary Agnes Doyle of the Goodman Memorial Theater, Chicago, will entertain with "Broadway and Ballads." On Tuesday evening the delegates and other visitors will be conducted on a tour of the International Art Exhibit. The Industrial League-Handcraft Guild tea, to be held at the Hotel Schenley on Wednesday afternoon, October 22, will supplement the activities of the conference and will give out-of-town guests as well as Pittsburgh members an opportunity to see the work done by both shops.

Overseas League Feting President

The local unit of the Women's Overseas Service League will have a tea this afternoon in the home of Mrs Flora Laughlin, Penn avenue, Point Breeze, in honor of Mrs Mildred Taubles of San Francisco, national president of the league. The local members have begun their Wednesday evening card parties at the United States Veterans Hospital and will continue them through the fall and winter.

Oct. 6 Date For D. A. R. Card Party

Mrs L. Blaine Snow will head the candy committee at the annual benefit bridge to be held Monday, October 6, at the Hotel Schenley by Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the chapter's one outstanding event of the year from which funds are raised to finance its patriotic work in the Children of the Republic Clubs.

Mrs Snow will be assisted by a number of young girls, among them Neil Stewart Zang, La Salle Dorrance, Betty McCance, Anna Jane Phillips, Mary Phillips, Harriet Wainwright, Helen Tunnell, Jane Sloan and Louise Bausman.

Ingram Club Women To Hold Benefit

For the first time in its 11 years, the choral of the Ingram Women's Club will have a benefit, holding it the afternoon of October 7 in the Firemen's Association Building. Mrs. F. C. Rex is choral director.

MARGUERITE McCAHILL, daughter of the David I. McCahills of Warwick Terrace, [illegible] Heights, finds riding the most absorbing interest of all the 15 years of her life. She and her twin sister Marie have been riding in Pittsburgh Hunt and Sewick[illegible] horse shows during the past two years. That the girls are interested in riding is not at all surprising since her father is master of hounds of the Pittsburgh Hunt, and their mother used to ride and still attends all the shows in the vicinity.

This fall Marguerite and her sister are doing their first year of prep school work at Winchester. In four or five years their father and mother plan to present them to society.

Besides riding Marguerite swims, plays golf and tennis. Of course she has other interests besides athletics. She likes music and plays exceptionally well for such a young girl. She's already quite tall and has bobbed light brown hair and brown eyes. Patricia Pitt

MADELON'S MIRROR OF FEMININE FANCY

IF YOU want to learn more about an industry that's made a world's record growth in a few short years, if you want to be amused and entertained, if you are seriously interested in finding out about one of the greatest wonders of the ages, then take an evening off, or two evenings off, and go out to the Radio Show at Duquesne Gardens. It starts tomorrow and ends Saturday night. You'll see sets there from the little inexpensive table models to the very finest that radio has to offer. You'll learn about Tone Control, and Quick Vision Dial, and Flashograph and all the rest of the improvements that people will be discussing this winter. The Radio Show is also an Electrical Show this year and many of the very appliances that you'd like to have in your home will be on display. Also, many of the big stars of radio will be there to entertain you. In fact, I'm so enthusiastic about this show that I've written a special column on it—"Madelon Visits the Radio Show"—which you'll find in the Special Radio Section. Go out, it's worth it.

. . . Don't Be Without It

THE next time you go shopping, stop in the Myrtle Bennett Shop, at 2002 Jenkins Arcade, and buy yourself a jar of her own make of cold creme. It's grand! An all-purpose creme that just forces the dirt out of the pores, nourishes the tissues and keeps the skin from becoming dry and non-receptive to powder. Miss Bennett started making this creme for her own use, but the story of it went around (her own complexion is it's best ad), and finally she was persuaded to put it on the market. Discriminating women who like powder that matches their skin will be interested in her blending of a marvelous French poudre that contains no lead and doesn't cake, too. Just now she is offering the cold creme (regularly $1.00), and the poudre (regularly $1.50), for $2.00. She fills mail orders quickly. (Be sure you tell the color of eyes, skin and hair) writing for the Poudre, be

. . . The Reason Why

THERE'S no doubt about it, prices are coming down. And there's no doubt about it, the Petty Bootery did a wise thing when they decided to merge with nineteen other shoe merchants from other large cities and the combined twenty of them guaranteed to take the entire output of the factory where the Petty shoes are manufactured. By this stroke, overhead in Petty's factory has decreased and volume increased, quality has remained the same and prices have come down. Petty's shoes of high quality . . . the sort of shoes you see in the magazine ads for $14 and $16 . . . are selling for $8.50 and $10. Just look at the $10 model sketched—a beautifully fitting, black mat kid with just a touch of genuine snakeskin and a smart steel buckle at the instep strap. See them in the window. Petty's is on the Main Floor of the Jenkins Arcade.

. . . For Little Invalids

I WOULDN'T mind being sick myself if someone were to send me one of these "Package-a-day" presents from that gay little heaven of toys, the Peter Pan Shop, at 214 N. Highland Avenue, East Liberty. They're a fascinating lot of things out there for little sick ones well enough to be amused, but not well enough to get up. Put-together toys in great variety. Games that will make young eyes open wide. Cut-outs. Paper Dolls from every corner of the globe. Painting books and paints with palettes, mind you! Weaving work for little folks. Beads to string. There's every sort of toy there that you've ever thought of, and lots that you haven't. And if you haven't time to select the gift, just call the Peter Pan folk, tell them the age of the child and a little about his or her tastes, and they'll know.

. . . A New Creation

HERE'S a shoe worthy of being the foundation of any brown outfit . . . and you fashion-wise women know just how prominently brown looms up on the fall horizon. This shoe is dark brown kid, inlaid in pleasant fashion with mauve kid. It has a nice Cuban heel and the flexible yet firm arch that all Menihan Arch Aid shoes are famous for. There's a world of wear in this oxford, and the promise of extreme comfort, as well as smartness. It's displayed at Ritter & Morrison's, at 501 Liberty avenue, where they have the reputation of having one of the most capable sales forces in town . . . salespeople willing to give you literally hours of their time in their effort to send you forth in the best fitting shoe possible. Ritter & Morrison's is rightly called "The Store of Unhurried Service."

. . . High Up in the Car World

COULD anything be more thrilling than to step from your door and see a Lincoln, all shining and powerful, parked at the curb? The feeling of leashed power as you slide under the wheel, the soft purr of the motor. Gears slide in and out without the slightest noise; you pick up speed almost instantly, as you glide away. The Lincolns are more beautiful than ever. The new body types are the work of the foremost custom coach makers. They have a new smartness, a new fleetness and grace. There are no yearly models. Lincoln builds motor cars so fine, so good to look upon that they are always smart. See the late models . . . better still, have a ride in one . . . by calling at the Linford Motor Company, 5124 Liberty Avenue.

. . . How About This?

MR REIFENSTEIN'S been to Europe and Mr. Reisenstein's back. And now that he's here he wonders where-in-the-name-of-all-that's-crowded he's going to find room for all the things he bought over there. There's only one answer to that; so, sadly and sorrowfully, they've gone about making room . . . 50% off on this; 25% off on that; 10% off on something else. Glassware, china, English earthenware, goblets, sherbets, cocktail glasses, lamps, shades, mirrors, pewter, leather goods. Even many open stock patterns. The way they've chopped prices . . .! You wonder what anyone (even Mr. Louis Reisenstein), could possibly find in Europe that's nicer than these things that are being sacrificed to make room. Check up on your needs . . . think about Christmas . . . and go down to Reisenstein's tomorrow (425 Liberty Ave.).

. . . Beautiful Furniture

DO YOU have a funny feeling about going in a store just to look? Well, this is one week when you can indulge your love for beautiful furniture in every furniture store and department in town, without feeling in the least awkward about it. You see, they're all in on the Home Furnishings Style Show, which is intended primarily as a time for putting the new styles in furniture, upholstery, lamps, etc., before the home-makers. Gilbert's Fine Furniture, at 632 Smithfield Street, have completely transformed their store for the show, and they invite you cordially to come in and enjoy yourself looking at their individual line of custom-made pieces. By the way, they have a new shipment of that same little French commode that so many people went wild over a few weeks ago. And it's still $19.75. Prices are low now . . . they're bound to go up.

. . . One Price—$6.95

"I NEVER knew the Parisian Bootery sold anything but high-heeled shoes," said one of the girls up here, as she looked at the smart little suede tie sketched. And do you know a lot of people have that idea? And here all this time the Parisian has had on hand a very complete selection of Cuban-heeled footwear, designed especially for suits and street wear. This little black suede (black suede is popular as Greta Garbo right now), was originally a $10 model, but since this shop has established the one price of $6.95, why naturally it's $6.95. It's a strictly hand-made shoe with a trick lacing up the front and narrow all[illegible] of kid for trimming. It also comes in kid with patent stripping. See it and the many other beautiful fall models at the Parisian Bootery, Roosevelt Hotel, Penn Avenue.

. . . Don't Neglect Lines

JUST as you wouldn't expect a building to be right unless the foundation were designed correctly, so you can't expect a beautiful ensemble in dress unless the figure is good to start with. You can take the most exquisite dress in a galaxy of exquisite dresses, put it on an ungainly figure and the whole effect will be lost. You can likewise take a dress that you wouldn't even notice in a collection, put it on a figure of pleasing lines and symmetry, and it will look stunning. The new fall styles emphasize lines. They make it impossible to look smart unless you wear a correct foundation garment. If you aren't pleased with the foundation garment you're wearing now, take my advice and go down to the Lasner Studio, at 604 Clark Building. Mrs. Lasner is a marvel at fitting the most difficult figures. She can make you over completely.

. . . Good Seed Means Good Grass

ALL grass seed looks more or less alike before it's planted. Looking at it without knowing its history, you can't tell whether it will come up in soft, green luxuriousness, or whether it will turn out to be the weedy, patchy, sparse variety. That's why it's so terribly important that you buy your grass seed from a reputable firm. And Beckert's, at 101 Federal Street (just over the Sixth Street Bridge) certainly fill that bill. They have been in the business for over fifty years; they test all their seeds thoroughly and often, and they have hundreds of beautiful, velvety lawns to their credit. (Ask them where . . . they'll tell you.) Now that we've had some rain, it's time to get busy on your lawn . . . time to sow good seed. Then when spring comes and brings with it a whole lawn full of soft, green grass you'll be delighted that I told you about Beckert's.

. . . Girls With Curls

FOR SKILL with the scissors, you'll find none better than Monsieur Lichtl, the illustrious Frenchman who heads Maison Frederic's, at 207 Fifth avenue. He was giving me a few tips on fall hair cuts as they should be a few days ago. The long bob, clearing the shoulders by about two inches, will be seen on fashionable heads, closely following the outline of the head, and in many cases the ends will be curled in clusters at the nape of the neck. In front the coiffure will be worn back from the face, but not with severity, my dear, for lying flatly across your forehead will be rows of bewitching curls. It's even whispered that if you haven't enough curls of your own, it will be perfectly proper to insert a few false ones. Sounds like Grandma's day, doesn't it? If you would be beautifully shorn, call Monsieur Lichtl at Atlantic 0444.

. . . Decorative Candles

THANK heaven, modern efficiency hasn't succeeded in doing away with candles, because, if there's one thing that adds a note of charm to any festivity it's the soft glow of candlelight. If you like candles as well as I do, you'll welcome McClements' Candle Sale with beautiful wax candles, of fine quality, 15-inch length and in rainbow colors, selling for $1.25 a dozen (they are $3.00 a dozen). They are arranged in boxes of [illegible] one color in a box, so that [illegible] dozen may [illegible] different colors. [illegible] your candles now for [illegible] een, Thanksgiving, Christmas and all the holiday season! And of course I needn't urge you to visit McClements the week of October 6th for their Fall Opening. The display of Fall Flowers and Fruit will be gorgeous and filled with ideas for you, my dear lady. This shop is at 535 Wood Street.

. . . Business English

DON'T think because you've studied English in grade school, and high school, and college, perhaps, that a course in Business English would simply be time wasted. You've no idea until you've actually tried to compose a business letter how different Business English is from ordinary spoken or written English. The Grace Martin Secretarial School (18th floor, Keenan Building) includes in its secretarial course an excellent course in Business English. (When you graduate from there you'll be one of those efficient secretaries who take down the gist of what her employer wishes to say in a few sentences and composes the letter herself. And they're the ones who are drawing the fat pay envelopes!) Stop in and see the enlarged Grace Martin School. Enroll for Evening Classes on October 6th. Three nights a week, two classes each night. Another Day Class enrolls October 6th, also.

. . . "Attention, Home-Makers"

EVERY right-minded home should have an emergency shelf for the times when friend husband brings home an extra guest and the chops don't quite go round. Monday evening at 7:30 in Utility Hall, Miss Fladnes will tell you all about "The Emergency Shelf." On Tuesday at 2:00 the Hostess class will have an interesting demonstration and discussion of "Cocktails and Canapes," those self-starters to the appetite. Then on Friday variations of the soft-boiled-egg-and-toast breakfast will appear in a talk on "A Heartier Breakfast." Another thing. They're making some of the prettiest lamp shades ever this year. Classes in Lamp Shades are on Mondays and Wednesdays at 2:00, Thursdays at 7:00. Utility Hall is at 435 Sixth Avenue and it's the model home of the Duquesne Light and Equitable Gas Companies. Everyone's invited, without charge.

. . . West Indies Cruises

THERE'S a heavenly group of islands out there in the Atlantic Ocean and the Caribbean Sea, just waiting for you to come and see them. And you don't have to be a plutocrat with an entire winter's leisure on your hands to do it, either. Hamilton, Bermuda; San Juan, Porto Rico; St. Pierre, Martinique; Fort de France, Martinique; Bridgetown, Barbados; La Brea, Trinidad; Cristobal, Panama; Kingston, Jamaica; Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Havana, Cuba; Nassau, Bahamas; you can see them in a fortnight, but a lifetime won't erase their delightful memories. Consider a winter trip. These West Indies Cruises are not nearly as expensive as you think—the Travel Bureau of the Union Savings Bank (Frick Building), can plan one for you at almost any price. Let them do it now, while there's still a wide choice of space and ships.

. . . "It's Fresher"

EVERYBODY [illegible] about [illegible] Pecan Fudge! I [illegible] for [illegible] Pecan Fudge [illegible] made from a recipe that Imming's candy [illegible] decided upon after they had experimented with Pecan Fudge recipes for months. And it's made fresh EVERY DAY, which explains why it's so rich and creamy [illegible] of the best butter, double-X cream and hardly any space between the pecans [illegible] Imming's Pecan Fudge Special all this week at [illegible] cents a pound instead of [illegible]. Order it for yourself and your friends from the factory at 601 Liberty Avenue, or buy it at any of the seven convenient stores. (The latest store at [illegible] Murray Avenue [illegible]) until Sept. 30th only.

. . . Coats and Hats for Tots

BEFORE you go any further on that winter outfit for the young folks from 2 to 6, visit the Jay Kiddie Shop, at 2607 Jenkins Arcade and survey the situation there. It's my contention that at no one place have more cute hat and legging outfits been gathered together . . . and, you know, I do get around. They have everything from the inexpensive made-for-hard-wear play coats in good substantial colors and materials to the finest of hand-made, pastel-colored dress coats. Some trimmed in youthful furs, like krimmer and squirrel; some with leather buttons and belts; some with appliqued hand work. All well lined and re-lined. All smartly cut, exquisitely finished. The kind of things that make people say to themselves as your smartly-turned-out little ones scamper past, "SOME one knows how to dress children."

. . . Ultra-Violet Rays

DID you know that as far as sunshine is concerned we're all going on a starvation diet? In fact, we're almost started on it. You see, there are only three months in the year when the sun delivers a generous supply of its Ultra-violet rays (the ones that have such a tremendous influence on our health), and these three months are June, July and August, with May and September deserving honorable mention. Now that September's almost over, don't you think it's high time you were arranging for your future sunshine? I'll tell you an easy way. Go down to the Natatorium, at 540 Duquesne Way, strip off your clothes, put on a pair of goggles to protect your eyes, and stretch out on a cot under the flood of Ultra-Violet rays. You'll get all the sunshine you need in a few minutes. Tuesdays and Thursdays are Ladies' Days. And Sun Baths are 6 for $1.00.

Cord Trimmings Favored

Trimmings play extremely important roles in new season frocks both for afternoon and evening. With the Russian invasion so pronounced it is not at all strange that trimmings Russian in type should be featured. One of the most conspicuous is the cord girdle, used on a tunic blouse to indicate the waistline. It is interesting also to note that cords are favored as means of outlining a square or V neckline of a daytime dress and that they are also employed as a finish for short sleeves, terminating in fringed ends.

The number of United States automobiles that entered New Brunswick this season, up to August 31, was 385,531.

THY ROCKS AND RILLS -:- A SUN-TELEGRAPH MOTORLOGUE

At McConnells Mills where Slippery Rock Creek tumbles down its rocky defile, Pennsylvania has a natural wonder that rivals famous Watkins Glen.

A drive of only 40 miles over new roads takes the Pittsburgh motorist to this beauty spot, which it is proposed to set aside as a state park.

PERFECTS OIL AUTO MOTOR

A Swedish engineer, K. J. E. Hesselman, is reported to have perfected an engine running on heavy oil for motor cars and similar purposes.

Mr. Hesselman believes he has combined the advantages of a Diesel engine and a gasoline engine without the disadvantage inherent in the different types. The motor of course is of low pressure and burns crude oil.

For the oil feed to the combustion chamber there is a fuel pump on each cylinder in order that the oil when injected into the chamber shall mix with the air, the air in the cylinder is made to rotate. Ignition of the oil and air mixture is affected by a sparking plug and electric spark in the same way as in a petrol motor.

It has been found necessary to throttle the air suction in order to obtain smoke-free running with light loads and idling. The motor is therefore provided with an air regulator which at all loads and speeds gives suitable pressure in the suction pipe. The cost of operating the engine is reported to be about a fourth that of the gasoline engine. Tests are said to have shown remarkable results.

PARIS MOTORS SHOW SHUNNED

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—General Motors Corporation has decided not to exhibit its products at the 1930 Paris Automobile Salon October 2 to 12 because of the prolonged discrimination by French show officials against American automotive manufacturers. Withdrawal from the show was explained by James D. Mooney, vice president of General Motors Corporation and president of the General Motors Export Company. He said:

"General Motors has been exhibiting at the Paris show for 11 years. Most other American motor manufacturers are represented. For the first few years American products were treated the same as those of other nations outside France, which naturally was favored. For the past five years, however, the French have been enforcing a 10-year-old rule under which Americans are permitted to select space only after the manufacturers of every other nation have chosen theirs. The only space left always is poorly lighted, and in recesses or inconspicuous places along walls. In addition, the show officials have seized many petty occasions to assess fines against American exhibitors."

Licensing of Auto Mechanics Advised

Licensing by the state government of all automobile mechanics is suggested by the Pittsburgh Motor Club as a method of reducing many injuries and fatalities each year due to accidents on the highways.

Safety engineers of the club point out that many garages permit non-skilled mechanics to make adjustments to brakes, steering apparatus and other parts of automobiles and often these repairs are not checked by a skilled expert before the machine is released to its owner. The result is failure of these important mechanical parts and auto wrecks.

Use of Special Oil In Motors Advised

Service men recommend using special oils from the start, and in such carefully measured doses as to keep the engine in good condition rather than to let it become troublesome. This is the thought behind those systems of oil injection designed to minimize carbon.

Auto Club Warns Motorists Against Minority Garages

Motorists are warned by the Pittsburgh Motor Club to be certain that responsibility for damage done to automobiles during servicing and repair operations will be assumed by the garage or station contracting for the work.

The legal department of the club has been asked to assist auto owners in recovering damages done to machines in this manner. Most garage and service station managers of the Pittsburgh district assume responsibility for automobiles that have been given to them for repairs but a minority group refuse to pay. Recovery must be made through court action if garages disclaim responsibility.

PENNSYLVANIA SPEEDS ROADS

Realizing that delays in carrying through public improvements are costly to the public and contribute to unemployment, the Pennsylvania Highway Department this year pushed highway construction so that by June 1, four-fifths of all 1930 road contracts were awarded.

This action was of tremendous importance to the 26,000 men working for the state and private contractors. Where other states have permitted legalities, technicalities and indifference to slow up letting of road contracts, Pennsylvania has gone ahead and started work. Early completion of contracts carries with it the benefit of early highway usage, which in this age of efficiency and applied economics is highly desirable.

If, for instance, a 50-mile stretch of pavement is thrown open to traffic six months earlier than originally planned, with a traffic volume of 1,000 cars daily, that highway will earn $500 to $1,000 daily for its users through lower car operating costs.

Pavement benefits are so manifold that often important savings are overlooked by the public. For instance, since 1911 Pennsylvania has, through paving projects, shortened main highways by 305 miles through relocations. This has resulted in annual savings of $15,670,000 to motorists through unnecessary travel, according to careful estimates. This year alone brought a reduction of 29.5 miles in the state system, at an estimated car operation saving of $1,150,000.

SCENIC BEAUTY PARADISE NEAR THIS DISTRICT

Little Known Slippery Rock Creek Canyon Is Among Marvels of U. S. Nature.

Tourist Who Has Seen Many Highly Regarded Places Boosts McConnells Mills.

By JOHN P. COWAN.

This is the twenty-seventh of a series of Motorlogues to points of interest suggested by readers. Another will be published next week.

How many Pittsburghers annually travels hundreds of miles to view the scenic wonders of Watkins Glen, in Central New York, the Ausable Chasm of the Adirondacks and Crawford Notch in the White Mountains and yet have never seen the awe-inspiring canyon of Slippery Rock Creek at McConnells Mills?

And McConnells Mills is only 40 miles from Pittsburgh!

Accept the testimony of one who has wandered through Watkins Glen and the Ausable as well as Crawford Notch and all the other notches of the White and the Green mountains that none of these much-advertised scenic spots has any superior claims on the beauty of this divine stretch of Slippery Rock.

PLAN STATE PARK

It will not be long until McConnells Mills will be known from coast to coast and will be visited by tens of thousands of tourists.

A movement is on foot to have it reserved as a state park. Tom Liggett, savior of Cook Forest, is behind the plan and this is assurance that it will go through. Having saved the white pines for posterity, Mr. Liggett is no less enthusiastic in his efforts to preserve the rocks.

DON'T KNOW HOME STATE

Pittsburghers and their neighbors throughout Western Pennsylvania who furnish the money that pays the dividends for travel resorts in both America and Europe are notorious for their lack of interest in the natural wonders of their own state.

They go to New York, New England, Canada and to the Far West by caravans and train loads, and to Europe by the shipload, but the majority of them never saw the

NEW SPAN AT OLD CROSSING

HARRISBURG, Sept. 27.—A new Lincoln highway bridge over the Susquehanna River between Columbia and Wrightsville erected by the adjoining counties of York and Lancaster at a cost of approximately $3,000,000 is completed and will be open about October 1, the Pennsylvania Motor Federation announced today. This bridge will take the place of the narrow Pennsylvania Railroad Company span that for years has carried the heavy motor traffic at this important crossing.

The bridge has four traffic lanes and one six-foot pedestrian walk. The river portion consists of 28 arch spans of 185 feet each. The approaches are laid out in old English style with bushes of white roses symbolic of the ancient House of York on the York County side and red roses representing the British House of Lancaster on the Lancaster shore. The toll houses have been designed along the English cottage type of architecture, in keeping with the history of the naming of these old Pennsylvania counties.

Tolls will be charged until sufficient funds are collected to retire the bond issues floated by the two counties to finance the bridge. The charge will be 25 cents for automobiles, including passengers.

The original bridge at this point was burned in June, 1863, by Union soldiers retiring before the advance of the Confederate invasion of Pennsylvania. The Confederate troops assisted the citizens of Wrightsville in saving their town from conflagration.

Air Cleaner Saves Engine From Dust

Dashing over a gravel or dusty road with the wind causing swirls of dust to cloud the pathway of the car, the motorist often wonders what effect this dust has upon the engine of his automobile, and if it finds it way into the vital working parts, thus causing a grinding wear.

The reassuring answer to this question is supplied by James M. Crawford, chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Company, who explains interestingly how the air cleaner removes the dust from the intake air, making it purer than that which you yourself breathe.

If it were not for the air cleaner, dust and sand would enter the carburetor—even in city driving—causing wear on cylinders, rings and pistons, Mr. Crawford says.

COLLEGE OPEN TO BOYS WHO JOIN CONTEST

Fisher Body Company Plans To Give 964 Prizes To Good Craftsmen

Details of the awards in addition to the four $5,000 university scholarships of four years each, in the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild miniature coach modeling contest are announced today. These undoubtedly will give additional emphasis to the enrollment of Pennsylvania boys in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph chapter of the guild, an enrollment which is reaching into the thousands.

There will be a total of 964 awards, including the four scholarships. That means that 964 boys will receive substantial recognition for their efforts in the construction of this miniature Napoleonic coach which they will build from scale drawings furnished without charge to all guild members.

The awards are so arranged that at least 20 and possibly 24 of the awards will be obtained by Pennsylvania boys. These will include cash awards ranging as high as $50 in gold in addition to the four university scholarships which will be competed for on a national basis. The complete list of awards is:

CHANCE AT SCHOLARSHIPS

Four university scholarships of four years each and valued at $5,000 each, to be given to the two boys in the senior class and the two boys in the junior class who build the best examples of the miniature model of the Napoleonic coach.

A week in Detroit as guest of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild and $50 in cash will be the reward of the boy in the junior class and the senior class boy who construct the best coach model in their respective state. Second awards in each of the 48 states will be $50 in cash. These total 192 first and second awards.

Ninety-six awards of $10 each for the two boys in each state whose coach models show the best examples of woodcraft. Ninety-six awards of $5 each to those rated second. Ninety-six first and 96 second choice in metalcraft work, 96 first and 96 second awards in trimcraft and 96 first and 96 second awards in paintcraft also will be awarded. These special state awards are $10 for first choice and $5 for second. These total 768 in number.

THOSE ELIGIBLE

All of the above awards are equally divided between the senior and junior classes. Boys ranging in age from 12 to 15, inclusive, are enrolled in the junior class and those from 16 to 19, inclusive, are enrolled as senior class members.

"A scholarship for a Pennsylvania boy," is the slogan of the Sun-Telegraph Chapter of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. And to assist in obtaining this objective the Sun-Telegraph will keep the members of its chapter fully informed each week regarding the progress of the guild work and in addition will print a series of instructions, illustrated by drawings showing the proper way to perform every detail of miniature coach making.

Since the announcement of the formation of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild with its avowed purpose of stimulating and advancing the art of fine craftsmanship with the boys of America, leading educators, industrialists and foremost workers in boys' activities in Pennsylvania have highly commended the movement.

HOW TO ENROLL

Boys between the ages of 12 to 19 years, inclusive, who have not enrolled are urged to do so at once. Just visit the nearest dealer in General Motors cars and ask to be enrolled in the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. The dealer will assist in making out the application for membership and will forward it to the headquarters of the guild in Detroit.

Membership card and button and complete plans and instructions for building the minature model Napoleonic coach will be mailed to each boy enrolling. This procedure also enrolls boys in this district in the Sun-Telegraph chapter. There are no fees or dues.

NEW LINCOLN DEALERS HERE

The Linford Motor Company, a new organization, has taken over the business of the Lowe Motor Company, Allegheny County agency for Lincoln motor cars at 5124 Liberty avenue. The new distributors are headed by E. R. Gnade, president, and Frederick Fair, vice-president, both prominent in business and financial affairs in Oil City, and J. U. Lautner, secretary and general manager.

Mr. Lautner was an official of the Lowe company, having served four years as sales manager. He has been in the automobile business 18 years, being connected previously with the Lincoln distributors in southern Florida and the Peerless Motor Car Company.

Vigorous Steps Taken To Curb Bus Speed

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—The Pennsylvania Motor Federation, state unit of the American Automobile Association, today indorsed Gov. Fisher's recent move to curb speeding buses. Through its 90 member clubs throughout the state the federation will cooperate in every possible way, according to S. Edward Gable, president.

"Many instances have been brought to the federation's attention in which buses have been operated recklessly," he said, "and at speeds far in excess of the limit set in the motor code. The bus has taken a place along side of the railroad train, the trolley car and the private automobile as a means of transportation, but it must hold to that place and not overstep the limitations of the law in speed, nor in any other phase of operation," Gable declared.

Plymouth Roadster Climbs Big Smokies

A Plymouth roadster was the first four-wheel vehicle of any description to cross the heretofore impassable Indian Gap Trail, in the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina. A. J. Hoff, a hotel man of Smokemont, N. C., made the trip in four hours and 45 minutes, from Gatlinburg, Tenn., to Smokemont, a distance of 24 miles, 10 of which had never before been traveled except on foot or by horseback. The mountain at this spot is 5,500 feet high.

As for the scenic glories nearer home, the majority of these distant travelers never have heard of the things worth while in a little jaunt of a few miles from home.

Completion of the improvement on the Perry Highway between Middle Lancaster and Portersville opens a straight road to McConnell's Mills. This new concrete is delightful driving and takes the tourist to the entrance of the old road that branches off just north of Portersville. This road leads down into the valley of enchanting rocks and rills of picturesque Slippery Rock Creek.

"Mose," a venerable Negro, looks after visitors' cars, and his parking rate is only 25 cents.

For more than a mile the creek flows through a deep, rocky canyon embowered by trees of nearly every variety found in Western Pennsylvania.

NO COMMERCIALIZATION

There is no commercialization of nature's work at McConnells Mills. The visitor is welcomed to go anywhere, and may roam at will along the stream and through the woods. The center of interest is the old mill and its log dam. As a result of the dry summer, there is little water behind the dam, and Mose is authority for the statement that this is the first time in 50 years that water has not flowed over the moss-covered logs.

The route to McConnells Mills is an easy afternoon automobile trip. Leave Pittsburgh via Millvale and the Babcock boulevard and join United States route No. 19 at Perrysville. Follow this road through Zelienople and Harmony to the camping ground and service station just beyond Portersville, turning left into the country road at that point. The return trip may be made over United States route No. 422 from Portersville to Butler and back to Pittsburgh over State route No. 8, a circuit of less than 100 miles. This Motorlogue was charted with a new Ford De Luxe sedan as the scout car. It was loaned by Hoeveler Motors, Inc., and carried George A. Hoeveler's X1 dealers' license tag, the first in the state.

CLUBS SPONSOR 'SAFETY' LAW

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—A safety responsibility bill developed along lines of those now in effect in 12 states, including New York and New Jersey, and in the province of Ontario, Canada, will be sponsored at the 1931 session of the legislature by the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, state unit of the American Automobile Association.

This will be one of the most important matters to come before the law makers in the opinion of S. Edward Gable, president of the state motorists organization. It is by no means a compulsory insurance law, he explained, but a safety measure that places the burden of responsibility on the driver for whatever he may do on the road and makes him liable for the consequences.

Mr. Gable, summing up the proposed law, said:

"When a motorist is involved in an accident that results in injury to a person or damage to property and is convicted of reckless driving or some other violation of the motor code as an outcome of the crash he is required under the law to give proof of his ability to satisfy any judgment that may be rendered against him to the extent of $5,000 for injury to one person, $10,000 for more than one and $1,000 for property damage. Failure to do so would result in automatic revocation of operator's license and cancellation of his car registration. If the motorist has a judgment imposed as the result of a civil suit growing out of an accident, even though there is no criminal conviction, the law would require that his license and registration certificate be suspended until he satisfies the claim."

The Pennsylvania Motor Federation has followed closely the operation of the safety responsibility law in other states and is satisfied it will work out to the advantage of the great body of car owners and drivers in this state. Through its member clubs in representative cities and towns throughout Pennsylvania it will make a united effort to have a law of this type enacted.

SPORTSMEN ASK FOR BABY CAR

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 27.—Reports which have reached the American Austin Car Company from dealers throughout the country indicate that an unforeseen demand for bantam Austins is coming from an unexpected quarter. This hardy little newcomer in the automotive field hailed as the conqueror of Old Man Traffic, modern urban Goliath, has caught the eye of duck hunters, bait casters and the whole fraternity of the woods and streams, according to C. A. Best, general sales manager of the American Austin Car Company.

The bantam Austin, a familiar sight now in the smart resorts of the country, has been added to the "kit" of sportsmen who already are oiling guns and reels and preparing to make for the wide open spaces where men are men but roads are not always roads.

Because it is 16 inches narrower and 28 inches shorter than any other American car now in production, it can take roads and trails that would block any other transportation unit.

BLACK LEADS AUTO COLORS

Early fall trends in colors for motor cars are given in the Automobile Color Index issued by the Duco Color Advisory Service. Black, says the Index, continues to maintain leadership but on a declining movement. Blue exhibits a tendency to slacken its downward trend at this time. There is, however, little change in the intensities of the individual blue colors that comprise the current list of blue leaders. Keen interest has recently been displayed in greenish blues of high luminosity and rich purity.

Brown is in greater popularity and is making gains at the expense of black and blue. While ranking fourth in preference, green is shown as remaining in remarkably steady demand during the past three months.

Maroon seems least in favor of all the major colors while interest in grey has undergone an abrupt change at the expense of maroon.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Venturesome automobile tourists who have the desire to visit out-of-the-way places will now be able to travel to a point far within the Arctic Circle over what is believed to be the northernmost road in existence.

This is in Northern Finland, starting about 300 kilometers within the Circle. It extends 230 kilometers farther north to the Fiord of Petsamo in the Arctic Ocean.

A description of this road and a brief history of its construction are contained in the report submitted by E. W. Skogstrom, director general of roads, Helsingfors, Finland, for the Sixth International Road Congress here October 6 to 11.

Thrills and Action Never Occurring in Old Form of Bridge Found in Contract

By ERNEST [illegible]

[illegible]

Although contract bridge has [illegible] popularity within the last two years, the [illegible] for [illegible] the game is already [illegible]. The [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] this column [illegible] an opinion which [illegible] of contract bridge is the best, but we may say this, that any one will open the way for better knowledge of the new game to the beginner.

[illegible] contract bridge [illegible] of transformation [illegible] more than likely that the future will develop further changes and improvements. Even now contract contains several features which are considered objectionable by many of the experts, and no doubt they will sooner or later be superseded by other progressive developments.

Scoring Objection

One of the main objections made to contract bridge is its elaborate cumbersome scoring system, which is considered by the [illegible] and file as fantastic and top-heavy, but which was adopted by the New York clubs because it was favored by the bridge devotees of Park avenue to whom high scores were particularly attractive. It is more than likely, however, that the system of scoring will in the course of time be somewhat modified so as to meet the ideas of the bridge players in general.

But apart from that, contract bridge [illegible] was more attractive and more interesting than auction because it demands higher skill and affords thrills [illegible] which never occur in the older form.

The difference in the two games exists largely in the bidding and for this reason. While in auction bridge you score towards game for every trick you make provided you fulfill your contract, in contract bridge you can score in the trick score towards game for those tricks only which your contract calls for. In other words, if in auction bridge you bid one no trump and make a grand slam you would score for the game and the grand slam the same as if you have bid [illegible], whereas if you bid the declaration at one no trump in contract bridge and you should succeed in making seven tricks you could score in your trick score towards game 35 points only, but you cannot score for game nor the premium for a grand slam.

Need Greater Skill

The result is that in contract bridge the two partners endeavor to carry on the bidding as long as the combined strength of their hands will permit in order to reap the benefit of the higher score. It stands to reason therefore that to obtain these results the partnership principle has to be more closely observed in contract than in auction, your knowledge of card values has to be more profound and your skill in estimating the contracting value of your hand has to be greater than in auction bridge.

Put it in another way. With the hands given below played at auction bridge South, the dealer, would bid one no trump, West would pass and North would bid two spades, which would close the bidding more often than not. But the same hand dealt in a game at contract as the writer saw it bid and played the other night in a club on the North Side, South opened the contracting with a bid of four no trump. West passed, North then bid five spades and East passing, South at once carried the bid to seven no trump for a grand slam, which of course he made.

Now the point we wish to make is that, while the results of the play were the same, the auction bridge player would not have experienced the thrill and satisfaction which goes with your hand if you bid and make a grand slam.

Bridge Brevities

Sound bidding is absolutely essential in contract bridge.

When making an original bid in contract be sure your hand holds the requirements for such a bid. This rule must never be overlooked because the original bid is the keystone upon which you and your partner must build all subsequent contracting.

BETROTHED

MISS JANET SPICE, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus N. Spice, of Phillips avenue, have announced her engagement to James Clark Carlisle Holding Jr. —[illegible]

C. A. Marsh Weds Girl From East

On Saturday evening, September 20, Miss Constance Lees, of Brooklyn, N. Y., became the bride of Charles A. Marsh, of Pittsburgh, at 6 o'clock in the Third United Presbyterian Church, with the pastor, the Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin, officiating. The bride wore rose beige satin with a veil of tulle and she carried orchids and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Nora Lees, of New York, was the maid of honor and wore cafe au lait tulle with a brown velvet hat and carried sunset roses. James Hammond was the best man.

After the dinner in the Field Club, given by Mr. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Marsh left for an eastern trip and will make their home in the Hampton Hall Apartments in Dithridge street. Mr. Marsh is vice president and general manager at Gimbels.

Martha Jane Burns Weds Dr. Harrison

On Wednesday, Miss Martha Jane Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Burns, of Roup street, became the bride of Dr. Ralph Hamilton Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. McClellan Harrison, of Marchand street, in the Burns home. Officiating was the Rev. Walter L. Ritter. Dr. and Mrs. Harrison will live in the Walnut Court Apartments, Walnut street and Denniston avenue, after November 1.

Miss Edna Winters Weds Chicago Man

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Winters, of Marie avenue, Avalon, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Edna Lucetta Winters, to O. B. Dendtler, of Chicago, which took place Saturday, September 20, in All Saints Episcopal Church, Chicago. Miss Charlotte McCune, of Donora, was maid of honor, and W. L. Latimer was best man. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Dendtler will be at home in Chicago. The bride is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, the bridegroom of Chicago Law School.

Miss Ruth Rubner Engaged to Marry

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Rubner, of Bonvue street, North Side, have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Ruth Rubner, and Wilbur G. Beck, of Rosslyn Farms.

Miss Rose Mercur Engaged to Marry

Mr. and Mrs. S. Z. Mercur, of McKeesport, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rose S. Mercur, to Joseph A. Newman, son of Mrs. F. Newman, of Pittsburgh.

McKeesport Girl Marries Pittsburgher

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Slone, of Jenny Lind avenue, McKeesport, have made known the marriage of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Slone, to Walter Rothenhoefer, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Rothenhoefer, of Pittsburgh, which took place on Monday. The ceremony was performed before an embankment of palms and ferns, with the Rev. J. M. Billman, pastor of the First Reformed Church of McKeesport, officiating, in the home of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of aquamarine blue satin and tulle and carried a shower bouquet of tea roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Mrs. C. D. Glancy, of Akron, O., as the matron of honor, wore a gown of beige chiffon and duchess lace and carried pink roses. The bride's brother, Marvin W. Slone, was the best man. Mrs. Slone wore flowered crepe with a corsage of orchids and the mother of the bridegroom wore black crepe with a corsage of roses.

After a luncheon in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport, with covers laid for 25 guests, Mr. and Mrs. Rothenhoefer flew from Bettis Field for New York and sailed for Bermuda. They will be at home in Academy avenue, Mt. Lebanon, after October 15.

Miss Helen Eyster To Wed on Oct. 25

October 25 is the date chosen by Miss Helen Eyster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eyster, of Soffel place, Wilkinsburg, for her marriage to Robert L. Hackett, also of Wilkinsburg. The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock that afternoon in the Wilkinsburg First Presbyterian Church.

THE SUNDAY SUN-TELEGRAPH
PITTSBURGH, SEPTEMBER 28, 1930

RADIO'S BEST TO ATTEND $800,000 SHOW HERE

Exhibit Marks 10th Year of Broadcasting

Many Local Programs to Go On Air From Duquesne Garden Stage.

Numerous Refinements Found In Sets With Cabinet Work Of Superlative Beauty

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor

Supplementing an $800 000 exhibit the Pittsburgh Radio Show this year will offer some of the highest priced entertainers on the networks

Graham McNamee and Milton Cross two announcers whose names are known the world over will head the list of New York celebrities McNamee will fly here Thursday from the World Series games in Philadelphia

Jessica Dragonette whose singing for Cities Service and other NBC features has endeared her wherever her voice has penetrated the ether will be in the spotlight the last night of the show, October 4.

NOTABLES TO ATTEND

Irene Beasley George Frame Browne Matt Thompkins Effie Watts Billy Jones and Ernie Hare will round out the network portion of entertainment

For the first time many local program will be broadcast from the stage These include Sacred Songs voted the best Pittsburgh program on the air in last January's Radio Poll

Twenty Fingers of Sweetness—Betty McKee and Dot Harding—will entertain daily, afternoon and evening giving the spectators their one big moment of viewing an act that has been acclaimed pretty sweet all around.

King Dough Dough and Aunt Hannah's Doughboys will play daily.

EXHIBIT COMPREHENSIVE

As for the exhibit itself we believe it to be the most comprehensive and attractive since Jim Simpson started running radio shows five years ago

Little ballyhoo has been made over the fact that this is the tenth year of broadcasting but we surmise that dealers and distributors will make the most of it when the show doors open tomorrow night at Duquesne Garden

If you can remember that far back radio broadcasting had its inception in East Pittsburgh a decade ago on the evening of November 2 1920 when Harding-Cox election returns were put on the air Perhaps 500 people heard the miracle

That first audience of 500 has grown to an audience of 40 000 000

REFINEMENTS MADE

Refinements of all sorts will be found in sets displayed this year. While remote control has been catered to quite a bit yet the greatest engineering effort has been devoted to producing true tone The best efforts of some of the leading furniture designers will be found in beautiful cabinets

All That's New In Radio Sets

Home recording attachments enable listeners to make records of favorite programs or voices.

Automatic volume control minimizes the annoyance caused by fading

Tone control knob enables listeners to regulate or shade the reproduction from bass to treble to please the ear.

Improved, full-range superheterodyne is equipped with screen-grid tubes rated three times as selective, four times as sensitive as former models.

More life-like tonal reproduction is obtained from the latest dynamic loud-speakers.

New all-electric midget sets are of mantel-clock design complete with loud-speakers.

Automatic mechanism changes the records on radio-phonograph combinations

Quick-heater and humless tubes speed the receiver into action when first turned on.

Decorative cabinets are designed to harmonize with the furnishings of American homes.

Perfected employment of the screen-grid tube is all-popular this year with three or four used in each set.

Refinements Feature New Radio Sets

Improved Design Offered At Lowest Prices in Industry's History

Trend to Superheterodyne Marked — New Devices Appeal to Fan

Refinements rather than basic changes again mark the new season's advances in radio receiving sets at the fifth annual radio show to be held this week in Duquesne Garden. Most important to the radio buying public which has invested more than $3 000 000 000 in radio receiving equipment up to this tenth year of broadcasting, is the fact that the improved designs are being offered at the lowest price ranges in radio's history.

Though it comes with the autumnal equinox to open the fall and winter season of new program features and better reception conditions the Pittsburgh exposition is simply a preliminary to the many others to be held throughout the country for the purpose of arousing new desire and creating new demand for radio sets.

HOME-RECORDING

At this show the radio purchaser will be offered a few highly interesting devices such as home-recording and clock-tuning. Tone control and automatic volume control are here to appeal to the discriminating ear and the superheterodyne circuit, recently made available to their rival manufacturers by the R C A and affiliated companies is very much in evidence

Home-recording is incorporated into combination radio-phonograph set, which permits the making of six-inch records either of radio programs as they are being received, or of the vocal and instrumental renditions of the owner and his friends. Clock-tuning enables the listener by adjusting an electric clock device, to leave the operation of his set entirely to automatic means no matter what station he wants dialed at different 15-minute periods.

CLOCK-TUNING

Only one company R C A-Victor, is producing home-recording and only one company Wurlitzer is offering clock-tuning this season, but the prospects are that these devices will be commonplace within the next few years. Many more manufacturers are out with tone-control, which is designed to emphasize the high and low notes, according to the listener's taste, and automatic volume control, which is designed to maintain the signal strength of a program at a constant level and to compensate for fading.

The trend toward the superheterodyne, with its greater sensitivity and higher selectivity, is marked. With their production all centered in Camden N. J., newly dedicated the "radio center of the world," the Radiola Victor, General Electric Westinghouse and Graybar lines are all superheterodynes.

'Radio Eyes' Guide Sailors

WASHINGTON D C Sept 27—Uncle Sam is conquering one of the foggiest regions in the world by using radio On Scotch Cap light station at the entrance to Unimak Pass, beyond which the Aleutian Islands stretch westward from Alaska to Asia he has installed "radio-eyes" for the guidance of mariners whose vessels ply between North America's northwestern coast ports and the Orient

During clear weather the station sends out its signals of two dashes continuously for the first 10 minutes of each half hour. During foggy weather, the same signal is sent out for 60 seconds with silent intervals of two minutes Recognizing the beacon signals and turning their radio compass to them the navigators are able to take bearings which are accurate and precise This is the first radio-beacon station of the United States Lighthouse Service to flash its signals at such frequent intervals

Believe It or Not, Ripley Once Giant

Robert L. Ripley, whose "Believe It or Not" cartoons led him to a weekly radio program, once aspired to a professional baseball career He was signed up with John McGraw's New York Giants as a pitcher only to suffer a broken arm in his first game, which forced his retirement from the sport It was not until then that he seriously considered his drawing and oddity-searching

4,000 Records Made By Early Jazz Band

Phil Napoleon, director of the Memphis Five, regularly featured on NBC programs organized that orchestra in 1917 when the jazz craze was at its height He and his musicians have played for 23 recording companies. They have made more than 4,000 phonograph records.

Spitalny Paid Last $3 for Overalls

Phil Spitalny, NBC dance orchestra director, has an unhappy memory of his first experience with American business methods Phil and his brother arrived in this country 16 years ago with no other clothes than the uniforms which had been their costumes at the Imperial Observatory of Music in Odessa, Russia.

Each brother had $3 when they reached Cleveland Someone told Phil that the uniform wouldn't do for wear in this country and advised him to purchase a suit. Phil gave him the $3 and received a pair of overalls in exchange. He never wore them.

Youthful Baritone Once Drum Major

Barry Devine, NBC baritone is only 22 years old, but he has been appearing in concert in this country and abroad for the last five years Urged by his friend, John McCormack, the noted tenor, he studied in Paris for a long time under Angela Parola, with whom McCormack studied voice a number of years ago. Barry's home town is Salem, Mass where he used to be drum major in a high school band

Waves to Do Cooking Now Goal of Radio Scientists

Radio waves which will do the family cooking, provide wireless illumination for homes, alleviate pain and cure disease are the goal of new investigations into the possibilities of the short-wave high-power vacuum tube, according to Dr Willis R. Whitney, director of the General Electric Research Laboratories in a research narrative issued by the Engineering Foundation

Control of this power for practical uses will immediately open up lines of advance in industry and therapeutics hitherto closed to science, it is stated. Simplified mechanisms and a reduction in the cost of producing large volumes of radio energy are the problems now facing solution.

Fever temperatures, destructive to certain germs but difficult to create by artificial means, are readily stimulated by these vacuum tubes. Dr Whitney says Power sufficient to destroy electrical instruments in the path of the waves or to cause intense pain, has also been disclosed in some of the preliminary experiments

Radio cooking has already been demonstrated in tests with the new tube.

Ultra Short Waves Urged

BRESLAU Sept 27 (AP) Use of ultra short waves of from one to seven meters to overcome disturbances in radio transmission is advocated by Prof A. Esau.

Prof Esau, a physicist and short wave investigator of Jena University, declared he had been experimenting successfully with the short waves. He said he had constructed high frequency apparatus that could be attached to the ordinary radio receiver.

Prof. Esau said he had found the ultra short waves to be immune from atmospheric and other disturbances such as man-made static, and declared that he was convinced that with the higher frequencies the euphony of music and voice is greatly enhanced.

Maris Bern Strong For Physical Culture

Maris Bern, soprano, who is heard frequently on the Recitalists program of the National Broadcasting Company, believes in physical culture. Exercise is a hobby with her. She takes a walk of two miles every morning before breakfast.

STARS WHO WILL drop in on Pittsburghers at the Radio Show in Duquesne Garden this week include Graham McNamee, who will fly here from Philadelphia: Milton J. Cross, the diction medal winner; Jessica Dragonette, Irene Beasley, the Interwoven Pair, George Frame Browne and the Twenty Fingers of Sweetness—Dot Harding and Betty McKee. The show opens Monday at 7 p. m.

Star Pitcher Runs Amateur Station

One of amateur radio's notables is Willis Hudlin, star pitcher for the Cleveland Americans, who operates Station W1BSG, at Cleveland, when he is "resting his arm."

Editor Brings Back Bermuda Scripts

Burke Boyce, NBC continuity editor, spent his vacation in Bermuda. He came back to New York with some brand new ideas for radio scripts with the scene laid in colorful Bermuda.

To Broadcast Premier's Talk

J. Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of England, will renew acquaintance with the American radio audience Wednesday afternoon, October 1, according to plans for an international rebroadcast announced by the National Broadcasting Company.

The voice of the British leader, which became familiar to listeners on this side of the Atlantic during his American visit last year, and later through NBC's rebroadcast reports from the London Naval Arms Conference, is expected to bridge the Atlantic Wednesday afternoon at 3:55 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time.

The premier will discuss for 20 minutes the forthcoming imperial conference, which will be held in London late in October. This conference will bring to the capital of the empire all prime ministers and other leading citizens of British possessions throughout the world It is expected that MacDonald's address Wednesday will be an advance message to the dominions on the purpose and program of the meeting.

American Program Scheduled Tuesday

As a greeting to the American homes which will tune in on its program for the first time on Tuesday, the Philco Symphony Orchestra will present an all-American program, an anthology of the finest music ever written by native composers The program, which will be broadcast from WJAS at 9:30 p. m., Eastern standard time Two numbers on this program, both by modern musicians, will be played over the radio for the first time. They are the "Overture on Negro Themes," by James P. Dunn, whose "We," dicated to Col. Lindbergh's overseas exploit, recently attracted considerable comment in musical circles, and Ernst Schelling's "Morocco" suite.

Birkenholz Family Musicians 200 Years

Arcadie Birkenholz, NBC violinist-conductor, comes of an old Austrian family of which all the members have been professional musicians for 200 years. Arcadie's father was the only exception having been an army officer. The elder Birkenholz exerted every influence to develop his son into a competent musician, however

Director Visualizes Song Groups as Organ Console

When George Dilworth directs choral groups for the National Broadcasting Company he visualizes the singers as forming a giant organ console with himself as organist and the voices as stops. With the various combinations of voices at his command he produces musical tones and colors of wide range.

Dilworth ranks among the busiest conductors of the National Broadcasting Company. In fact there is so much on his mind that he encircles the top of his desk with charts by means of which he keeps tab on his own time, on the activities of the singers under his command and the program builders under his supervision.

Dilworth is known chiefly as director of the Salon Singers, a group of 16 voices that he assembled. This group presents most of the choral and special holiday song programs heard over NBC networks.

The vocal director's radio career began in 1924 when he performed in concerts and recitals over the old WJZ station. Later he was with the Follies for awhile. Dilworth joined the NBC program staff in 1928. At that time no regular choral group performed on the air.

War Secrets To Go on Air

The inside story of America's part in the World War, prepared from the confidential files of Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in the Wilson cabinet, will be presented to listeners throughout the country by Frederick Palmer, famous war correspondent and author, in a series of 12 programs which will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company.

Baker, the only man in the country familiar, by reason of his position, with all the aspects of the conduct of the war, has turned over to Palmer 20 loose-leaf volumes of his private papers, giving Palmer a free hand in preparing from them the narrative of his administration. Baker will not see the manuscript until it appears in print.

Highlights of this story will be brought before the microphone once each month, beginning Sunday evening, October 26. Palmer will present them through a coast-to-coast NBC-WEAF network from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, eastern standard time.

His Cook Garbles Telephone Message

Harry Donaghy, the basso of the National Broadcasting Company's grand and light opera troupes, was a little mystified on arrival home from rehearsal a few days ago. His Negro cook, who "jes' hates them telephones," had taken a message for him. He was wanted for an emergency program that evening, but the maid announced:

"Mistah Harry, will you-all please call up dis here 'Nacheral Broadcasting Company.'"

That Guitar Really Is Plectrum Harp

While it is generally thought that Larry Funk, director of the Band of a Thousand Melodies, plays a guitar when broadcasting on NBC programs the instrument is really a cross between a guitar and a banjo. It is called a plectrum harp.

Stromberg-Carlson

This conservative well known organization offers this year to the radio public four new instruments a low console a convertible console in which can be installed at the owner's option a phonograph unit, an automatic volume control receiver and a radio phono combination which embodies a record [illegible] mechanism.

Atwater Kent

In this line, with its name known to every listening family in the country, will be found such features as a new quick vision dial, improved audio system which means better tone and a screen grid chassis providing better selectivity. The new dial is graduated in kilocycle channels so that each division represents a station. Large figures from 60 to 150 indicate a kilocycle range of from 550 to 1,500. From any position every part of the tuning scale is visible, covering the whole range of stations.

Radiola

A new line of receivers, all incorporating the superheterodyne principle is being introduced under the trade mark of Radiola. One of the models contains a device for making records in the home. For the first time the screen grid tube has been included in a commercial superheterodyne.

These receivers employ nine tuned circuits, only four of which are variable, providing a high degree of selectivity and sensitivity throughout the entire tuning range. The manufacturer points out that compared with recent models the new instruments are four times as selective and three times as sensitive.

Majestic

Three screen grid radio frequency tubes, a screen grid power detector and a stage of push-pull audio—these words describe the circuit of the Majestic line for 1931. There are 10 models in all, starting with a popular priced model 90 and extending up through lowboy and highboy to the radio phonograph combination 103. Included in this list is a new screen grid superheterodyne receiver housed in a cabinet with removable legs in order to make the unit more adaptable to small homes and apartments where room space is at a premium.

Victor

Here again the sponsors of a line are laying stress on the special feature of home recording which in their minds "makes the radio a complete home entertainer." Just how important this feature is considered can be understood from a reading of a portion of sales talk originating from Camden. The statement read:

"Making records in the home offers a new and fascinating form of entertainment. With the home recording attachment, the recording of the owner's voice, that of his children, his friends or excerpts from favorite broadcast programs is an ideal form of diversion as well as the life of the party. Its manipulation is as simple as playing a record."

Westinghouse

The initial line of this manufacturer includes four models of which three are 9-tube screen grid superheterodynes and one a 7-tube screen grid tuned radio frequency set. Westinghouse sets are equipped with three tuning controls in the form of a station selector, an adjustment for volume and a switch for local and distant stations. The dial, which is marked in kilocycles, is so arranged that the tuning point is projected on a colored transparent window.

General Electric

General Electric makes its bow with four sets, described as a studio lowboy, a lowboy, a highboy and a radio-phonograph combination. The studio lowboy is an instrument of unusual acoustic properties and handsome design. It is a tuned radio frequency circuit with seven tubes, four of which are screen grid. A dynamic speaker is included and the set has compound type volume control.

Zenith

For the first time Zenith extends the scope of its products and now enters the lower price field at the same time continuing its standard line. At the show next week, guests will see four new models under this trade mark, three of them coming under the class of "super eights." All models will be equipped with tone control and fitted with a newly devised antenna circuit which will permit the owner to use an aerial from 50 to 200 feet in length.

Sewart-Warner

Simplicity of construction, a point which will be of advantage to owner and service man, is stressed by this organization. Any single unit in series 100 can be entirely removed from the frame without disturbing other parts. Likewise all wiring can be reached through the bottom of the frame.

Crosley

Out of the new Crosley factory on the outskirts of Cincinnati, comes double line models for the fall trade. The makers, in a spirit of romanticism, perhaps, have applied the terms Companionship and Leadership to the series. The former models—three in number—have the identical chassis consisting of three screen grid tubes and a 145 and 280. The Leadership models are somewhat more extensive in their way. Another tuned stage is added and the output is made push pull in order to properly feed the dynamic speaker.

General Motors

Balanced design features the General Motors Radio presented in five different models and covering a wide range of prices.

In this set the traditional lines of fine period furniture have been followed and the cabinets provide a well-rounded line to meet the demands of any type of interior decoration. All of the sets have the visual tone selection making it possible for the listener to modulate the tone exactly to suit his fancy.

Bosch

Two chassis designs comprise this line. Both are screen grid receivers. Model 58 employs eight tubes, four of which are type 224 screen grid, three of these are used in radio frequency amplification, the fourth is a detector. One type 227 is used in the first audio stage and two type 245's in the second.

The chassis is constructed in two sections. The receiver is a unit comprising a gang of five condensers and five tubes. The power unit comprises a 10-inch electro-dynamic cone, power transformers and three tubes—one type 280 power rectifier and two type 245's in push-pull. The power unit and receiver proper are mounted on separate shelves in the cabinet and are interconnected by plug cables.

Graybar

Except for modification in the cabinet design the four models of Graybar receivers are in no important respects different from the other nine-tube superheterodyne models offered this year by two or three other manufacturers. Tone control, noiseless volume control and illuminated dials are some of the features of the straight radio receivers, with home recording playing the leading role in the large phone radio combinations. There is also a seven-tube tuned radio frequency received ensconced in an arm chair consolette.

Colonial

Unusual emphasis is placed on the recently introduced automatic remote control system by the makers of Colonial receivers. This device which can be attached as a single unit or in multiple units to the 1931 models has many uses that will be instantly appreciated by the owner who seeks comfort during entertainment.

Brunswick

The Uni-Selector, a device which further simplifies the operation of a radio receiver, is one of the highly held features of Brunswick models for the fall. This is a dial of many uses. Without moving the position of the hand it turns the set on or off, then with a slight rotary movement it tunes in the program desired. If the listener should desire a program from a distant city an outward movement of the hand carries out the necessary adjustment. The fourth and final object of the Uni-Selector is the control of volume.

Lyric

The new Lyric is truly an automatic radio which once set and adjusted will tune automatically to the same stations at the same time day after day. The settings, of course, can be changed at any time.

Sparton

The year 1930, designated as the Jubilee Year of Sparks Withington, sees that organization with 10 new models to entice the buyer. There is a series at a popular price followed by other models in the medium priced field and an ensemble or combination having 13 tubes and a de luxe cabinet.

Story & Clark

The show display of this firm will include three models, the two higher priced items having automatic volume control.

The chassis of the lower priced set is sturdy, of high efficiency and with large margins of safety throughout. Its tube equipment consists of three 224's, one 227 detector, two 245's in push pull and one 280 rectifier. In the two higher priced models, as mentioned above, equipped with automatic volume control, an additional 227 is used.

Grebe

A claim that the characteristics of its new models make it possible to reproduce speech and music "better than the transmission thereof by the broadcaster," especially "in the case of programs relayed to the station by wire from a distant point," have been made and emphasized by Alfred H Grebe manufacturer of these receivers.

Philco

Possibly the outstanding exhibit at the Philco display will be the recently announced Baby Grand console. This small console is but 17½ inches in height yet houses a full seven-tube chassis with screen grid amplifiers and detectors and two 171A's in push pull. It is equipped with a dynamic speaker.

Fada

Commencing with the medium priced open faced lowboy the Fada list for 1930-31 presents five models including the combination. The most striking innovation, the Flashograph, an illuminated dial that flashes the name of the station as the dial is turned to the corresponding frequency. Other features include a noise filter which minimizes the effect of local disturbances and atmospherics, a phonograph connection that operates from the tuning dial, a two-element detector that provides straight line distortionless detection and a preselector tuning arrangement which, according to the claims of its designers, prevents cross talk from powerful local transmitters.

Edison

Five distinctive cabinet designs which can be supplied with chassis of either the neutrodyne or screen grid types form the nucleus of the Edison output as shown at the World's Fair. Light-o-matic tuning, the system which lights up the dial as the desired station is reached, is now a feature on all models.

Victoreen

The chassis of this superheterodyne differs in many respects from the mechanical design of the majority of other receivers. It is designed in two parts, tuner and amplifier, each housed in a cast aluminum case. Six tubes are used in the tuner including one stage of radio frequency, oscillator, first detector and three stages of intermediate frequency.

Amrad

Amrad has concentrated on two models this year with chassis identical in both. There are seven tubes and a rectifier in the circuit feeding into a dynamic speaker.

The set is equipped with an automatic volume control which makes possible the selection of any volume and the bringing in of the station at that pre-determined volume. A local distance switch controls the powerful local stations.

GRAHAM McNAMEE SPEAKING:

Revenge Is Sweet Over Sensitive Mike • Vallee Once Rated the "World's Worst"
Accidentally "Bumping Into" Good Job • Toscha Seidel Bars Visitors in Studio

You can't trust even a microphone too far, and Gerald Stopp, who has been producing radio dramas about as long as anybody else—remember the Bible dramas and Great Moments in History?—is impressing that fact on all his actors.

Several weeks ago Stopp hired for one of his shows an actor who had had a great deal of experience on the air but who had been away for several months. In the meantime the new type of microphone which hears things from afar has come into use.

In the cast of the same show was another actor whom the first man heartily disliked. Stopp knew of the enmity but he also knew that each would try to outdo the other, and the script didn't give them much chance to ruin each other's performances.

The rehearsal went off nicely and when the show went on the air Stopp, sitting in the control booth, wasn't looking for any trouble. But along came a place in the script where the first actor was requested by one of the characters to call the second, playing the part of, let us say, "Joe". The first actor was to fade out, as if he were walking away.

Taking his cue he answered "Yes, certainly Mabel (and what I'll call him will be nobody's business) Oh, Joe come here! (come here you low down so-and-so and this-and-that) Oh, Joe!"

And what he did call him really was nobody's business. With the microphones of two years ago not a word of the interpolations would have registered, but the new microphone picked them up and hurled them through the loudspeaker with such volume that Stopp, powerless to do a thing about it, was sure every listener must have heard the profanity.

While he expected to receive bushels of letters of complaint, the only one, curiously enough, came from a radio engineer who realized exactly what had taken place. But the actor had impressed upon him one of the strictest rules of the studios: when you are near a mike, whether it be open or closed, never utter a word you wouldn't like the whole world to hear.

She Got the Job

I can't vouch for the truth of this story but a certain radio humorist's friends are telling it around town with straight faces. It seems that a manufacturer was negotiating with him for his services as permanent master of ceremonies on a program which was shortly to go on the air.

About that time the Socialists handed him a political nomination, and a few days later—and nobody pretends to know whether the nomination had anything to do with it—the negotiations were stopped. The manufacturer had changed his mind.

The humorist didn't particularly care, and, in fact, he had almost forgotten about it when Alexander Woolcott, the dramatic critic, called up to ask him to be guest speaker on a broadcast program he was to inaugurate.

The humorist told the critic he'd be glad to oblige if he could, and that he'd let him know later. Just before ringing off he inquired the name of the program. It was the one for which he had been turned down.

Woolcott did some first-rate work on the air last year and all listeners who are interested in smart goings-on around New York will be glad to welcome him back to the air. He has pretty thoroughly conquered the slight nervousness which marked his early trips to the mike, and this year he ought to rank among the most finished performers.

The experience of the humorist reminds me of one that befell an actress not long ago. While she was on her way to the studios to try out for a job reading a talk for women on a morning program, she met a friend on the street. The second actress had never seen the inside of a broadcasting studio and she was invited to come along and have a look.

At least 15 women were there when the audition was called, and each in turn faced the mike and read a script. None of them was satisfactory, and the casting director was becoming impatient.

"Here! You try it, and put some life into it!" he snapped at the visitor.

"But——" she began.

That's as far as she got. The director made her read the script. And she got the job. They say the two aren't speaking now.

Rudy Upsets Dope

Norman Sweetser has been admitting for months that he is a bum guesser. It happened when he was a production man and Rudy Vallee was just getting a toe-hold on the networks.

Rudy had made something of a reputation on local stations, and he had asked to be considered for network jobs if any came along requiring a small dance orchestra and a leader who could sing and announce his own programs. Ben Bernie and Vincent Lopez had already created a vogue for conversational conductors and Rudy was ready to prove he could do that and sing, too.

Just at that moment along came a manufacturer who wanted that sort of thing and Rudy got the job. However, his name was not announced on the program. But that did not stop listeners who were familiar with his work. Dozens of them called up the studios and said they had spotted him by his peculiar style of announcing.

But to get back to Sweetser. Norm was assigned as production man for the program and it was his duty to see that the orchestra was properly balanced before the microphone, that the numbers were properly timed and, in short, to make everything go smoothly.

That night when he made up his report on the inaugural program Sweetser commented enthusiastically on Rudy's smooth singing and the individual style of the orchestra.

But he added one more line: "Vallee is the world's worst announcer."

Judged by all the conventional standards he certainly is. But it is probably that slow melancholy way of speaking that has done much to create his popularity as his singing. Certainly you couldn't separate them.

By all the dope Sweetser was absolutely right, but Rudy's voice caught the public's fancy and there you are. Norm has bought cigars for everybody who read that report.

The Hidden Artist

Among those who won't allow visitors in the studio when they are on the air is Toscha Seidel, the violinist. He'd hop up and down and holler if anyone so much as opened the door a crack.

The other night he was waiting around for time to play when a caricaturist stepped up and asked Seidel if he'd mind if he watched him play that night, so that he might sketch him in some characteristic poses.

"I'm sorry," said Seidel, "but I can't have visitors in the studio when I'm playing. They always disturb me."

"But I shan't," said the sketcher. "I've been in broadcasting studios a good many times, and I know how to keep out of the way and keep quiet."

"You don't understand," Seidel protested. "Just anyone in the studio would throw me off, and I can't be distracted."

"But I'm an artist!" pleaded the now-desperate young man.

"That settles it!" exclaimed Seidel. "With two artists in the same studio I'm sure there'd be a clash of temperaments."

But after all, the laugh was on Seidel. The artist had been covertly sketching him all the while they were arguing, and he got some rare expressions and gestures.

M'NAMEE'S WIFE ON AIR

MRS. GRAHAM McNAMEE, wife of radio's best known announcer, will make her first appearance over KDKA at 10 o'clock Friday evening. She will speak on "My Husband at Home."

Gets College Course Hanging Wallpaper

Edwin Whitney, NBC producer and character actor, says he worked his way through college by hanging paper and painting houses.

Staff Writer Accomplished

One of the most interesting members of the Columbia Broadcasting System's staff is Georgia Backus, continuity writer.

Here's a list of some of her accomplishments.

She has played the part of Myra Loring in "Arabesque" for more than a year, as well as many of the additional parts required for the play within a play.

She originated the idea for the Nit Wit programs which Brad Browne developed successfully and manipulated the other day into book form.

She edits continuities.

She writes scripts for special occasions which might otherwise be forgotten—Columbus day, for instance, or the International Celebration of the Craze for Crooning Centenary.

Dexterity, isn't it? Triumph of individualism. In plain English, Georgia is a clever girl.

Station in Germany To Increase Power

Koenigwusterhausen, a leading broadcasting station of Germany, is about to have its power increased to 50,000 watts.

Pay Greetings Pet Peeves of NBC's Cashier

Miss Grace Sniffin, National Broadcasting Company cashier, has a pet peeve. Rather she has an assortment of pet peeves and they all are phrases.

Twice each month Miss Sniffin personally distributes pay checks to some 700 NBC employes. And 90 per cent of the 500 greet her with one of the following remarks:

"Ah, here's the girl we all love."

"Gee, but we're glad to see you!"

"Well, here comes the old insult!"

And

"What! No raise?"

Something should be done about it, says Miss Sniffin.

Women Aspire To Mike Jobs

One would think from the preponderance of male announcers that men were the only persons in this world who wished to be announcers.

But ask Miss Marjorie Stewart, director of the Microphone Training School and Program Service, whose studios are in Liberty avenue.

Miss Stewart has just started her second year as director of the school for announcers and at the first class Tuesday there were as many women as men enrolled.

Miss Stewart, although blind, is a pioneer in this type of work and in many other branches of radio. She started her career with KDKA in 1922 and served in various positions, program director, critic and trainer of announcers. The National Broadcasting Company employed Miss Stewart in similar positions in Chicago and New York for two years, but last year she returned to Pittsburgh to establish her school and program service.

Empire Builders Return Tomorrow

Empire Builders returns to the coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Company tomorrow evening with a playlet, "The Phantom Trail," a romance of the Old West, in which cattle rustlers, courageous homesteaders, James J. Hill and the coming of the railway all play a part.

Broadcasters Turn To Composing Songs

Many NBC musicians are turning to song writing between broadcasts and may be seen sitting about the reception rooms in the throes of composition. Irving Miller of the Band of a Thousand Melodies is badly bitten by the craze.

Radio Held Field With Future Still Unfathomed

By R. J. EMMERT.

President and General Manager General Motors Radio Corporation

Radio is a field where the future is still unfathomed. It is a field that is developing constantly, with new markets opening, new uses found for radio, new demands from the public.

Today radio is a by-word. It is a household necessity. It has become an instrument of protection. It warns of disasters. It pursues the criminal. We get the latest news by radio. We sit at the ringside or take in a football game in a distant city by radio. Our dinner at night is made more attractive by household suggestions broadcast over the radio in the morning. Beyond fear of contradiction it is a household necessity.

Scientific research and development, constant striving for something better and still better—all these are responsible for the broadening of the field and the ever-increasing demand on the part of the buying public.

Today radio is an all-year-round appliance. I use the word appliance purposely, for the radio is a household appliance, an instrument for providing amusement, entertainment, education and information in the home.

PRODUCTS IMPROVED

Reception now is good in the summer and the programs are good. Manufacturers of broadcast apparatus have improved their products so that reception is smooth, natural and uninterrupted in all kinds of weather and under all conditions. Radio receiver manufacturers have kept pace and improved their sets so that their performance is equal to the quality of the broadcasting.

And broadcasting companies have improved the quality of their programs so that we may tune in at any time of the day now and get entertainment of the highest caliber. Programs in summer are equal to those of the winter.

The radio has become a permanent piece of furniture in the home. In its selection the home owner pays as much attention to the style of cabinet as he does to the buying of any other piece of furniture. Radio manufacturers have been quick to sense the trend toward period type of design, and today the radio cabinet is a piece of furniture that may be admired.

In many homes multiple radio is demanded. A radio is installed in the living room for the benefit of the family. Another is installed in the bedroom or in the nursery.

RADIO A NECESSITY

What is the result? It is this: The American family has found radio a necessity. Radio is no longer a toy to be played with in the winter and in the evening. It is an all-the-year-round, all-day-long instrument providing entertainment for every member of the family. And every member of the family finds just what he wants coming over the air. All of this means increased stability for the industry, with a steady demand replacing seasonal interest.

'Chevrolet Chronicles' Features War Heroes

The first of the "Chevrolet Chronicles," with Capt. Albert P. Baston, of the Fifth Marines describing those stirring events in Chateau Thierry back in 1918, which brought him the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre and the Naval Cross, will go on the air locally from station KDKA Sunday evening, October 5, at 6:30 p. m.

The half-hour program is sponsored by Pittsburgh Chevrolet dealers and is the first of a series of weekly broadcasts from this station featuring America's great martial figures, most of whom wear high honors for valorous deeds in action. The "Chronicles" are being broadcast nationally through more than a hundred stations.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, ace of American aces, will be host of the evening and introduce Capt. Baston to the air audience. Musical number arranged by Frank Black and Gustave Haenschen will precede and conclude Capt. Baston's description of his experiences.

ANNOUNCING THE NEW.. IMPROVED WELLSTON GOLD TEST AERIAL

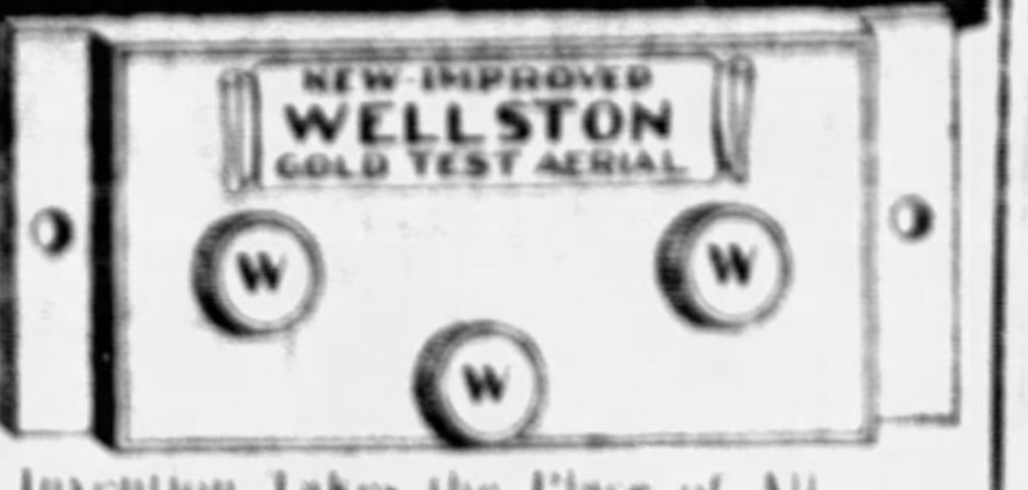
The World's Smallest Aerial 2½ by 5 inches in Size



Pat. Pending

This Amazing New Invention Takes the Place of All Present Type Aerials and Improves Radio Reception!

The New Improved Wellston Gold Test Aerial has been heralded far and wide as one of the greatest innovations introduced to the radio industry during the past decade. This startling invention not only eliminates the necessity for all present type indoor and outdoor aerials but IMPROVES radio reception as well. This new improved aerial follows closely upon the success attained by its predecessor, the original, genuine Wellston Gold Test Aerial which at present is giving excellent service in the homes of thousands of Radio owners throughout the country.

It Will Never Wear Out

The new improved Wellston Gold Test Aerial is made of genuine mica, constant gloss condensers with bonding posts to match. It is a filtered type aerial and has a capacity equivalent to 54 feet of aerial wire 50 feet high in the air. This small compact aerial measures 2½ by 5 inches in size, is absolutely NON-DIRECTIONAL, NON-CORROSIVE and WILL NEVER WEAR OUT. The Wellston Gold Test Aerial does away with all lightning hazards and because it does not connect into a light socket all AC hum and line noise are eliminated. Not fully efficient on battery sets.

Easy to Install

It is a simple matter to install the Wellston Gold Test Aerial; even a child can do it in less than a minute's time. No extra tools are needed. Place it anywhere—inside or on the back of your radio cabinet if you wish. Once installed, no further attention is required. It is fully efficient at all times.

Be sure to see the Howard at the Radio Show this week, Booth D-4

Enthusiasm for an article purchased surely implies that the value far exceeds the price paid.

That is why we believe that you will be keenly interested in learning for yourself what inspires such satisfaction and loyalty as HOWARD radio owners express.

And, as retail dealers whose success depends upon our own recommendations to you, we earnestly urge that you hear the HOWARD radio before deciding. Starting with the "PLYMOUTH" pictured here at $165, new HOWARD models include rich period designs ranging in price up to $325.

There IS a difference between ordinary reception and the clear, life-like reproduction of these precision-made instruments. Judge for yourself.

Corbett Describes Fight.

A fight which Jim Corbett describes as the hardest battle of his career, his contest with Joe Choynski in 1889, will be described in detail by Corbett during his part of the Howard Dandies.

Hitherto unknown facts about this famous encounter, which was fought three years before Corbett won the heavyweight title from John L. Sullivan, will be disclosed. Attended by only a handful of spectators, it began in a secluded barn, to be halted by an irate sheriff after but six rounds of fighting. Backed by rival clubs, the grudge battle was concluded the following week when Corbett, after taking more punishment than he did in all his subsequent fights, knocked out Choynski in the twenty-eighth round.

VARIETY

. . . the Life of Radio

TONE . . . distance . . . selectivity . . . the mechanical workings of radio have passed the experimental stage and have reached a high degree of efficiency. The fascination of radio now lies in its varied programs . . . drawn from a tremendous field of audible entertainment, and brought into the intimacy of your own home.

A dashing, ripping, football game . . . a leading artist singing a great aria . . . a stirring national event . . . your favorite comedian . . . world-famous dance bands . . . current events . . . recipes . . . the list is endless . . .

But there it is—at the touch of a button . . . something to interest everybody. More than ever, Radio is becoming a vital factor in American life.

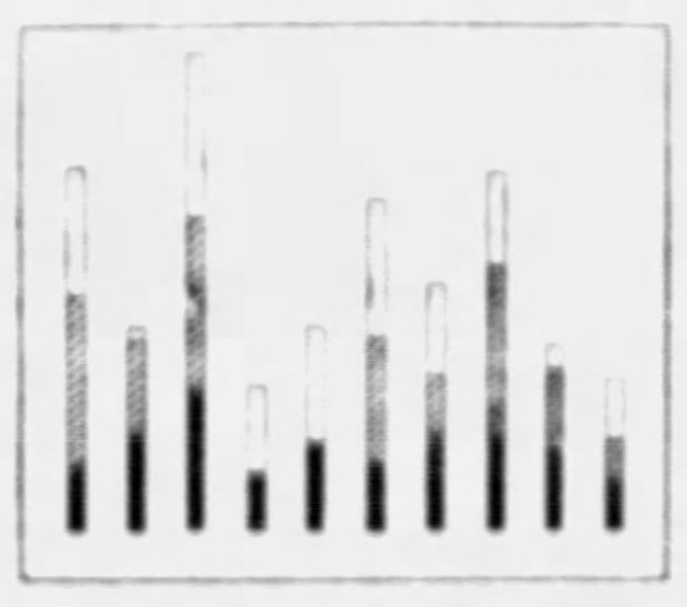
Big type may hide big disappointments



THIS chart shows the tremendous variations among ten of the best known sets in scientific performance tests. And yet, nothing can be said about the finest that has not already been said about the cheapest.

A hasty selection based on glowing claims may deprive you of much of your enjoyment of radio. Where big type often hides big disappointments, radio rewards those who choose carefully.

The Music is there. .
But it takes FREEDOM FROM INTERFERENCE to bring it out

Millions of dollars are right now being invested in broadcasting radio programs.

Never before have you been afforded the wealth of diversified entertainment and instruction now offered by radio. Byrd, Lindbergh, King George, President Hoover . . . such are the notables who in endless processions pass before the microphone, whose living voices thrill, entertain, educate. And don't forget the great singers and musicians; the famous bands and orchestras; the opera, symphony, the big games and sports! The music is there. It's in your home—in every home.

But no singer can effectively sing when he is gagged. Just as it takes freedom from interference to bring out the full, rich tones of the voice, so does it take properly equipped radio to reproduce those tones when put on the air. That is why you should be sure your radio is a Stewart-Warner. For here is the radio that brings in all programs true to life—with nothing added, nothing taken away. What you hear, is what you want to hear—just that and no more! Embodied in them is every fundamental essential for championship performance clear across the dial.

LET YOUR DEALER DEMONSTRATE THESE FINE SETS

But see these sets yourself. Hear them! Let them tell their own story of Championship Performance and beauty. Four different Period design Models from which to select. Each is exquisite in design and finish. Each is backed by a maker whose name has been famous for quality for twenty-five years—is a radio value you simply can't duplicate elsewhere. Prices moderate—terms easy. Let your dealer demonstrate—without obligation to you!

Chains Issue Schedules of Grid Games

Husing to Handle Columbia, MacNamee and Munday NBC Announcements

Between the national networks and the local broadcasting stations, hardly an important collegiate football game of the forthcoming season will go uncovered by the radio.

Fortunately for the sake of variety and selection there is not too much overlapping between the tentative schedules already arranged by the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System. Between them they have arranged to cover the leading games and later may add several more. Ted Husing will handle all the games for CBS and Graham MacNamee and Bill Munday will broadcast over the NBC-WEAF and NBC-WJZ networks.

Seek Charts On Altitude

The Brunswick Radio Corporation plans to radio-chart the higher altitudes in an endeavor to find out exactly what happens to broadcast signals at rarified heights.

The preliminary charts will be made in conjunction with airplane flights from 50 great airports throughout the United States. A flight will be made from Roosevelt Field in New York, from the Municipal Field in Chicago, and in Philadelphia from the Central Airport.

The records will be made at heights ranging from 20,000 feet upward. It is hoped that the present altitude record of 43,010 feet, held by Capt. Gray, of England, will be approximated or exceeded during these tests.

Foreign representatives of the Brunswick Corporation are contacting Prof. Piccard, of Brussels University, with the expectation that they will co-operate with him in making records of broadcast signal reception at heights between 40,000 and 50,000 feet. (These are the heights Prof. Piccard expects to reach in his next balloon ascent at Augsburg, Germany.)

Following the records made through the use of airplanes, and in the case of Prof. Piccard by the use of a balloon, the Brunswick Radio Corporation is planning a supplementary record to be made with the use of rockets.

Stokowski to Use Studios

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Contrary to the precedent set last year during its radio debut, the Philadelphia Orchestra will not broadcast its 1930 programs from the empty Academy of Music in Philadelphia, it was learned today. The programs, the first of which is scheduled for October 12, will be broadcast from the studios of the National Broadcasting Company, 711 Fifth avenue, New York City.

It was expected that Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the orchestra, would refuse to bring his men out of the Quaker City for the broadcasts, but acoustical problems met with during the first radio programs of the great orchestra evidently influenced the change to surroundings specially constructed for radio broadcasting. The new device perfected by Dr. Stokowski for the purpose of eliminating distortion in broadcasting may also have had a bearing on the decision, as the equipment may need the proximity of studio engineers and laboratories.

Pedigree counts in RADIO!

Ben Hur's four fleet Arabian steeds, Altair, Antares, Rigel and Aldebaran, won a victory worthy of their noble pedigree.

Stromberg-Carlson supremacy in radio reflects an enviable background in the telephone science—the science so important in radio development.

WHEN you invest in a beautiful work of art, you inquire as to its authenticity—you want the result of the master's experience and skill, not an imitation.

So when buying a radio, you seek a receiver fashioned by a master-builder—an instrument whose tone shall be a replica of the original rendition; whose dial shall be equally responsive at any setting; whose appearance will add to the personality of your home—in short, a Stromberg-Carlson.

For Stromberg-Carlson Receivers have attained their excellence largely because of their telephone heritage. This heritage dates back to the time when Grover Cleveland was president. Even then Stromberg-Carlson was pioneering the solution of sound reception and transmission problems and serving the telephone needs of many American communities.

A pedigree of more than a third of a century in the science which is the ancestor of radio is a very vital reason why—

"There Is Nothing Finer Than a Stromberg-Carlson."

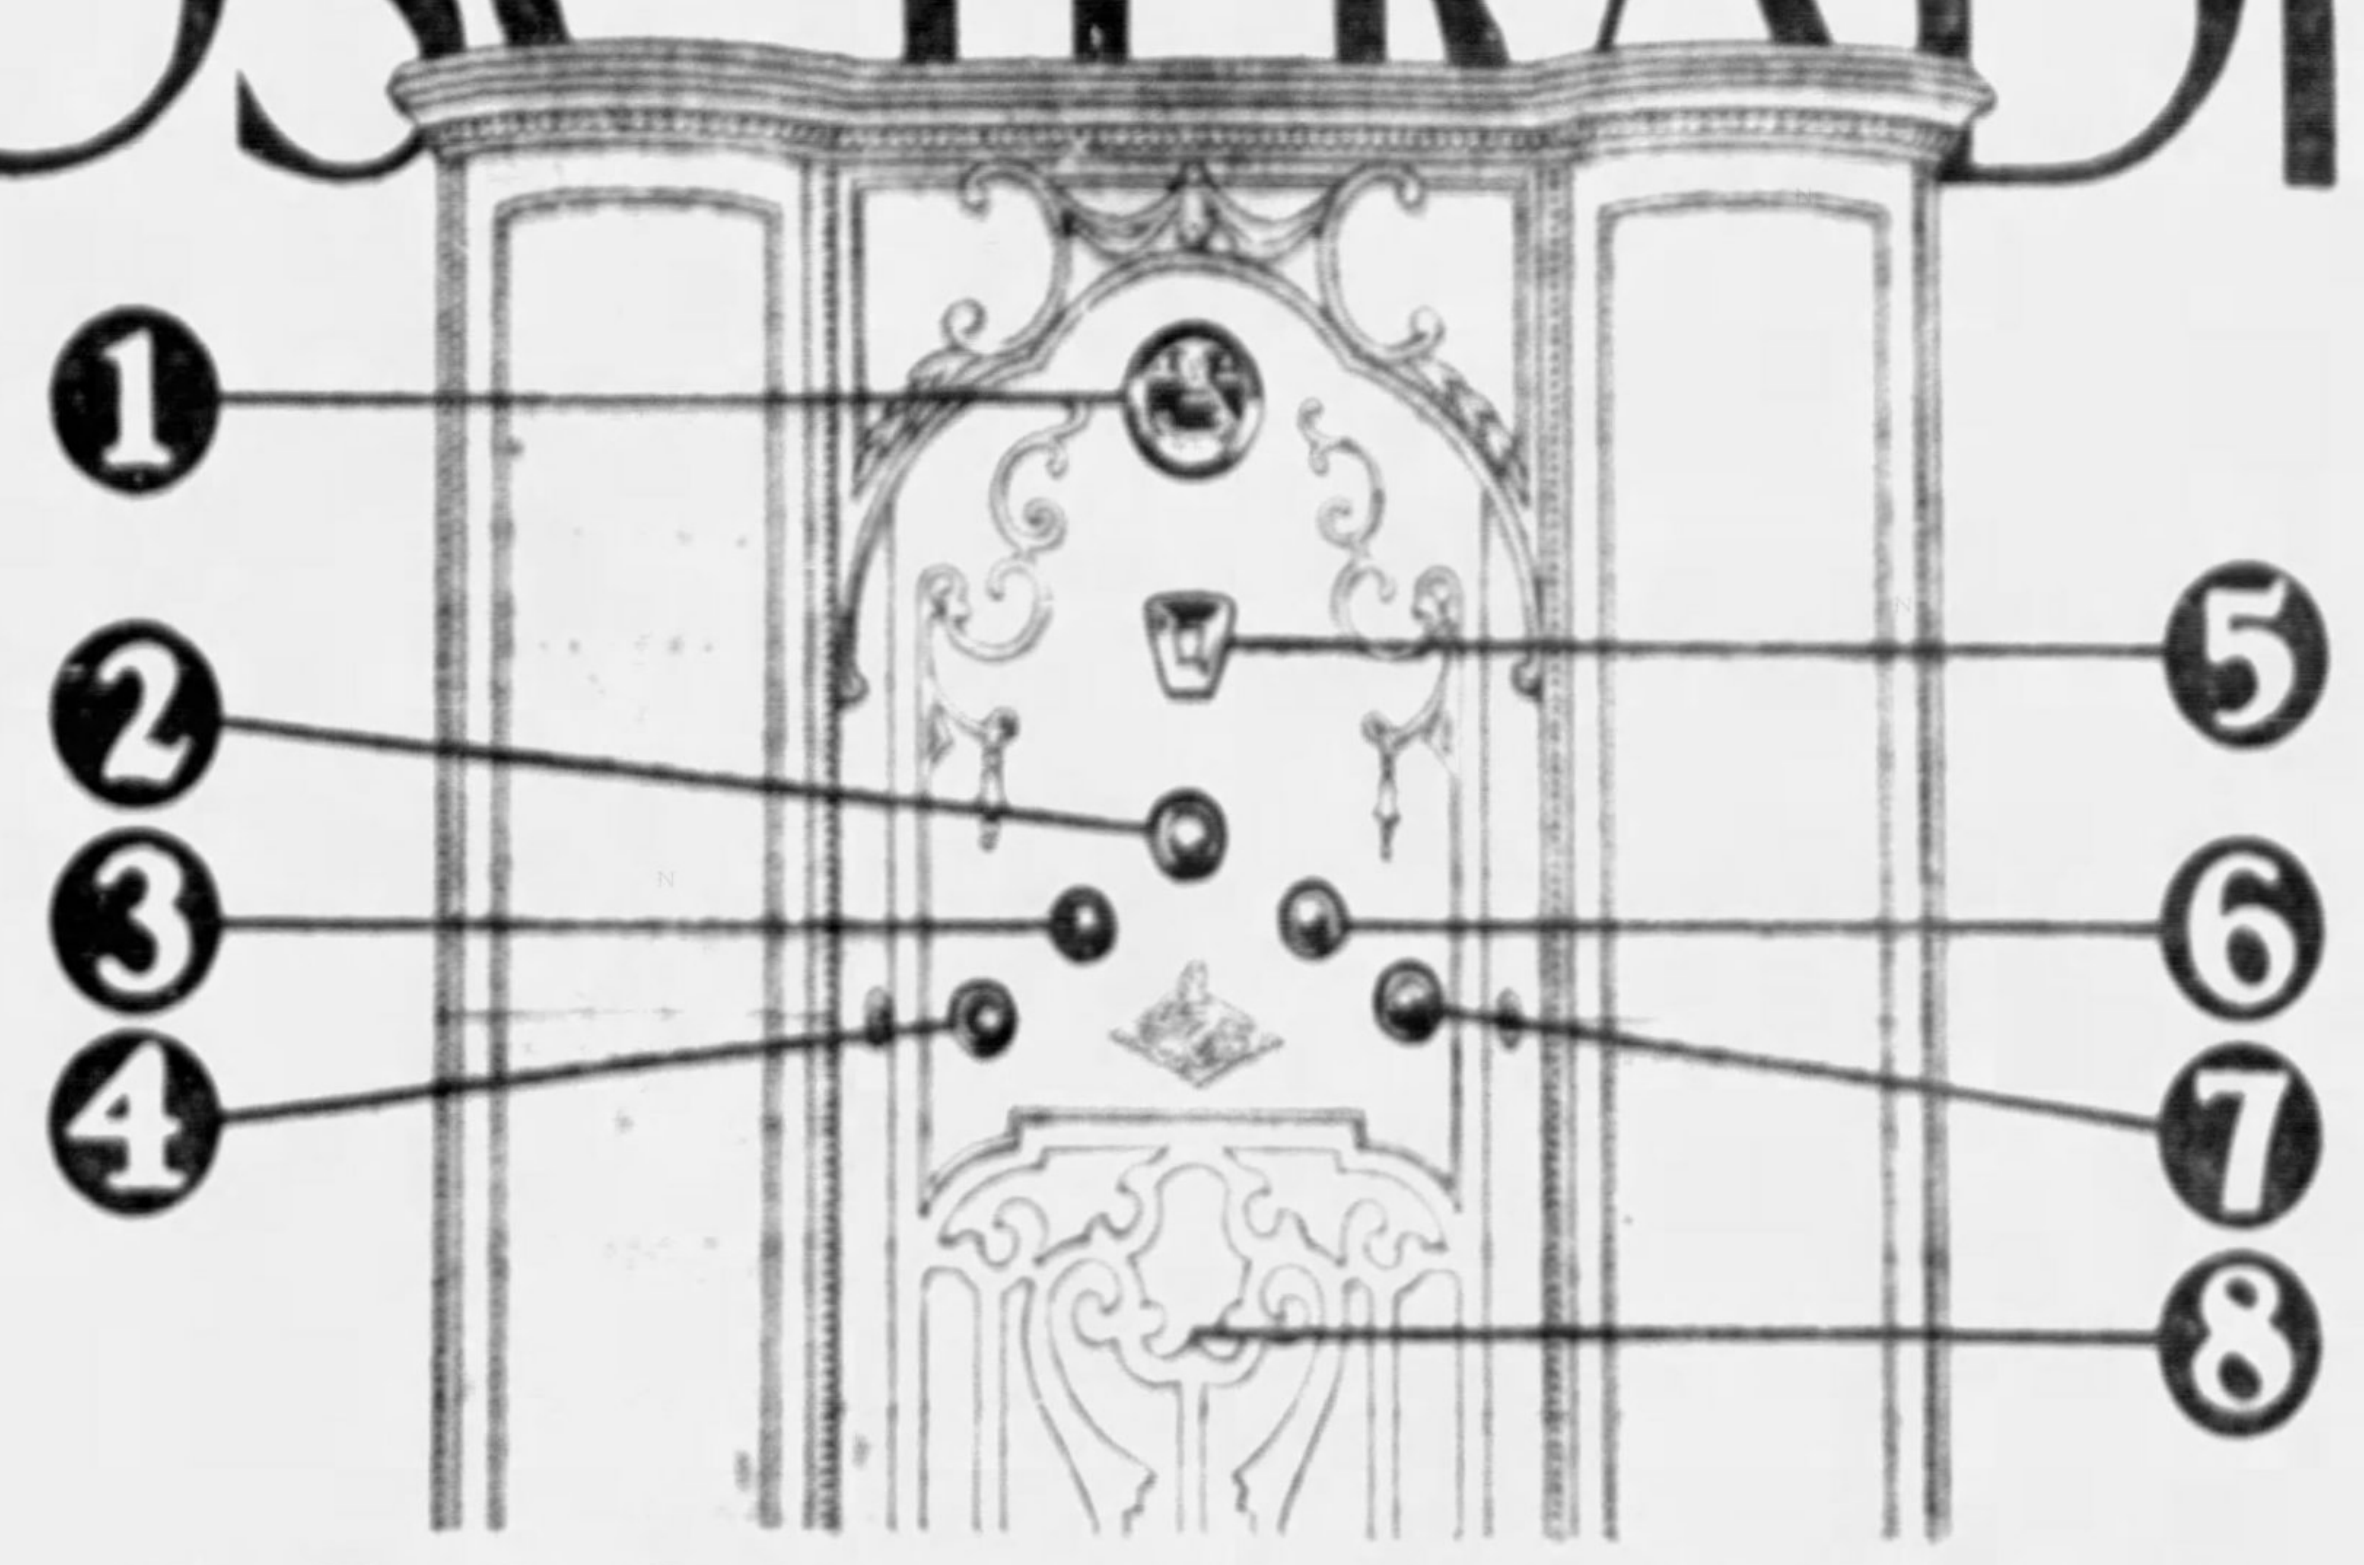
BOSCH RADIO



BOSCH PRESENTS A NEW CONCEPTION OF QUALITY RADIO

For those who surround themselves with the better things and who seek the utmost in all they buy, Bosch presents a new radio receiver. This Bosch Radio embodies a combination of eight refinements not available previously in any one radio receiver.

1 Electrical Tuning Meter. This feature insures a tuning accuracy impossible of accomplishment by ear. The needle moves to the exact point of best reception of each station as the Station Selector is rotated. It aids in selectivity. It makes it possible to tune with the speaker shut off. It reduces static.

2 Station Selector. This new Bosch Radio Model is primarily a single control receiver for those who wish to disregard the other refinements. The Station Selector tunes in all programs smoothly and easily. Also, this Station Selector moves the dial to the position for playing your phonograph through the radio speaker.

3 Off and On—Local-Distance Switch—A slight movement of this switch turns on the power and at the same time adjusts the sensitivity of the receiver to the local or near-by stations. Another slight turn increases the sensitivity for distant stations and weak signals.

4 Tone Selector. You may care for the brilliance of the high notes or you may prefer the mellowness of the low notes. Whether your choice is for emphasis on the bass or emphasis on the treble a slight movement of this Tone Selector will give you exactly the tone which pleases you most.

5 Bosch Line-O-Lite Dial is electrically lighted in a soft amber glow with a bright line of light at the exact tuning point. The Bosch dial is graduated into kilocycles just as the programs are shown in your newspaper. Arbitrary numbers are shown also for the logging of new stations.

6 Full Automatic Volume Control. Think of the enjoyment of never varying volume. You merely set the volume at a point where it is pleasing and every program you tune in, comes to you automatically controlled at that same volume. Then, too, this is a fading compensator. As the signal fades this receiver automatically tends to build it up to your volume level. Local or distant stations are automatically caused to have the same volume with this Bosch refinement.

7 Speaker Mute. A movement of this control cuts off the speaker for quiet tuning. The noise of passing through programs to go from station to station is entirely eliminated. Exact tuning is accomplished and then the speaker is turned on, quieter more enjoyable radio is the result.

8 De Luxe Electrodynamic Speaker. A twelve-inch Bosch Radio Speaker—a larger model—for greater volume, deeper tones and that finest of performance expected of Bosch. For many years Bosch Radio has been outstanding in tonal quality and this speaker contributes to this reputation.

This combination of outstanding features as well as several others is made available in two models of Bosch Radio—Models D and E. These models have nine tubes—five screen-grid—and are priced, less tubes, Model D—$195.00, Model E—$250.00. Available for both AC and DC current. Other Bosch Radio Models, using 8 tubes $144.50 and $159.50, less tubes.

Radio Poll Results

Results of the Radio Poll [illegible] today's [illegible] ballots [illegible] September [illegible] announced in the [illegible] of this week.

Roxy Theater Has 16 Mikes

The most elaborate [illegible] system [illegible] at the Roxy Theater.

There are two [illegible] the broadcast studio on the [illegible] floor of the theater and the theater proper itself.

In the studio there are [illegible] microphone outlets [illegible] engineers to have all combinations of microphones [illegible] a particular broadcast. Though actual thorough tests have proven that a single condenser microphone placed in the proper position with the orchestra balanced properly will give excellent results.

At present three condenser microphones are used on the average studio pickup, one for the orchestra, one for a chorus and one for Roxy.

The theater proper is where the field engineer's [illegible] is taxed to the utmost, as this pickup point is of such enormous size and the variation of programs is so rapid that every week when a new show is broadcast fresh problems present themselves.

Dramatic Actress Also Cartoonist

Virginia Gardiner, dramatic actress heard in the Cuckoo, Empire Builders and other weekly broadcasts, could make a living as a cartoonist, according to K. W. McGregor, production man. George Schreiber, New York cartoonist, thought so much of a recent sketch of himself done by Miss Gardiner that he used it in a caricature study of the Cuckoo program.

Mountaineers Write Most of Own Songs

The [illegible] Mountaineers presented on a NBC network in programs of mountain songs have composed nearly all of the songs they broadcast. Some of them have become very popular, notably "Song of the Blind Man," "The Prison Warden's Secret" and "Eleven More Months, Ten More Days," all of which are requested frequently.

STOP IN AND HEAR IT TODAY

Madelon visits the RADIO SHOW

STEP right up and see the show. It's a show not to be missed by live Americans who want to keep up on what's what. It's one of the greatest Radio Shows of all times. Fortunately, I was allowed to go in early, just so I could give you a little idea of what's going to go on out at Duquesne Garden this week. And, from what I saw and heard, I'd say it was worth the while of every man, woman and child in Pittsburgh to make at least one visit. You'll see the last word in radio. Ideas that creative brains and skilled hands have been working on for months . . . years. You'll hear music and voices grasped from the air and brought to you with a beauty of sound that would never have seemed possible in the first crude days of radio. You'll see radios that used to be housed in unsightly boxes, surrounded by batteries and wires, now encased in the finest of cabinets that skillful craftsmen can devise. You'll see electrical appliances that seem almost human. Not only all this, but many of your favorite radio friends are coming to entertain you . . . different ones every night. Don't miss it!

Madelon

. . . Be Sure to See Majestic

SAVE [illegible] the early part of your tour of inspection for Majestic because you are going to be tremendously interested [illegible]. [illegible] without first finding out what this word means. [illegible] The Majestic refrigerator [illegible] at this show too. It's delightfully inexpensive and has all the qualities that a good refrigerator should have: cold control compartment for cold storage, place for freezing desserts, and it makes 84 cubes of ice all at once. Hamburg Brothers, 543 Liberty Avenue, are the Majestic distributors.

. . . Here's Bosch the Beautiful

THE Bosch display is in the [illegible] on the right. You can't miss it and you wouldn't want to. My first thought was that I could be justified in buying the Bosch radio just as a decorative piece of furniture, even if it weren't one of the best toned transmitters on the market, so beautiful is its cabinet. Tone Control which means that you can have soft music when you're in a soft music mood and loud music when you're in a loud music mood is one feature. Automatic Volume Control which provides against the sound fading just at the most interesting point and an Electrical Tuning Meter which enables you to locate many more stations are only three of the reasons why I advise you to spend a good bit of your time at this booth. The O.M.C. Supply Company, at 115 Ninth Street, are the Bosch distributors.

. . . There's Plenty of Interest Here

RIGHT down front in the center of things you'll find the Gas & Electric Shops display with the big three — Philco, Radiola and Majestic — in all their glory. Philco, with its new Tone Control and Station Recording Dial; Radiola presenting the Superheterodyne in its highest development; Majestic, "The Million Dollar Radio." There are all sorts of clever new-fangled electrical appliances at this booth, too, and [illegible] a device that shows you just what part of a penny is used up by each appliance as it's plugged in. The Duquesne Light Booth, in its usual place in the center and always one of the hits of the show, breaks its own record this year. Be sure to stop here for one of the booklets "Successful Reception." It's a good directory to your out-of-town stations.

. . . And Our Old Friend, Radiola

DON'T leave the lobby until you've gone over to the left and given due time to the RCA display. There's a new model, Model 86, which [illegible]. It's the most versatile radio in the show. In the first place it gives the radio programs with [illegible] tone. Then when the radio program isn't to your taste, it obligingly plays you a record. But here's something better: it has a microphone by which you can make your own records. And if you want to, you can take the program off the air and put it on a record. When your very best friend is making a talk over the air you can get it on a record and save it for posterity. If Rudy Vallee happens to be your favorite singer you can have him for breakfast, lunch and dinner by just playing his song on record. [illegible] distributor of [illegible] Ludwig Hommel & Co., 929 Penn avenue.

. . . Atwater Kent With the Golden Voice

ATWATER KENT as usual makes us prick up our ears. You'll find it in the second booth center with a variety of interesting new models which you'll be glad to know aren't expensive in spite of the fact that the woods are exquisite and the cabinet work particularly fine. Exclusive with the Atwater Kent is the Quick Vision Dial which means that station markings are always in full view from any angle and evenly spaced from end to end, no crowding, thanks to a remarkable compensating mechanism. The figures are large and well lighted so that you won't even need to put on your glasses to read them. A new enlarged Speaker and tone Control give four distinct shadings of the "Golden Voice." The Keeble Company at 714 Penn Avenue is the distributor of Atwater Kent.

. . . Have You Taken Grebe's 7-Check Test?

WELL, don't come away from the Radio Show without first taking this 7-check test that Grebe has so earnestly made out for you. You see, these Grebe people have been making radio since 1909, long before the average person ever heard of it, and they're so idealistic for good radio. They want to convince you in your own mind by submitting their set to the test rather than by describing it in dazzling phrases that this is the radio for you. The Grebe 7-check test shows you how to rate each set for (1) Tone, (2) Control, (3) Selectivity, (4) Sensitivity, (5) Decorative Quality, (6) Construction and (7) Value. You'll realize after this test how clear the tone comes through, how beautiful the cabinets are. You'll rank Grebe high on your list of favorites. The Doubleday-Hill Electric Company, at 715 Liberty Avenue, is its distributor.

. . . Stromberg-Carlson Has a Fine Pedigree

THE makers of Stromberg-Carlsons were making telephones for more than a third of a century before radio was ever heard of, so you see they are experienced at this business of transmitting sound. It's the master, not the imitator. In other words, when someone says "What kind of a radio have you?" and you say "A Stromberg-Carlson," well, if they know a thing about radio, they'll be impressed. And you'll be impressed with Stromberg-Carlsons as you sit on long winter evenings and listen to the programs that it brings before you with the true tones of the original. You'll be impressed with the finest cabinets that the finest cabinetmakers can produce. See Stromberg-Carlson if you don't see anything else. It's on the right, near the Broadcasting Stage. Distributed by the Camera Radio Shops, 6122 and 5841 Penn Avenue, East Liberty.

. . . See Fada With Its New Flashograph

BE sure you give Fada a look-in when you're planning just what radio shall furnish your entertainment for the winter. The famous tone of Fada is proverbial, you know. This year they weren't able to do much to improve the tone, so they decided to concentrate on guarding it against static, and fading and interference, and how its reception is more effortless than ever. One of the features which interested me is the Flashograph, a trick little device by which a light comes on when you come in a station. There's a space on the revolving dial for writing the name of the station, so that when once found you can't lose it. You'll like this set . . . It's one of the best. Fada's booth is on the left as you go in, down towards the broadcasting stage. Its distributor is the A. Mamaux & Son Co., 120 Boulevard of the Allies.

. . Look for the Norge Electric Refrigerator

IT'S in the lobby, too, right in the middle, and it certainly is a beauty. What about the Norge Refrigerator? Well, for one thing it's one-third less expensive than other machines. And for another thing it costs one-third less to operate. Then it has as a patented feature a self-closing door on the ice trays which keeps the ice cubes free from food odors [illegible] free from sticking. The Rollator is the machinery part of the Norge — simple, quiet, efficient. If there's even a remote possibility of your buying an electric refrigerator, give some time to Norge. See the Sangamo-Hamilton Clock here, too. It's wound by electricity but not run by it, so that if the current goes off, Sangamo-Hamilton keeps right on going. Ludwig Hommel & Co., 929 Penn avenue, are the distributors.

. . . Bring Your Set Up to Date

EVEN if you aren't in the market for a new radio right now, you don't have to be deprived of this wonderful new addition of Tone Control, it seems. In the booth of the Silman Distributing Company (on the right as you go in) you'll find an ingenious little instrument called Rad Tone Control which can be installed in any radio set, no matter how prehistoric. Rad Tone Control changes speech or music to suit your individual taste. If you like it low and mellow, turn the knob and there you have it. If you want the base notes brought out and the high notes softened, a few turns of the knob will do the trick. It's very easily adjusted, and it's only $2.85. At Silman's booth you'll find a complete display of radio accessories. They are located downtown at 620 Grant Street.

. . . Howard Believes in Taking Radio Easy

THE HOWARD RADIO COMPANY is going to spoil us. Here they've devised a scheme where you can seat yourself in your most comfortable chair for the evening, tune in on the radio, change the program when you want to and never leave the chair. The Howard Synchro Dial is the answer — a duplicate tuning device attached to an electric cord, which is attached to the tuning device of the Howard Radio receiver itself. The cord which extends between the two may be any length (your radio can be in another room, for instance) and may be exposed or entirely concealed. Aren't they encouraging us in laziness? But isn't it a delightful laziness? You can see the Howard Radio, which is said by those who know to be one of the finest on the market, at the W. F. Frederick Piano Company booth. Frederick's are the distributors and they're located at 525-27 Penn and 913 Liberty Avenues.

. . . Now You Don't Need an Aerial

THINGS happen so fast in this radio business it's hard to keep abreast of them. For instance, did you know they've found a way to eliminate aerials, just as they found a way to eliminate batteries? No longer need you have wires dangling from the roof; no longer risk life or limb putting them up or repairing them; no longer tolerate lightning dangers. You need not even have an inside aerial to disfigure the room. The work is now done by a device small enough to fit in a vest pocket. Attach it anywhere inside or outside the radio cabinet in a minute, without tools. It improves radio reception and gives clearer, sweeter and more natural tone. It's called the new improved Wellston Gold Test Aerial and it costs only $2.50. It's displayed at the Keystone Radio Corporation's booth, and their place at 840 Grant Street.

. . . Philco's Baby Grand

THEY'RE proud of their baby, are the Philcos, and no wonder! It's the nicest little cabinet I've seen in a long time, and Philco promises full-sized radio performance in small space . . . and for very little money. See this model sketched, and the many other beautiful models. Tone Control is their latest claim to fame. Just a mere matter of reaching out and changing the tone of your radio stations and programs to suit your taste and mood. Turn the Philco Tone Control to your choice of these four positions of tone quality "brilliant" — "bright" — "mellow" — "deep." Bring in your favorite jazz band with the crisp snappy tone of the dance floor. Bring in classical music with the correct tonal pitch. The Philco booth is easy to find; it joins with Joseph Horne's and it's near the stage. C. R. Rodgers Company, 5434 Penn Avenue, is the Philco distributor.

Why Superheterodyne?

Just Tune One

That's all . . . just tune one because a Silver-Marshall Superheterodyne Radio will give you the most perfect reception known to the world today.

First, it will select one program . . . and only one . . . absolutely without interference from other stations . . . even if the program you want be only one dial division away from a very powerful local program. It will give perfect tone, with all of the musical and voice notes given proper emphasis . . . no more, no less . . . and at any volume from a whisper to volume to fill a ballroom. And it needs no aerial installation . . . just plug it in and it plays; yet it will reach out and bring in distant programs pure and crystal clear. Of course, it has five screen-grid tubes, electro-dynamic speaker and every other engineering feature.

We know that Silver-Marshall Superheterodyne Radio will give you more than any other radio you can get today, so all we ask is just that you tune one before buying any radio.

War Nearly Ends Career

Genia Fonariova mezzo soprano heard in National Broadcasting Company programs is a White Russian. The World War almost wrecked her career and the victory of the Bolsheviki destroyed her family's fortune. Despite these setbacks she came to America where she scored a success on the concert stage and then won new laurels before the microphone.

Her associates in New York are all members of the Russian aristocracy driven from their homeland by the revolution and she shares with them the hope that some day the Soviet will be shattered and there will be another imperial Russia.

Miss Fonariova was born in Odessa Russia and lived in Russia until she was 17 when she went to Milan to continue her musical studies. She made her debut in opera shortly afterward and sang with success throughout Italy.

At the outbreak of the World War she was singing prima donna roles at the Royal Opera House in Brussels. The German invasion cut short her engagement and she fled to London where she sang in an opera company composed of French and Russian singers who had been exiled by the war.

English friends finally persuaded her to visit America and she made her New York debut in Aeolian Hall. She sang a number of concerts and in 1927 became associated with NBC. She is heard regularly in her own broadcast concerts as well as in programs of classical music such as the Great Composers' Hour and the program of Russian music "Troika Bells."

X-Ray Reveals Tube Defects

Development of a new industrial use for the X-ray which is expected to increase the average life of radio tubes and at the same time solve one of the most difficult problems facing tube manufacturers has been announced by the Eveready Raytheon Tube Company.

Despite numerous tests tubes are subjected to at factories manufacturers have never before been able to eliminate the disagreeable experience set owners have in buying a new tube which, according to tests at the dealer's counter was perfect, but which nevertheless, failed to function after a few hours' service. Manufacturers of tubes have unsuccessfully tried various methods and tests by which they hoped to do away with these unsuspected cripples.

Radio Actress Formerly on Stage

Brenda Bond actress heard in the Niagara Hudson program broadcast through an NBC network played the lead in "Top Speed," "Spread Eagle," "The Grab Bag" and other Broadway productions before coming to radio.

3rd Lucky Strike Period to Start

B A Rolfe and his Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra will be on the air three times a week over National Broadcasting Company networks beginning Tuesday. This new program will be heard Tuesdays at 10 15 p m Eastern standard time and will last for three-quarters of an hour.

Soviet Prisons Turn Out Radio Experts

To go to jail in absolute ignorance of the wireless art and to emerge a full-fledged radio amateur is now a happy possibility in Russia reports Wireless World of London. The Russians it is said have found that the study of radio is one of the best means of improving prison morale.

Louis Mason Told He'd Never be Actor

Louis Mason who has the principal part in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" and is featured on other NBC programs as well might never have been the actor he is had he taken an old school teacher of his seriously. When Louis was a small boy in Danville Ky he used to be given minor parts in school theatricals

Stanley Scheduled For Eveready Hour

James Stanley baritone will be guest artist of the Eveready program which will be broadcast over WCAE Tuesday at 9 00 p m. At 19 Stanley made his concert debut with Mme Nordica in St Louis. He has sung in many choirs and was one of the eight Victor artists who toured the country several years ago.

T. Daniel Frawley Old-School Actor

T Daniel Frawley who is featured on the Crime Prevention Hour and other programs of the National Broadcasting Company is an actor of the old school. Between 1900 and 1923 he made eight trips around the world with his famous troupe of actors known as the Frawley Comedy Company. As the principal of [illegible] company he played in nearly every country of the world and became even more popular abroad than in America.

MASTERPIECES... ...of RADIO

PHILCO has merited its enviable position in radio . . . it has earned its right to be the Standard by which all other radio values are compared. Masterpieces of radio . . . the finest that engineering skill can produce, Philco affords the ultimate in radio reception and is designed to serve your most critical requirements.

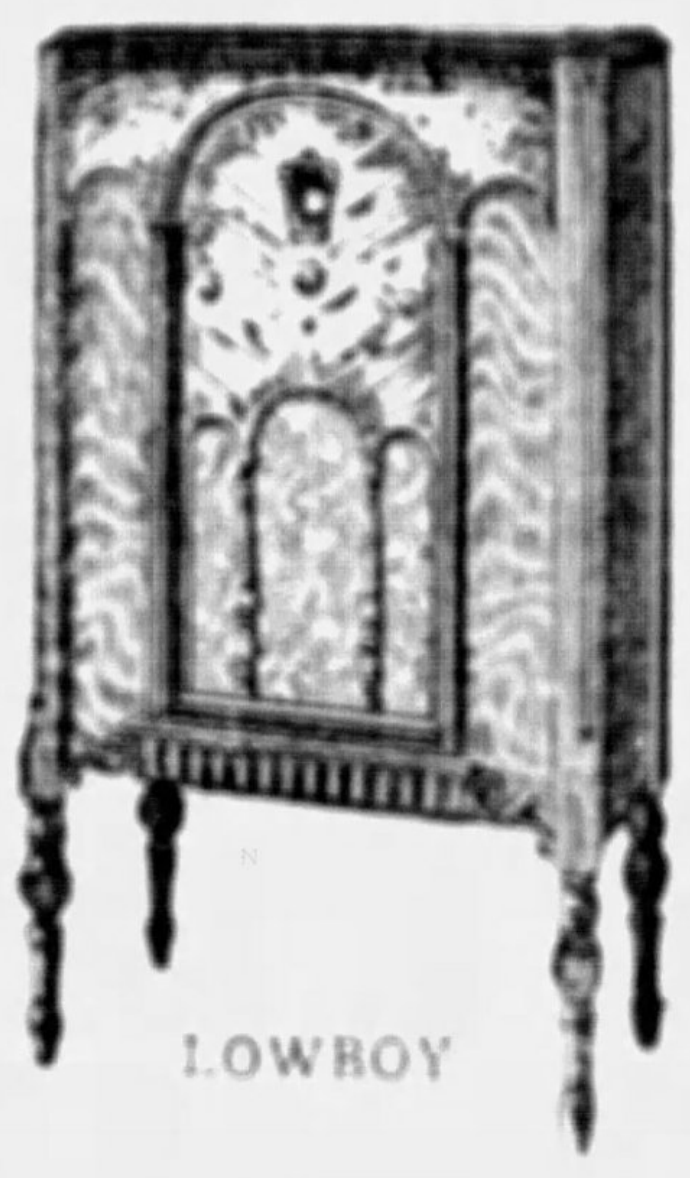
COMBINATION
The radio-phonograph is truly a Philco masterpiece. Equipped with 9-tube Screen Grid-Plus chassis. Exquisite black walnut cabinet. Price $198 less tubes.



LOWBOY
Typically Philco quality. With 7-tube Screen Grid receiver . . . priced $110 less tubes. Also with 9-tube Screen Grid-Plus chassis at $127.50 less tubes.

PHILCO TONE-CONTROL

AGAIN the witchery of radio has been tinged with new magic by Philco. Now YOU, in your own home, can control the quality of tone sent you by the broadcasting station.

NOW YOU can have your choice of four tone qualities — Brilliant, Bright, Mellow, Deep. Great artists of the air come to you YOUR way. It is the outstanding improvement in radio reception this fall.

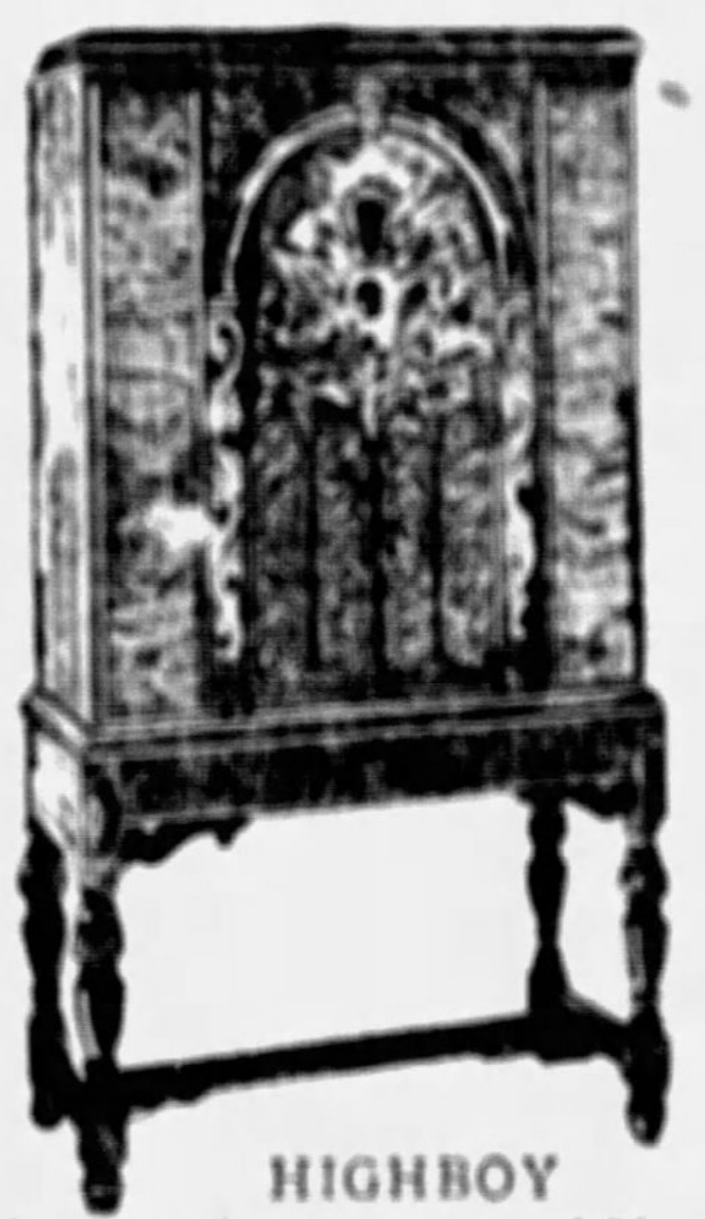
A single knob on the front of the set offers you a new, fascinating way in which to regulate the tone quality to suit your taste. Jazz bands can be "bright" and crisp, or whisper and croon, as you wish.

By turning the control knob to "Deep," as shown in the picture, you can minimize static, the daytime enemy of good reception. Interference noises, buzzes and crackles from electrical apparatus can be reduced in the same way.



HIGHBOY
New 9-tube Screen Grid-Plus chassis built into an exceptionally beautiful cabinet of American walnut. Gobelin Tapestry over speaker. Price $145 less tubes.

• PHILCO SCREEN GRID-PLUS

PHILCO'S Super Set is deliberately built to give greater performance than the average owner needs. In the big cities it separates crowded local stations so accurately that the listener can enjoy any program without cross-talk. And in cities without broadcasting stations it reaches out and makes enthralling programs available, often for the first time.

BABY GRAND CONSOLE
Philco's latest creation—the public demand. Philco quality in a moderate sized cabinet. Price less tubes, $[illegible]

• PHILCO AUTOMATIC VOLUME CONTROL

With all its power and distance and selectivity, Philco would be just another radio set if it were not for Automatic Volume Control. Power and distance are useless unless you can maintain reception at a constant level. Automatic Volume Control means that you can hold programs when you get them. No radio which lacks this feature can be called a "Super Set."

CONCERT GRAND
The largest and most luxurious model ever produced by Philco. A de luxe combination radio and phonograph, with receding sides to fit the corner of a room. Truly a masterpiece. Priced at $310 less tubes.

• PHILCO BALANCED-UNITS

Philco engineering has achieved a perfect balancing of all units, which produces a pure, clear, undistorted tone, so lifelike it will amaze and delight you. ## HAPPY HOMES CURB ON CRIME

By LEO AND MORRIS HALL

[illegible] He said:

Leo Hall

"Show me the home that is pleasingly furnished and you will find a home-loving family.

"I was just reading a statement by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, coroner of Cook County, Chicago, and one of the foremost authorities on health, sanitation and living conditions, who summed up the situation when he said:

"Keep your children off the streets by providing them with attractive, well-furnished homes and you will have taken the first and most important step in checking the wave of crime and immorality among American youth."

Welfare [illegible] the United States, Mr. Hall said, [illegible] remedy [illegible] Chicago coroner [illegible] as a means of [illegible] Mr. Hall quoted Mr. Bundesen [illegible] as saying:

"Contrast the home which is well furnished with the children attracted to it as the center of their activities with the slovenly home which is repulsive to the young folks. The well furnished home will help to keep the children off the streets.

Morris Hall

"For several years the American home has been the backbone of our national life and habits. In recent years we have encountered many influences which have detracted from our home life. It is up to American fathers and mothers to make their homes so attractive that their children will be taught to spend much of their time at home. Young girls should be encouraged to entertain their boy friends in their homes instead of joy riding with boys they meet on the street corners."

One of the many features of the Style Show, he said, would be [illegible] showing how [illegible] make for a [illegible] home and family life.

ENVIRONMENT GUIDES HOME

By DANIEL B. HART

Of Hart's, Inc.

[illegible]

Daniel B. Hart

The environment of the home has long since been recognized as the greatest influencing force in the building of character, and as the character of the people so the character of the nation.

As Americans we are in the happy position of complete superiority over that of any other nation for modern furnishings of style and comfort in the home. To retain that superiority it is necessary that we follow always the newest trends in home furnishing fashions.

The Style Show, which will reveal all that is newest and charming, will be staged specifically for "Her Majesty the American lady of the house." She it is who holds the future of America in the palm of her hand.

Don't Scrimp on Material When Making Curtains

Don't use a tape measure. It slips. Use a yardstick or better a folding five-foot rule.

Don't scrimp on material. If you are an amateur allow [illegible] inches for headings and hems, for shrinkage, for allowance for possible mistakes in measuring, for letting out when moving.

Don't forget to allow material [illegible] each end for the matching of the patterns at the top in [illegible] figured over-curtains.

Don't do without a lining in [illegible] and printed linen over-curtains. Linings make them hang better.

HOME REVEALS OWNER'S TASTE

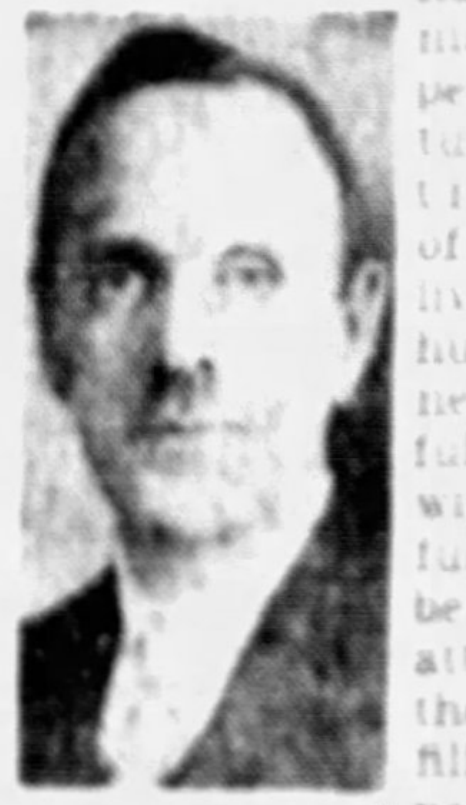
By CHARLES L. SPITZ

President, The C. L. Spitz & Co.

Home furnishings reflect largely the life of the individual. A home does not necessarily have to be elaborately furnished nor does it have to be furnished with expensive furniture to show the true character of the person living in it. A humble home neatly and carefully furnished with inexpensive furniture can be made more attractive than the mansion filled with expensive furniture selected without care.



C. L. Spitz

It is one of the purposes of "Furniture Week" to create ideas in home furnishings and the manner in which to arrange the home whether large or small. I am convinced that the average man or woman is coming to recognize the importance of careful selection of furniture whether it is of the expensive type or less expensive class.

I believe that more attention and thought is given to the home and its furnishings in the present day than ever before. This perhaps is due largely to the fact that more people own their own homes today than at any other time in the history of the country.

Bright Colors Now Vogue for Baby's Crib

Even the baby's crib comes in color now. And before he is crib age, the bassinet.

One of the newest and most practical bassinet fashions is a regular market basket lined in bright chintz with two swinging handles by which basket and baby are conveniently carried from room to room.

DRAPERIES GET NEW ATTENTION

There is one section of the great American public which is every day becoming more and more important to the drapery department of all home furnishing stores.

This section is the large class of buyers who have good taste and ambitious ideas but cannot afford to pay for high priced imported materials and the workmanship that goes with such things.

Often they are prepared to buy fine material and make it up at home or may prefer to use popular priced materials and have them made up into attractive curtains in the shop workroom.

Then there is the wealthy and well-to-do section comprising families who are the real builders not only of fortunes but of sound commercial progress in all its myriad ramifications. This class will place their orders for draperies where the materials shown are well designed, good in quality and color values.

SMART DESIGNS PUT ON DISPLAY

By JOSEPH GILBERT

Gilbert & [illegible]

Unusual opport[illegible] are being offered the public [illegible] home furnishings both from a standpoint of economy and style. Furniture dealers of Pittsburgh and vicinity are preparing for the First National Home Furnishing Style Show which opens Friday, September 26, and ends October 4. Manufacturers and their designers have created the smartest fashions ever exhibited.

Joseph Gilbert

The Style Show [illegible] opportunely for the public. The new merchandise sele[illegible] market's [illegible] [illegible] War [illegible] lower.

There is no [illegible] furnished attra[illegible] home and it need[illegible] to create the prope[illegible] for ideal living.

Today the a[illegible] have some decorative and useful value. The public should take advantage of this National Style Show which will be the beginning of better homes.

Chintzes Popular After 200 Years

[illegible] from India. They were used [illegible] And [illegible] patterns are [illegible] the reds and [illegible] and yellows that were the fashion 200 years ago.

Braided or hooked rugs in soft cheerful colorings belong to the maple period, and there are excellent modern ones as well as many that are older. Small Oriental rugs too [illegible] if you prefer them [illegible] are quite correct, for they were used in many of the finest early American homes.

Light Woods Rule In Sleeping Rooms

Nowadays with apartments springing up like mushrooms in the night, and all too many bedrooms with but one window, and that looking out on a narrow court, it takes skillful planning to devise a bedroom that at least gives the effect of sunshine if you can't get the real article.

Even in bedrooms where the sun streams in all day the modern tendency is to keep the general scheme light. Light woods are cleaner looking. [illegible] doesn't show on them so plainly. And in these times of servant problems that's important.

Play Yard Quilt Delight for Baby

Play time is a gay time too, for the 1930 baby finds his play yard floor covered with bright quilts. Hit-or-miss patchwork, either real patchwork or some of the modern printed patch materials, is a favorite.

But [illegible] intriguing to baby [illegible] play yard quilt. The [illegible] of checked gingham. [illegible] each corner is a gingham pocket, and in each pocket a soft stuffed toy that baby may discover for himself and chew or bang about to his heart's content.

Science Drives Drudgery From Kitchen, Laundry

LABOR-SAVING DEVICES AID TO HOUSEKEEPING

Washing Machine That Slips Under Sink, Automatic Toaster, Among Novelties

"Come Out of the Kitchen" from [illegible] added and the Laundry.

Instead of kneading dough in the kitchen it's the fashion for the modern woman to go out and get it in an office.

Instead of spending hours washing clothes she spends them washing the cards while her bridge partner deals.

An she enjoys her house more because she doesn't see so much of it. It's something to want to come home to instead of something to take a vacation from.

LABOR-SAVING DEVICES

Small apartments are partly responsible of course. There isn't enough work in one to keep a woman busy all day. And every day new space and labor-saving devices appear to help her spend more time outside. A piece of kitchen furniture that rates very high in fashion counts is the small combination table and cabinet. It contains everything except the kitchen stove to use a fashionable slang expression.

Space for pots and pans, racks for lids, drawers for cutlery and other kitchen necessities, a slicing board that slides in and out. And the enameled top can be used for rolling dough and cutting biscuits as well as for a table.

LADDER-CHAIR

The kitchen chair that can be turned into a short stepladder and is found in many fashion-knowing labor-saving kitchens. Just a quick flip of the back and the steps are ready for you to reach the highest shelf.

More often than not these days the kitchen is the laundry too. For the laundry an electric washing machine small enough to slide under the kitchen sink saves time labor and space. It has no moving parts inside the clothes container so can be used for dainty lingerie as well as dishcloths.

CLOTHES DRYER

A clothes dryer with 36 arms all of which fold straight up and out of the way takes practically no space in the laundry when not in use. Yet it holds an entire wash for the small family.

If you've ever run to answer the phone while ironing and returned to find a scorch on your favorite guest towel you will appreciate the electric iron which turns off automatically when it reaches a certain degree of heat.

Toasters that toast both sides at once, toasters that turn off automatically when the toast is done, tea kettles with compartments in the top that poach the eggs or cook the vegetables while the water is boiling for tea or coffee.

These are just a few of the fashions that are helping women to "come out of the kitchen" in 1930.

BETTER HOMES, FINER CITIZENS

By HYMAN GOLDENSON,

of Goldenson Furniture Store

Hyman Goldenson senior member of Goldenson's Furniture Store, South Side, is an emphatic believer in the development of the home first.

He says:

H. Goldenson

"'Furniture Week' carries with it a whole-hearted support and co-operation for better homes. Better homes, better citizens.

"Since the selection of the right kind of furniture is primary in the establishment of a home, too much care cannot be exercised in the study of the kind of furniture that goes into it.

"The better home is not always the most expensively furnished, but the home furnished with good care and taste.

"There should be an air of inviting hospitality, deep seated chairs, a comfortable davenport, tables where tables should be, and floor coverings that harmonise. These things go to make a house a home.

"Furnishings display character and express the personality of the persons who dwell in the home."

Spanish Patterns Have General Usage

Until recently it has been the general supposition that furniture in the Spanish style required a room with Spanish architecture. Many furniture dealers have hesitated in the purchase of modern Spanish patterns, owing to this prevailing supposition.

The idea seems to have been started by the building of many fine homes in the Spanish style, in which every detail of Spanish architecture and interior decoration has been faithfully duplicated.

The fact is that the Spanish style is just as suitable for the modern bedroom as are the score of other historic styles which have been reproduced during the past decade.

Desk Makes Study Easier for Child

The little boy or girl who dreaded the coming of fall and the return to the confines of the school room and its attendant horror preparing lessons at home may be induced to assume the tasks with more cheerfulness and enthusiasm if a commodious and attractive desk is provided.

A desk which is built on the lines of the Welsh dresser is particularly useful for a child. Books and favorite objects may be placed on its shelves in easy reach of short arms.

In the ample storage space below may be placed many of the objects dear to the child but not noticeably decorative, such as skates, balls, bats, etc.

On the center shelf may be placed the writing materials and a chair of appropriate height may be kept conveniently near.

Apartments Require Careful Furnishings

Furnishing the small apartment in a way to give it a look of spaciousness requires careful choosing of furniture and draperies.

Too great economy in furniture gives the apartment a [illegible] friendly air though preserving the precious floor space and giving a feeling of spaciousness. Too lavish use of furnishings soon has it stuffy looking and cramped in appearance.

Generally speaking the latter fault is the more common one and the easier one to fall into by the uninitiated.

Whatnots Still Have Value in Furnishings

In a colonial or refurnished Victorian setting whatnots have as of old a distinct interest for their collections of pewter, odd ornaments, rare finds, heirloom bits and whatnot.

Metal Trimmings Give Final Touch

The metal trimmings on a piece of furniture, if correct, are like the jewels of a [illegible] lady, perfectly graded [illegible] and the finishing touch in harmony.

Chests of oak, walnut and mahogany with the [illegible] ness of cedar lining may now be used in the dining room or bedroom, so beautiful in line and finish are they.

PUT CHARACTER IN LIVING ROOM

A living room can have a very magnificent appearance as though it were just crowded with beautiful furnishings and yet as a matter of fact be rather simply furnished. The character of the pieces themselves determines the story of the general effect of the living room.

The important pieces in your living room are of course the davenport and the two large accompanying chairs and the character of these three pieces determines the whole atmosphere of your living room.

There are literally thousands of patterns of these three pieces from which to select, ranging all the way from the heavy, even clumsy overstuffed pieces built solely for comfort to the most elegant and classic designs.

RAPID CHANGES SEEN IN STYLES OF FURNITURE

Interiors Reflect Shift In Modern Taste Equal To That of Dress Modes

By S. J. HAHN
President Hahn Furniture Company

It was a philosopher of China who said "One picture is worth a thousand words." We [illegible]

S J Hahn

[illegible] to paint a word picture that can be seen in the mind's eye of a reader. The moving picture [illegible] [illegible] the few and bring them to the multitude. What may have been drab or even tiresome on the printed page becomes alive [illegible] on the screen.

This is an age of action. An age of quick changes. [illegible] from the [illegible] boyish figure to the beautifully moulded grace of the feminine form.

Short skirts make way for gracefully [illegible] [illegible] days may become obsolete tomorrow.

RAPID CHANGES

Changes in furniture fashions are just as rapid and equally marked. We can all remember the horse-hair sofa and the red plush covered rockers that were the pride of every housewife. It really isn't so long ago when big brass beds were a mark of affluence in the home.

The furnishings of the living room today is in marked contrast with that of yesteryear. Color has assumed greater importance. Harmony of shades is essential to the well-ordered home. Just as the woman who would be fashionably dressed chooses her entire attire in a harmonious ensemble, so does the proper furnishings of the home require a proper grouping of furniture, rugs, hangings and art pieces. All must blend in colorful cheerful perfectness.

NEW 1931 MOTIF

There is a new 1931 motif in home furnishings. To crystalize it in the minds of the men and women, the American furniture industry is holding "open house" during the week of September 26 through the 4th of October.

Pittsburgh is co-operating in this nation-wide movement. The stores which specialize on home furnishings are inviting you to visit them so that you may see what furniture fashions are decreed for the new year.

Inviting you to come to look because "one picture is worth a thousand words."

FILM GOLDEN FURNITURE AGE

The "Romance of Chippendale and Sheraton," a moving picture accompanied by a lecture, will be presented in Kaufmann's auditorium daily at 3 o'clock all this week.

The film was made through the influence of the London Daily Mail after many months of research and it offers the lovers of fine furniture a rare opportunity to see the two great masters of the "golden age of furniture" at work in their shops.

Many original pieces of furniture by Chippendale and Sheraton are shown, filmed in the identical scenes where the original action took place. You see the gentle Sheraton at work in his humble shop, and Thomas Chippendale waiting on royalty.

You also see many of their distinguished patrons moving through the story: David Garrick, Horace Walpole, Dr. Johnson and others.

All the characters in the film were selected by the curator of the British National Portrait Gallery for their resemblance to the originals.

Mr. Engholm, the lecturer, interprets the film. A journalist, a student of history, a lover of fine furniture, he puts into the story as much beauty and romance as any popular thriller.

Noted Writer Gives Furnishings Ideas

Several simple suggestions of home furnishings are given by Helen Townsend Barton, national authority on style and decoration, in her latest book, "When Good Furnishings Get Together."

In one of two suggested reading groups for the average living room, she illustrates a cozy Colonial group for two readers with a small gateleg table containing books and lamp as the center. The table is placed next to the wall and the chairs on either side arranged so that the light of the lamp is convenient for two readers.

"The gateleg table looks particularly well when the end next the wall is dropped and a row of books is placed on top," Miss Barton writes. "The Windsor chair is an appropriate type with this style of table and a chintz-covered armchair opposite adds to the coziness of the little group.

"The table lamp should be sufficiently large to light both chairs, yet not so weighty as to appear out of balance on the table."

Harmony of Color Rule of Today for Baby's Bedroom

N[illegible] fashions now have [illegible] of color, more gay color than ever before.

Babies [illegible] go to sleep between colored sheets. Not only [illegible] blue [illegible] lavender [illegible] sheets. Or if the sheet is white, it's apt to have a colored border.

Their little soft warm blankets are colored too, to match the sheets or make a color harmony, such as green sheets with lavender blankets.

And their spreads. Of pastel [illegible] quilted [illegible] [illegible] edges [illegible]. And pillows to match.

DIFFICULT JOB TO EQUIP FLAT

Furnishing of the small apartment to give it a homey air and appearance is no menial task, for to select the proper kind of furniture and drapes requires some considerable thought.

Many people encounter much difficulty in making their apartment look inviting. Sometimes it is because of the lack of the right kind of furniture, then again it is because the rooms are overcrowded. More often the latter is the cause for a too lavish and stuffy appearance.

Sometimes a few carefully selected pieces in a room will give just the right appearance, then again the same number of pieces of a different type create anything but the desired effect.

PIANO RAPIDLY WINNING BACK ITS POPULARITY

Music Lovers Find Radio Supplements but Does Not Supplant the Instrument

"Music is the only art sent from heaven to earth, and the only earthly art that is taken back to heaven!"

G. S. Schroeder

This quotation from an unknown source was made by George S. Schroeder, president of the Schroeder Piano Company, in commenting on the musical atmosphere of Western Pennsylvania.

Mr. Schroeder is descended from an ancestry highly talented in music, his father having been a composer of note. With this heritage he places music high in the list of education and cultural influences. He says:

"The richest child is poor without a musical education, and no one can lay claim to true culture without a practical understanding of this art.

ART'S DEBT TO PIANO

"The art of music owes more to the piano than to all other instruments combined. Two thousand years have been required to bring the piano to its present state of perfection. Every one of the masters used the piano as a means through which to catch, record and perfect those immortal inspirations which have come down to us as the classics, and even the most inconsequential of modern jazz invariably has its birth on the keyboard of the piano. If further evidence is asked, it need only be pointed out that the piano is an essential part of almost every musical composition, even though adapted primarily for other instruments or for the human voice.

"Popular devotion to the piano was interrupted for a brief time by the advent of radio, which held all classes spellbound, no less by its real powers of entertainment than by the mystery and miracle of it. The radio is one of the greatest discoveries of all time, and one of the finest gifts to the people. But it does not, and never can, take the place of the piano. It entertains us delightfully, familiarizes us with much good music, and gives us a 'listening acquaintanceship' with the best of living artists. But the radio can never develop latent talent, nor lead to a musical education in the practical sense of the word. It can never discover that your child is an embryo Busoni, and then take him by the hand and lead him to the concert stage or to the center of an applauding social group. The influence of radio is to turn us into lay admirers of the art of music, and not into musicians."

SALES INCREASE

This single though serious limitation of radio, he says, is being clearly realized. It has been discovered that these two great instruments are not in any sense rivals, but necessary companions, especially where the development of youthful talent is held to be of importance. Because of this corrected viewpoint, the number of homes that are purchasing pianos is rapidly returning to the healthy volume it enjoyed before radio became a perfected fact. Piano instruction is being made a part of the curriculum of public schools in a number of cities, thereby publicly recognizing the full equality of this art with other branches of culture, and guaranteeing a musical opportunity to every child.

Influence of Art Noted in Newest Patterned Papers

By RICHARD FAIRALL,

President Fairall Wall Paper Company.

The development of cut-out decorations has been a marked feature and has the [illegible] of producing [illegible] in individual taste [illegible].

There is increase in the range of panel schemes with applied motifs. Many types of motifs are designed, such as corner sprays, center sprays, medallions, birds, butterflies, etc.

The most striking development this season is the influence of modern art on patterned wallpapers. This new style is the most radical change in decorative art that has occurred during the last century and is affecting all branches of art.

Its emphasis is on simplicity by eliminating unnecessary details, good proportions and correct color harmony.

A prominent feature is the extensive use of geometric designs. The new wallpapers and borders in this style are particularly attractive.

FINER QUALITY GOODS WANTED

The trend in furnishing the home today is toward creating a more harmonious interior, according to John Alex Scott, president of the John A. Scott Company.

J. Alex Scott

More attention is being given to the proper relation of color schemes that reflect the character of those in the home.

Our staff of salesmen are particularly trained in creating home groupings and settings on our display floors that enable home-lovers contemplating the purchase of furniture to visualize the complete home.

With the coming of more and more apartments in Greater Pittsburgh today we find that the young married couples are buying a better quality of home furnishings than ever before, although they only furnish one or two rooms at a time, but in these they bring true home comfort and environment.

PUBLIC KNOWS PROPER VALUES

The average individual of the Pittsburgh district buying public is an unusually intelligent and well-versed personage when it comes to selecting home furnishings. The various periods, the types typical of foreign countries, Louis Quinze and the Renaissance, are not meaningless to the Pittsburgh housewife who usually has much to say in the choosing of what goes into the home.

It is the housewife who knows just the relative decorative merits and how to correctly select an ensemble lending just the proper artistic effect, all of which greatly simplifies matters for the furniture merchant, who is spared the necessity of first educating his customer.

"A salesman must be on his toes in Pittsburgh," said a man who had formerly sold furniture in another large city before coming here, "as he is called on to deal with a public who knows furniture styles and periods, who have studied the needs of their homes and who would quickly detect any slip he might make in describing a piece of furniture."

CHANGES SEEN IN FEW YEARS

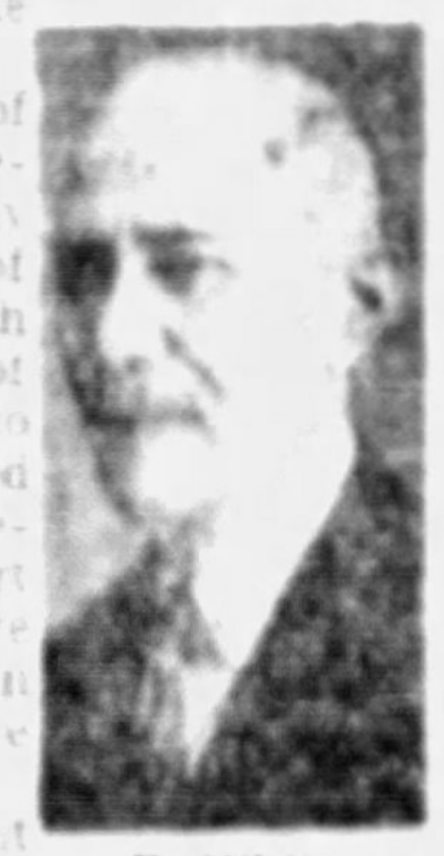
By B. WHITE,

President Home Furniture Co.

Many changes have taken place in the furniture business during the past few years. Styles which in days gone by were considered beautiful are now mere commonplace pieces which often times do not fit into the modern home.



B. White

Creation of new styles, designs and many new articles of furniture which were unheard of a few years ago have all served to create a desire on the part of the average man and woman to have a more beautiful home.

The present day furniture market is made up of hundreds of different articles to fit into the home and serve a purpose of real significance. And to show the true purpose of these new styles and articles "Furniture Week" will be observed this week.

I have found that people in every walk of life are interested in better homes, and that better homes mean that they are interested in better furniture.

Furniture displays to be seen this week will not only create an interest in better furniture but many new ideas relative to the arrangement of the home will be gathered.

Furniture Today Is More Beautiful And Lower in Cost

Furniture today is cheaper and better than ever before. Today the cheapest furniture has more beauty of design, more serviceable qualities and more genuine value than any furniture of the past centuries.

Furniture manufacturers realize that the general trend of desire is for beauty of the home, therefore they have sought to create or recreate designs that will appeal to every class.

They have delved into the centuries of the past to resurrect ideas and designs that have gone down in history as the most beautiful of some particular age.

If the public were educated from infanthood in the principles of furniture manufacture they would quickly appreciate that with the quality and beauty that abounds in the furniture they purchase today there is tied up a vast amount of thought and labor which a few years ago never entered into furniture manufacture, they would more appreciate present day furniture values.

The slight increase in the cost of furniture to the public today is more than double in the cost of the production.

Home Writing Desks Prove Fascinating

The writing desk, office of the home where dad does much of his paper work and mother and the rest of the family pen their notes and letters, need not only be a useful piece of furniture but it may be attractive as well.

Some of the latest designs in writing desks are very smart. Made in walnut, mahogany and oak, sturdy flat-top desks smaller than the average office size look very chic in the home. They are low and their sharp lines are fascinating.

WOMEN STYLE CONSCIOUS NOW

By CLARENCE FALLER,

of Faller Bros. Furniture Co.

The Home Furnishings Style Shows being featured by the better stores over the entire country this week present unusual opportunities to the home maker interested in having the home furnished in good taste, good design, harmony of color and a feeling of restfulness.

Clarence Faller

Women today are more style and design conscious in home furnishings than ever before. Not every family can afford the services of a decorator, but every family can afford the time to attend the style shows and see how the well-furnished home should look.

All the latest designs in furniture and home furnishings will be displayed, much of it in model room settings and groupings so that visitors may visualize how the articles will look in their own homes. How to furnish the home smartly and correctly and yet economically will be shown. Numerous other special features have been planned that will make an afternoon or evening visit one that will be instructive as well as entertaining.

BACK TO HOME MOVEMENT IS WELL DEFINED

A H Burchfield Sees New Interest in Furnishings, Designs for Interiors

By A. H. BURCHFIELD,
Joseph Horne Company.

The Home Furnishing Style Show is a national movement to which we are very glad to lend our part. In recent years, the automobile has been an important factor in turning public thought away from the home to the outdoors. People in their first enthusiasm over this new-found wonder, were disposed to forget their homes and spend every possible minute outdoors traveling about from place to place. But the novelty has worn off; the automobile has become a conventional utility. The public is satiated with travel and the home is coming once again into its own as a place for relaxation, comfort, family life and the entertainment of friends.

A. H. Burchfield

The past few years have seen a great development of home building throughout the country. This is indicative of the homeward turn of public thought. These new houses are modern in every respect. They require a new type of furnishings compatible with present-day standards of living. The National Home Furnishing Style Show will serve to show the development and progress which modern life has brought to interior furnishings.

UNIVERSAL APPEAL

This great national home improvement movement has the approval and hearty indorsement of everybody concerned with the welfare of the country. Economists, statesmen, clergymen, teachers and other leaders of thought realize that a community is no greater than its homes. The home is the center of the family life and the family life is the gauge of the moral substance and permanence of city, state or nation.

Money invested in a home and home equipment pays permanent dividends in contentment, comfort and self-confidence. During the recent stock market boom, some of our customers put part of their profits into home improvements in the form of new furniture, carpets, draperies, linens, electric labor-saving equipment and the like. These fortunate folks have something concrete to show today for their prosperity.

Home improvements rank with life insurance and a savings bank account as a sound investment. After one has made reasonable provision for insurance and savings, he should turn his attention to making a suitable home for his family. Our homes deserve the best we can afford.

HOME INSTINCT

The National Home Furnishing Style Show is intended to set people thinking along these lines, and once public thought is aroused, action is sure to follow. The home instinct is fundamental in every normal man and woman and this nation-wide focusing of attention upon the home is certain to have the desired effect.

There are many things to be said for making home improvements at this time. First, prices are lower than for many years, and lower than they are likely to be a year hence. Reasonable expenditures for home furnishings at this time will contribute materially to restoring national prosperity. The fact that furniture and other larger items of home furnishings may be bought on monthly payments makes it easy to pay for these things out of income distributing the cost over a number of months while having the use and enjoyment of the articles. This method of purchasing is a general practice today. Many of our best customers avail themselves of our deferred payment plan.

STYLES ON DISPLAY

However, the Home Furnishing Style Show is not primarily planned to sell merchandise, but to show the many things which contribute to the completeness, beauty and comfort of the modern home. The home furnishing sections will be open several evenings during the show, solely for visiting and inspecting. No goods will be sold or orders taken. We want people to feel that they cannot do anything but look on these exhibition nights. Our entire staff of interior decorators, numbering some 30 highly experienced men, will be in attendance on these evenings to answer questions and offer any decorative advice and suggestions desired, without charge.

Styles Change in Icing Machines

Refrigerators are one of the most important items in household equipment and every home manager is interested in securing the one which she can depend on for economic and efficient performance.

The refrigerator has become an item of house furnishings which is employed the year around. Women depend on the refrigerator almost as much in winter as in summer for preserving the quality and delicate flavor as well as the health-giving properties of food.

Changes in style in refrigerators, as well as improvements in materials and construction, make it desirable to replace this article more often than was formerly thought necessary.

Color has been employed to make the refrigerator as attractive as it is useful and an item of real decorative value in the kitchen.

A COZY NOOK: THE ENSEMBLE IDEA

FIRM PIONEERS BEDDING STYLE

"Style is today a determining factor in the choice of bedding as much as in the selection of any other products that women demand."

T. F. Walter

So said T. F. Walter, vice president of A. J. Logan Company, manufacturers of Logan Sleep-Products. He added:

"Today women consider this point as vital as comfort when selecting bedding, and they are extremely critical of patterns and fabrics when buying mattresses."

It is interesting that A. J. Logan Company started manufacture of Logan products here in Pittsburgh in 1882. At that time straw, excelsior and husk were the materials that provided the none too comfortable filling for mattresses. As developments took the trend to cotton and then to felt hair, and finally the inner spring coil, as we know it today. This company pioneered the way until it is famous not only locally, but in the East Central states, and enjoys an enviable reputation for the quality of its merchandise.

Another fact of more than local interest is that despite the recent depression, this company has never reduced its forces or wage scales and has never engaged in price-cutting at the expense of quality.

Logan Sleep-Products, its makers claim, are sold by all reliable furniture and department stores and the company is so optimistic as to the immediate revival of business that it has substantially increased its advertising and sales promotion activities.

Black Glassware Gives Beauty Touch

Among the many beautiful things to be purchased in glassware are the plates, bowls, glasses and candlesticks in black glass. They give the table an unusually interesting appearance and contrast strikingly with the linen and the silver.

Public Shows Keener Sense In Modern Home

There are many factors that enter into the better furniture movement which is spreading throughout the country today. The most important is perhaps due to the unusual interest on the part of the public in the home beautiful and the things that go into the home.

Home ownership, too, is becoming greater each year. To own one's own home naturally results in a certain amount of pride. With this interest aroused the question of furnishing it becomes a vital one of importance.

Whether the home be one of grandeur or one more simple, the elements of desire that the home be furnished properly are the same.

OVERSTUFFED MADE BY HAND

The overstuffed living room furniture and occasional pieces of today are just as much custom tailor made as milady's dress or gowns.

The day of the massive overstuffed davenport and luxurious deep cushioned big wide arm chair has passed just as much as the long skirts and long hair of the ladies. The modern living room must conform to milady's costume and appearance. The slender graceful lines of this kind of furniture requires the same care in designing and construction as the most tailored custom made suit.

The early period legs of the furniture tend to add grace and beauty which in the past was unattainable. The materials of today are bright and entrancing and should harmonize with the surroundings where the pieces are to set.

Notwithstanding all these improvements in grace and beauty, comfort has not been sacrificed and on all sides you hear the expressions of delight from those who have furnished their homes with the modern furniture achievements.

WORLD STYLES SHOWN HERE

In an interview W. C. Barto, manager of Sears Roebuck & Co.'s furniture department, points out that little do the people of this great city realize that right here in their midst is centered one of the greatest furniture displays in the entire world. He said:

W. C. Barto

"If the people would in their travels visit the exhibitions of the various furniture dealers, they would to their surprise, find furniture of every description from every country and from almost every century. Today there is no specified standard of furniture design; the patterns are taken from early periods when the most beautiful of furniture designs were made, and they are rejuvenated and beautified by modern day designers until when ready for the market and the home the beauty has been enhanced a thousand fold.

"Never before in the history of the world has such artistic and serviceable furniture existed, and on top of this beauty is the fact that today every home lover in every strata of human existence may obtain this entrancing furniture at a price they can afford to pay. Visit your own stores in Pittsburgh and you will revel in the many beauties to be seen."

Window Draperies Brighten Bedrooms

Bedrooms, like living rooms, are much lighter in tone than they used to be. One of several reasons for this is lightness of window draperies today.

Then, of course, the attention paid to keeping the coloring of blankets and bedspreads—and even the mattress covers—gay and bright couldn't help but add to the light feeling of the bedroom.

COMFORT FIRST AIM OF BUYER

By ED. D. EICHENLAUB,
Pres., Eichenlaub's Furniture.

Having been identified with the furniture business for the last 30 years I have seen many changes in the character of this business and in the styles. The designs of today are almost perfection and it takes very little money to equip a well-selected and artistic home. Any person that leaves the furnishing of a home to a capable salesman will never regret it. Many a home has nice furniture but if left to the salesman he can improve on same and make it more homelike and comfortable. The first thing to take into consideration is "how much you can afford" and then by using good judgment a home can be made to be pleasant and liveable.

The second consideration is "reliability." This one word embraces a multitude of interpretations and no one should consider buying a stick of furniture unless he has "reliability" in mind. This means buying of a well-known and reliable firm.

One other thing has been on my mind for many years, and that is "good bedding." The public at large is not educated to buying good springs and mattresses—the one thing you buy for your individual self. Anyone visiting your home does not see them but you yourself use them, then why cheat yourself? Whatever you do, be sure to buy a good spring and mattress, and have real comfort and refreshing sleep.

Styles in Furniture Have Been Modified

Furniture styles, while showing a marked early American influence, are modified by present-day designers to meet the needs of home owners whose space is limited and whose love of comfort is, perhaps, somewhat greater than that of our Pilgrim forefathers.

While necessarily discarding many features that make the genuine antiques objects of admiration mixed with discomfort, the furniture designer of today incorporates with modern luxury the beauty of line and the rich tones of colorful wood that mark Colonial furniture at its best.

The lines of a Duncan Phyffe table, a ladder-back chair are faithfully reproduced. The wing-chair and the rocker [illegible] softened becomingly and luxuriously upholstered, lose none of the beauty of their [illegible] and gain tremendously in [illegible].

Beauty and Comfort Sought in Home Now

People are seeking beauty and comfort and [illegible] in the home furnishings rather than strictly conforming to any one period or style, according to Pittsburgh furniture dealers.

Color is gaining in favor, especially [illegible] odd pieces of furniture. Almost all upholstered chairs [illegible] damask [illegible] a [illegible] and the [illegible] nishing accessories often either [illegible] complement such color [illegible].

FINE FURNITURE NOT EXPENSIVE

By NATHANIEL SPEAR

Alert fashion-wise the American furniture industry has swung back to better quality. The pendulum of time has brought back finer skilled workmanship, better materials, higher accomplishments and a greater excellence of character. Furniture has reached the ultimate in a higher conception of living.

Nathaniel Spear

Today's home is a place to live. And even the most modest income can well afford to buy the quality furniture that is being marketed in this 1930 manner.

For good furniture is no longer expensive and styles are created to harmonize with every type of home—large, medium or small.

You will not fail to notice this new change when you've seen and admired the many new grouping and inspiring displays of quality furniture now being shown.

You'll see interesting furniture as you have never seen it before. You'll see style-right furniture priced to fit your income . . . beautiful furniture that will make or re-make your home today.

BEAUTY BUILT IN GAS RANGES

The Dunlap Stove Stores, 124 Sixth street and 610[illegible] Penn avenue, are presenting the new idea in modern gas ranges.

All through your home your furniture and accessories are constructed to meet requirements of today's way of living.

During the last decade household appliances have been improved to lessen labor and add to home conveniences and beautification.

This new idea is found in the new table top or buffet range which conceals all working parts when not in use.

The [illegible] top serves a twofold purpose, that of concealing the burners from view, also acting as a table, making it ideal from the standpoint of convenience and efficiency. Its finish of porcelain and easy to keep clean, adding a genuine touch of beauty to an otherwise drab kitchen.

Bright Colors in Bridge Sets Liked

The pleasure of an informal evening of bridge may be more than doubled by playing at one of the bright-colored attractively decorated card tables. The gay colors add a festive note to the occasion which makes the game much more than just a game of cards.

These decorative sets are seen in all the colors with red, blue, black and green in the lead for popularity. Some of the tables are of plain color while others are ornamented with unusual designs and figures.

PRICES LOWEST FOR 25 YEARS

By L. A. BEHR,
President the Rosenbaum Co.

The furniture market today offers the greatest buying opportunities in 25 years which in our opinion is the "low" on well-built dependable furniture.

L. A. Behr

It is only logical to suppose that in the near future the recently "depressed" furniture prices will take an upward trend. New supplies of raw materials and labor will naturally react on the present low prices which have been based on a very close margin over the actual cost of production.

In the meantime we have this Home Furnishings Style Show with its splendid opportunities for studying the modes in home furnishing and decoration, and accenting graphically just what we mean when we say that really good furniture has not been so low priced for over a quarter of a century.

Furniture from the best sources, good reliable furniture of the finest craftsmanship and smartest styling has been purchased at prices which, in our judgment, had reached rock bottom.

That is what the Style Show presents to those who visit the Rosenbaum store . . . not only low prices, but desirable furniture from every point of consideration, a variety that will meet every need of smart furniture. The furniture floor has been rearranged; over 25 interesting room settings are displayed. Stocks include oak which has returned to new favor, adaptations in walnut and mahogany, period pieces of authenticity and a host of incidental pieces that enter so largely into the 1930 picture of home.

Other departments are entering into this occasion with displays of modern furnishings which will delight the homemaker . . . Lamps, Draperies, China, Glass, Kitchen Wares.

ART IMPORTANT IN HOME PLANS

Art is becoming more and more important in the furnishing of the home, as is evidenced by the emphasis placed on beauty in the home by Pittsburgh furniture dealers.

The time when just any piece of furniture would do has passed. Mrs. Average American is demanding that her home be beautiful and she is anxious to learn how to make it so. She has learned that it is not use that makes furnishings valuable but rather appearance and comfort. She wants her home to be in style just as she wants her car and her wardrobe to be the very best and the very latest she can buy.

Never before in the history of the home furnishings industry has there been a concentrated and intelligent effort to supply the home maker with an opportunity to see the latest home furnishings correctly and attractively displayed.

Never before have many home makers had at hand anyone with whom they could consult about their particular furnishing and decorating problems. They now have at their disposal expert advice and suggestions from men who have been trained to solve all the problems in connection with furnishing the home.

The [illegible] into the home of beauty and comfort does not depend on price. It depends on taste in selecting items which make up the furnishings.

EAST LIBERTY STORE LEASED

The Hurley Machine Company of Chicago, manufacturers of the Thor line of washers and ironers has leased from the Enright Theater the storeroom at 5810 Penn avenue, East Liberty, in which it will open its second Thor electric shop.

R. S. Rewbridge

Since its opening in April the downtown store located at 128-130 Stanwix street has enjoyed a remarkable business and to better serve the East End section prompted the decision to locate another modern electrical appliance store in East Liberty.

The Hurley Machine Company is one of the largest and oldest manufacturers of electric washing and ironing machines in the business. It maintains, beside these two shops, a complete service department.

Ray S. Rewbridge, formerly sales supervisor at the downtown Thor shop, will manage the new East Liberty store. Mr. Rewbridge has had many years experience in supplying domestic laundry equipment to the homes. He was located in the Beaver Valley prior to his connection in Pittsburgh.

Bed Lamp Aids Child Overcome Fear of Night

A small bed lamp should be fastened to the head of the child's bed or a floor lamp or bedside lamp placed near it.

The youngster may be then allowed to pull the chain and extinguish the light.

Many children who have had "dark-room complexes" have been helped to overcome them by a thoughtful mother who let them turn out the lights for themselves.

The bulb may be a small one and the light so shaded that it does not shine in the sensitive young eyes.

Beauty and Quality Replace Ornaments

Furniture designs seen at the recent summer markets and now on sale in early fall show less tendency toward the startling and over-ornamented and incline more to simplicity. The unusual is no longer sought after just because it is unusual. Usefulness and beauty are the two things for which designers of the latest furniture have striven.

The tendency towards less ornamentation abandoning the bizarre and freakish has been in progress for several months, but manufacturers first adopted the idea generally in offering their 1930 fall products.

SUCCESS SEEN IN STYLE SHOW

By ARTHUR C. KAUFMANN,
Vice President, McCreery

To me National Home Furnishing Style Week has not the slightest commercial aspect or interest. It is something of far greater significance than the mere selling of more home furnishings.

A. C. Kaufmann.

It impresses me that "home consciousness" such as this week hopes to arouse in the minds of the public has something to do with the fundamental happiness and cultural well-being of this generation and the future one.

Science tells us that heredity and environment are the two outstanding factors in our lives.

Should we not then give more consideration to the environment in which we are living and forcing our children to live?

We are inspired with the hope that "Home Furnishing Style Week" may prove to be a success far out-reaching the hopes of its sponsors because it so deeply affects the well-being of countless thousands of families and the social structure of the country, all of which revolves around the home.

JAMES Q. and Mrs. Tumwater have gone crazy about gambling, and half the night they are in the Sporting Club in Monte. Mrs. T. says that it is the place to meet the elite of the world informally. She has met dukes and duchesses and princelings galore, and they all borrow money from her to play baccarat. But she is a glutton for punishment. James Q. cleaned up 80,000 francs at roulette and was in fine fettle, even though that is not cigarette money for him. He has started a "romance" with a singer at the Casino Opera House, who says she is a Russian countess. Maybe. But wait until Mrs. Tumwater spots them.

JAMES Q. got talking to a monocled Englishman the other day, and I hear he gave him a marvelous tip on Wall Street. Anyway, the Englishman made a clean-up, and it turns out he is the Duke of Nocastle. Mrs. T. got wise to James Q.'s intrigue with the singing countess, but he squared himself by taking Mrs. T. down to the Casino de Paris and nonchalantly saying: "Mrs. Tumwater, meet my old friend, the Dook!" Mrs. Tumwater beamed all over, but the Duke kept most of his

After we spread out the luncheon we were suddenly surrounded by a lot of strange gypsy men and women. They began singing and dancing for us, but after Miss Vera had given them some of our wine and Miss Doris had opened her bag and they saw how much money she had, they began making themselves objectionable.

WE knew then that they must be bandits, and we got frightened and began to scream. Just then a plane appeared overhead, swooped down and landed on our picnic grounds. Prince Floretto slipped out, pulled out a revolver, scattered the gypsy bandits, and Miss Vera fainted in his arms.

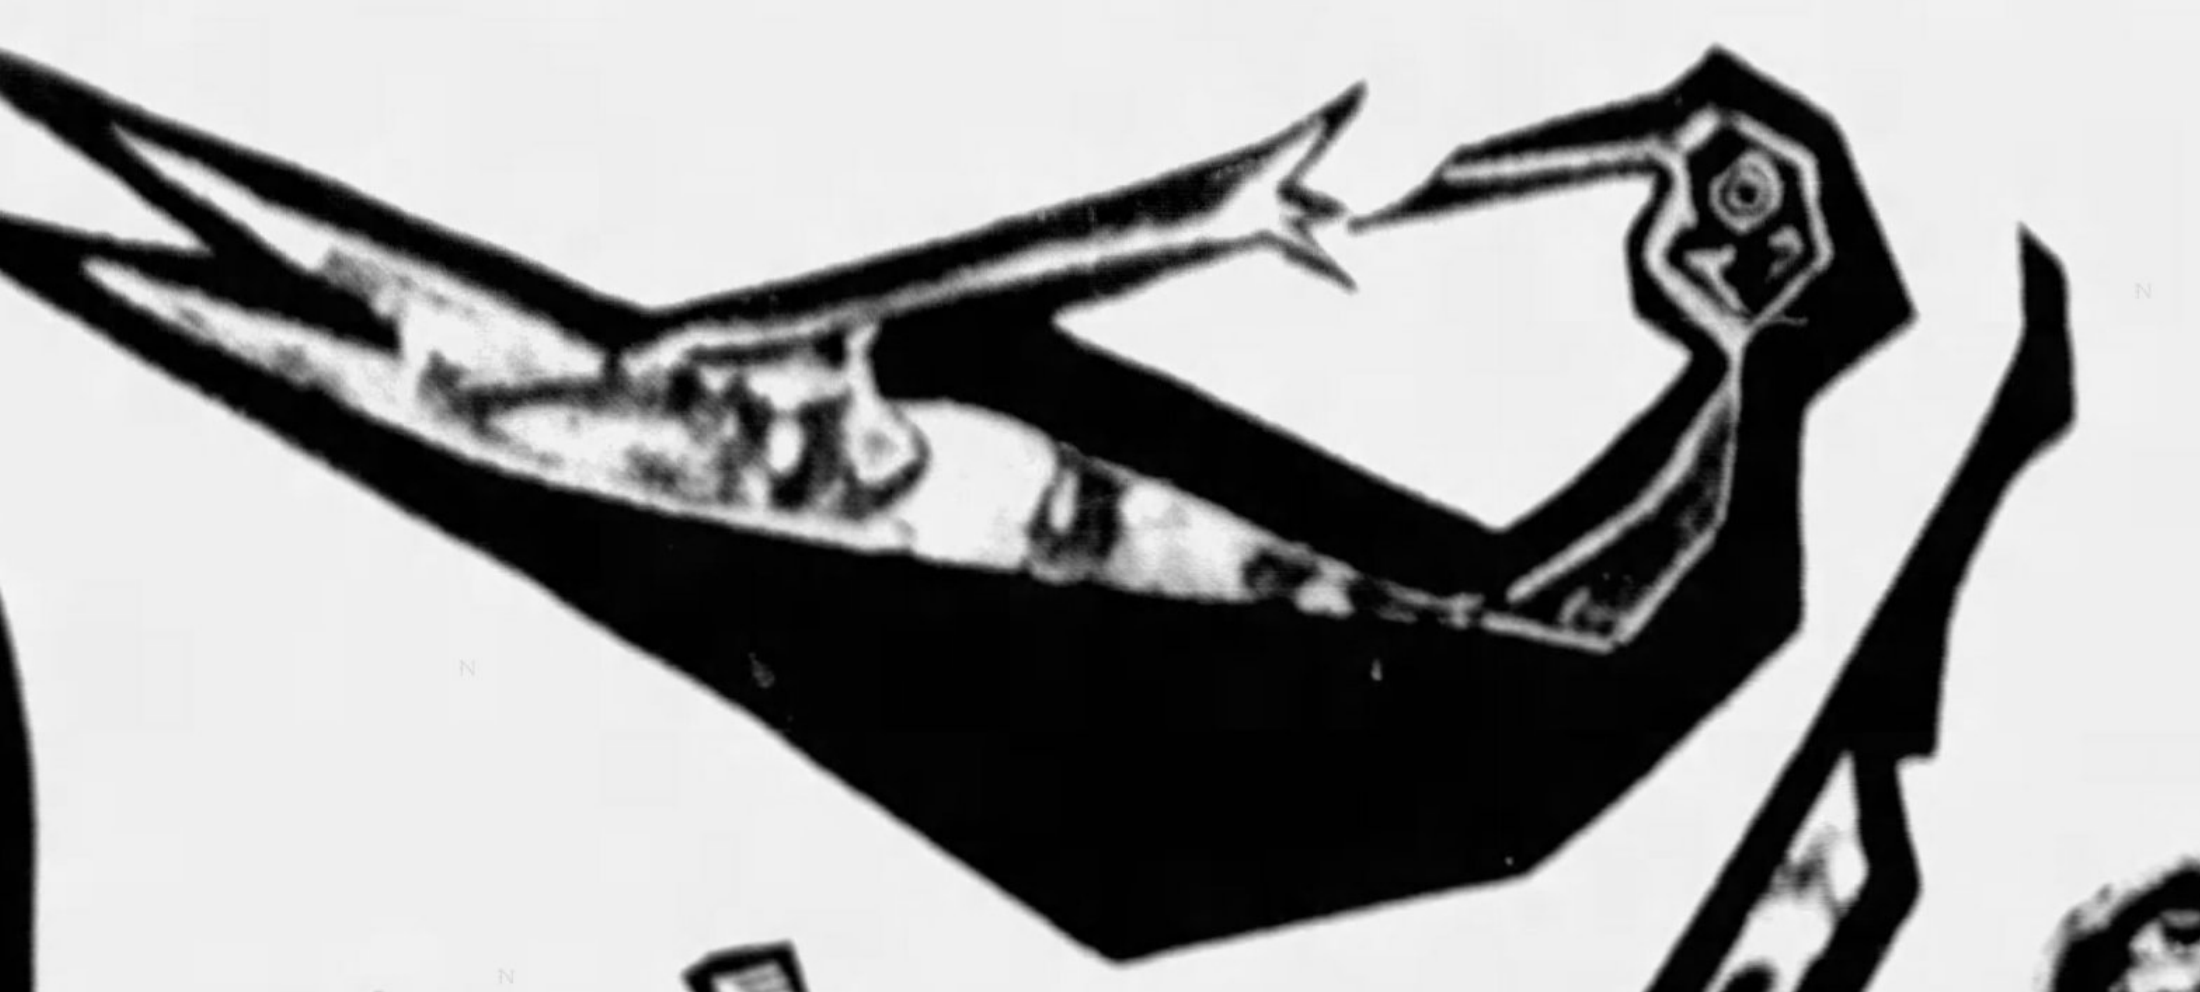
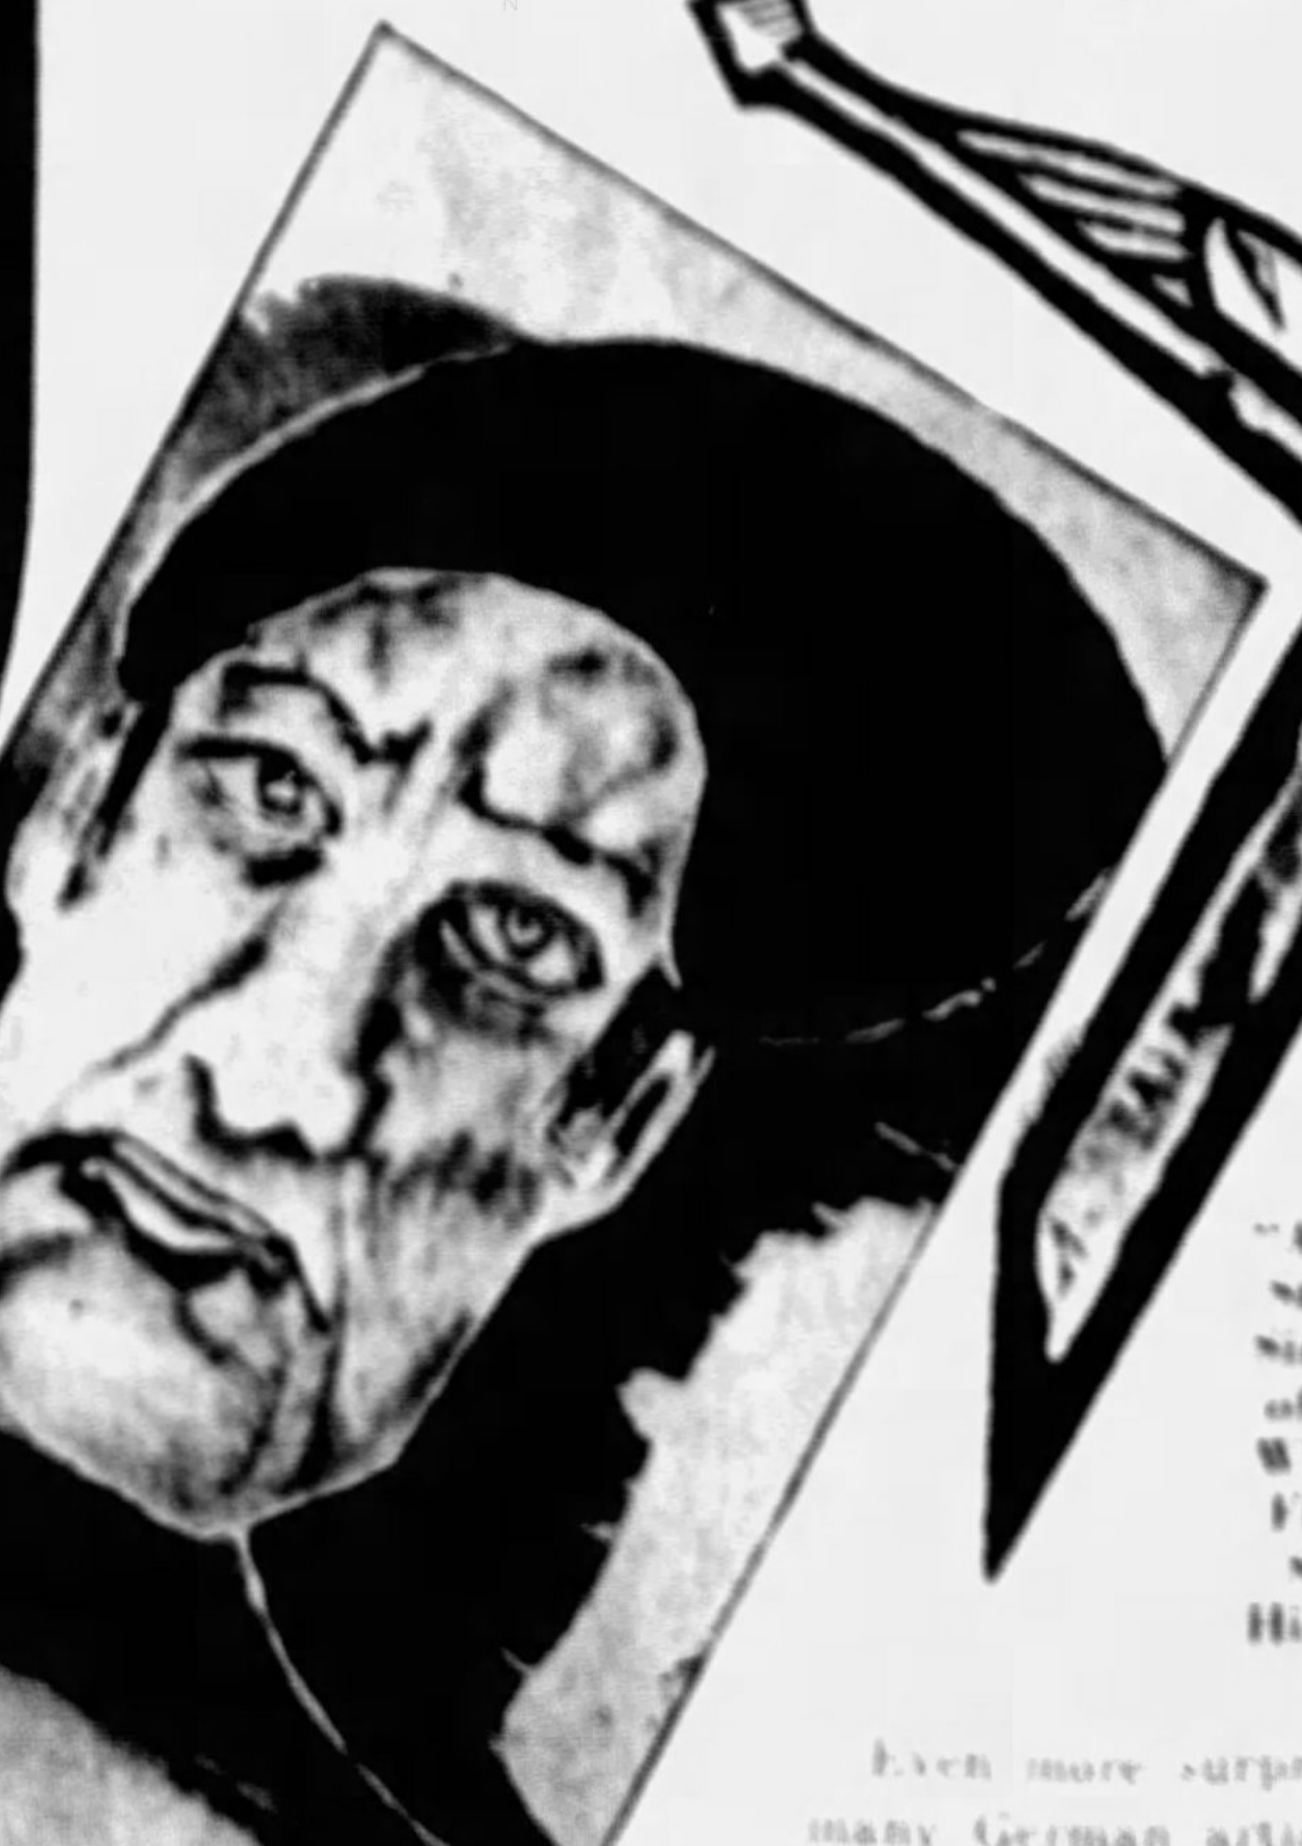
"Second Childhood Art" of India's Famous Poet

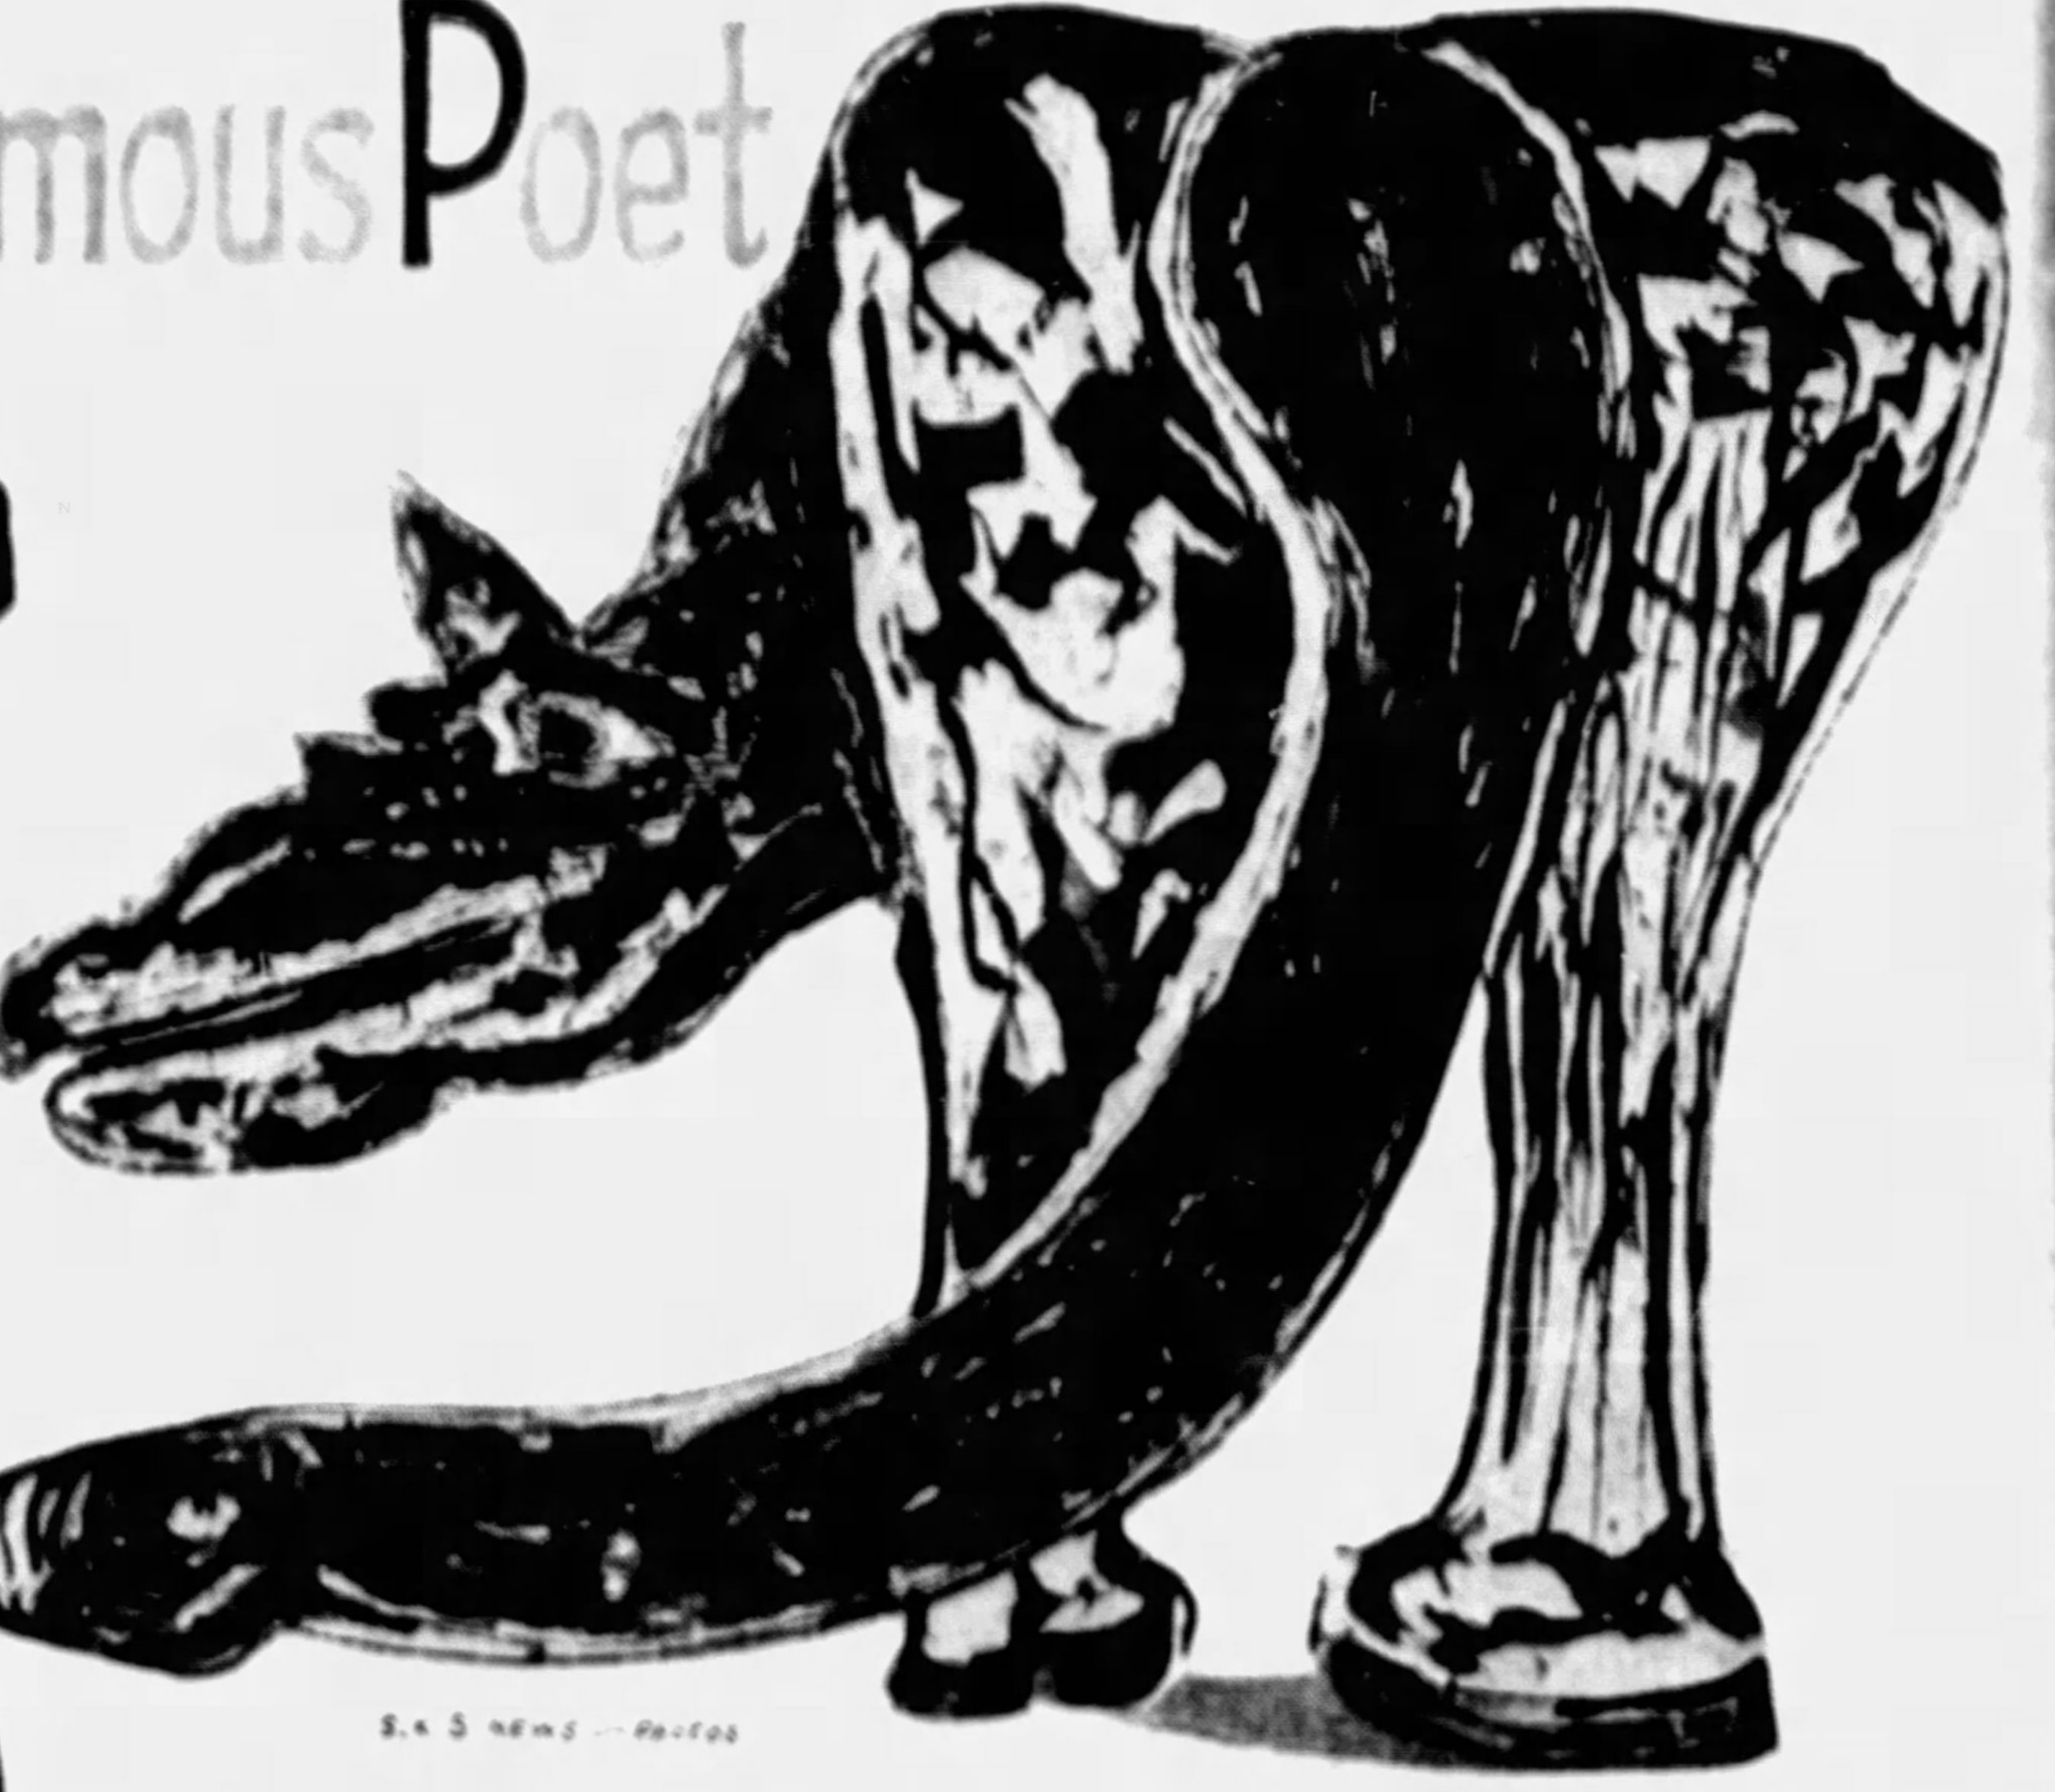
Sir Rabindranath Tagore, India's Most Famous Idealist and Poet, Who Has Turned to a Weird Form of Art in His Old Age.



"An Interesting Bird Study," Weird and Sinister Impressions of Flying Creatures Which Have Caused Friends of the Poet Some Anxiety for His Mental Outlook.



"Portrait Study," by Tagore, Which Strangely Resembles a Paris Apache.



S. & S. NEWS — PHOTOS

"Animal Study," a Monstrous Creation Which Leads Many Critics to Believe That the Aged Poet Has Gone Back to His Second Childhood.

WHEREVER Rabindranath Tagore, India's most celebrated poet-idealist, goes he is accorded the honor paid to a world famous literary figure. Because he has interpreted for the world the tragic beauty in the heart of "Mother India," as his native country is sometimes called, more clearly and more interestingly than anyone else, not excluding Rudyard Kipling, his utterances are always news and his wrinkled face with its pair of brooding brown eyes and snow white beard is an inevitable target for the cameras of the press and the movies.

A few weeks ago, Tagore alighted from a train in Berlin to discuss in his patient, subdued voice, some of the problems now facing his countrymen. In the station and all the way to his hotel he was the center of a curious crowd, including many reporters eager to get his views of the age-old and still festering Indian problem.

Newspaper readers were more or less prepared for the many stories revealing the 70-year-old sage's views of his country's tangled political, social and economic affairs, but they were taken entirely by surprise when they learned that Tagore had taken up painting in his declining years and planned to exhibit some of his canvases in one of Berlin's finest art galleries.

Even more surprised were the many German artists and sculptors who flocked to study the paintings of a man who has heretofore confined himself to the writing of poems, plays, novels and philosophic essays and to lecturing on the many topics within the group of his facile mind.

These artists did not tell the old poet to his face that he would do well to confine himself to writing and lecturing and that his canvases were to them juvenile and meaningless. But they said such frank words for publication in newspapers and magazines, and even intimated that the truly great idealist is in his second childhood, artistically speaking.

They had tried, they said, to find in the Tagore exhibition some artistic or esthetic merit. Failing to classify the strange forms of men, birds and animals as formal art, they applied the rather involved tests by which the professional artist presumes to tell the rest of the world whether works of art are modernistic, impressionistic, symbolistic or some other brand ending in "istic." And, even after a long talk with the justly famous litterateur, they were unable to pigeon-hole his pictures in any of the many "schools" of art extant and rampant at the moment.

One German painter, known all over Europe and America for his extremely liberal views in matters of art, stated bluntly that the Tagore canvases were nothing more important than the scribbling of an aged man who, though he may be a master with words, has nothing to give the world with the pen and brush. "Childistic" was the word he applied to describe the exhibition.

Particularly juvenile to the critical artists were the three paintings reproduced on this page. The one titled "Animal Study" is, perhaps, the least understandable and juvenile of all. The artists could discover nothing in it except a monster which could not possibly exist in real life and which seemed to have no meaning as a figment of the imagination. Broad-hipped, it has the legs of an elephant, the head of some prehistoric monster and a ponderous tail the like of which no animal, extinct or living, ever carried around.

The canvas called "Interesting Bird Study" is quite as imaginative and meaningless, if the judgment of the artists can be trusted. This picture is made up of three figures, two of which are shown above. One of the figures apparently represents a crow-like creature in flight and the other looks like nothing so much as another crow which recently has passed from the land of the living.

The Indian poet's one attempt at portraiture, although it is less weird and unnatural than his pictures of birds and beasts, drew no words of commendation from the critics, one of whom is to have remarked that his six-year-old son could do a better job with the brush.

Tagore, maintaining his invariably calm mien, read many of the unfavorable opinions of his abilities as an artist. Not even the most outspoken of these opinions moved him to make anything like an angry or indignant retort. His only comment on the cool reception given his canvases was, reception given his canvases was, opinion and to a frank, unfettered expression of that opinion. It is important that men in all walks of life should be candid about things as they see them."

In India, Tagore's plunge into the field of painting is accepted as another important form of expression on the part of one of the world's genuinely great thinkers. Few of the admirers of the philosopher-poet presume to understand the paintings, but they regard them as symbolic expressions of thoughts which will some day take on more than ordinary importance when they have been intelligently deciphered.

New Jersey's Gingerbread Palace

EVER since F. H. Bennett, a wealthy New York manufacturer, saw the gingerbread house in the second act of the opera "Hansel and Gretel" he had wanted to build such a fairyland dwelling in which real boys and girls could absorb the rarified and inspiring atmosphere of what the writers of some tales for youngsters call "Never-never Land."

And, not long ago, he threw open the door of such a house which he had built on his estate near Hamburg, New Jersey. The fantastic building was designed by Joseph Urban, famous American architect, and is fashioned chiefly of poured concrete. The skill of a corps of experienced builders is embodied in the curious structure which took more than two years to erect and furnish.

Mr. Bennett had the gingerbread house built not for his own amusement—although he enjoys visiting the place as much as anyone—but for children of all ages, who are free to consider it their own. In external appearance the house is everything that a dwelling out of fairyland could be. It is painted in many different colors and its roof looks exactly like the icing of a huge cake studded with sugar hearts.

The inside of the house is even more amazingly imaginative than the outside for it is peopled by models of many famous characters familiar to every child whose mother has thrilled him, or her, with the story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears, the even more popular tale of Red Riding Hood and other pretty legends spun by the fertile imaginations of Aesop and Grimm.

Mlle. Ina Elben, Who Has Been Awarded First Prize in a Vienna Competition for the Most Shapely Legs in "The City of Beautiful Women."

Most Shapely Legs in Vienna?

UNDOUBTEDLY Mlle. Ina Elben has beautiful legs. Officially she has the shapeliest legs in Vienna, world famous as the City of Beautiful Women, but there are "doubting Thomases" who, while admiring the rare moulding of the mademoiselle's nether limbs, are not convinced that the metropolis doesn't boast an even prettier pair.

Even the judges who recently awarded Mlle. Elben a gold medal for possessing the nicest legs of any woman who entered the extremely interesting competition are not sure that they bestowed the token on the proper person, because only a handful of entrants was sufficiently interested in the prize to participate in the event.

Even the newspapers of the city, while warmly congratulating the winner and eulogizing her far from ordinary underpinning, made mention of the fact that Vienna is rife with comely legs and that all too few of these legs were paraded before the appraising eyes of the committee of judges.

Mlle. Elben, not at all perturbed by the doubt cast upon her title, is wearing the small, shining medal of victory on one of her garters. It is possible, she admits, that somewhere in the City of Beautiful Women there may be a nicer set of pedal extremities than hers, but they have yet to be acclaimed.

The Devil's Trail in England

SATAN, fabulous being though he is to millions of people, was no myth to the Britons of other days, for his trail through the British Isles is plainly, permanently blazed by scores of landmarks—pits, hills, caves and pools he is supposed to have created or visited in person.

At Haslemere, Surrey, there's a deep depression in the ground called the Devil's Punch Bowl and in Pembrokeshire is a similar depression known by the same name. The conical hills of Thursley are the Devil's Jumps, because he is said to have leaped from one to another.

On the other side of England are two Devil's Dens, one at Caterham and the other at Lingfield. His Satanic Majesty is reputed to have occupied both caverns in the dim past. At Godstone, the Devil's Pool is a popular spot for tourists.

In Wales, mountain climbers try annually to scale the steep sides of a great pit called the Devil's Kitchen.

Found $30,000 in His Rose Garden

ARTIS C. SCHWANK, German-born resident of Cape Girardeau, Mo., is a cement worker by vocation, and a grower of roses by avocation. When he is not busy at his trade he's puttering about his rose gardens, which are among the finest in the country.

Next to his little four-room house is a plot of fertile ground, which is a part of the Bryce estate, last occupied by Fann Bryce, a young woman who was supposed to have hidden much of the fortune she inherited from her father somewhere in the soil of the estate. She was murdered by a man who tried to wrest her secret from her, and her body was thrown down a well. Her tragic death made a legend of the supposed hidden fortune, for which many people have, under cover of darkness, dug in vain.

Mr. Schwank had, of course, heard the story of the hidden fortune, but he looked upon it as a myth. He rented a plot of ground next his home and laid out a rose garden.

While he was plunging his spade in this corner of his rented plot Mr. Schwank struck what at first seemed to him a rusted metal plate.

The "plate" turned out to be a tin box, and when he pried open the cover of the box and found himself gazing at thick sheafs of yellow-backed bills, he grew as excited as any man would have under the circumstances.

Forgetting rose gardening entirely, he ran to his house and emptied the contents of the box. When he had finished counting the bills, scattered among which were a few old Spanish coins, he found that the luckless daughter of the Bryce family had, in fact, buried a fortune of $30,000.

Miss Fann Bryce, of Cape Girardeau, Who Was Murdered for Her Hoard of Money, Which the Killer Didn't Get Because It Was Buried Near Her House. Amounting to $30,000, It Was Recently Found by A. C. Schwank While Digging in His Rose Garden.

Prince Ibrahim Picks Another American Beauty for a "Bride"

Down Goes Poor Pearl Ginsberg of the Bronx, and Up Comes Miss Vera King, Once of the "Follies," on the Uneasy Seasaw of His Fickle Mohammedan Affections

Prince Ibrahim in a Cozy Pose With Vera on the Eve of His Sailing Back to Europe.

(Below) Princess Pearl Ginsberg Ibrahim Just Before the Fickle Prince Took Her Out of the Movies.

Mrs. Morris T. Lederer, Formerly Miss Vera King, of the "Follies," Who, as Prince Ibrahim's Newest Wife, Will Relegate Princess Pearl, His First American Wife, to the Position of Second Wife—and Prince Ibrahim Can Still Marry Two More American Girls Without Divorcing the First Two.

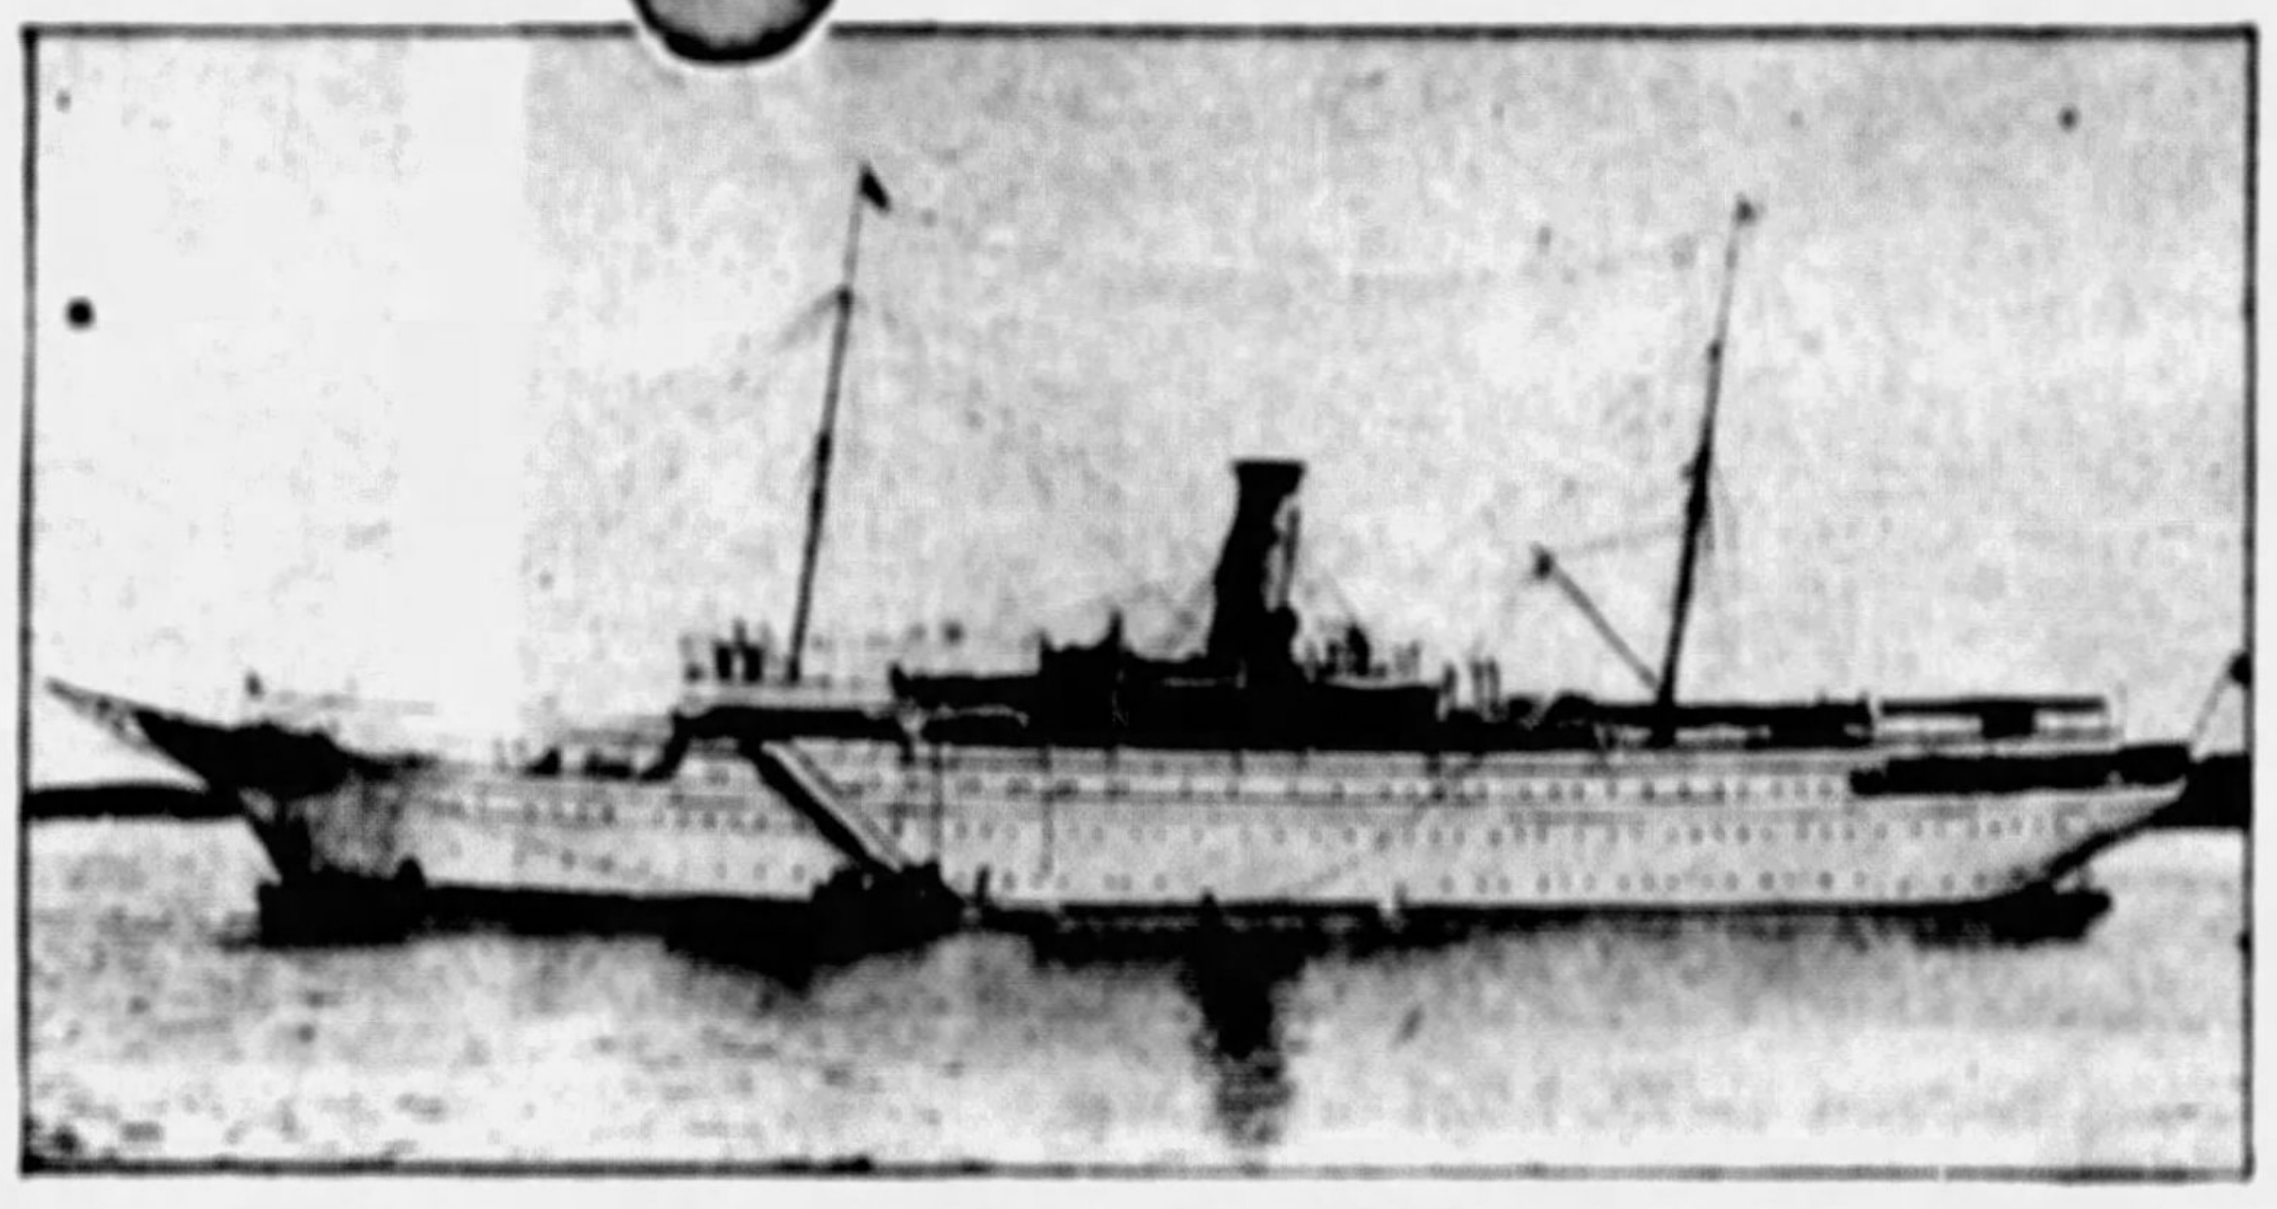
"ALLAH is great and Mohammed is His prophet!" Also, the Koran is great, for it permits a good Mohammedan to enjoy four wives at a time, if he can afford them.

This makes it possible for Prince Mohammed Ali Ibrahim, who is a good and wealthy one and may some day sit on Egypt's throne, to collect a new American wife every time he comes to New York, until he has four.

That fills his matrimonial quota, but if he wants still another he can always divorce one of the four. This is conveniently easy, for all he has to do is tell her three times publicly that she is divorced—and she is. Life is simple in a well-regulated Mohammedan household.

Not long ago Miss Pearl Ginsberg, of the Bronx, whose father was running a small fur shop in New York, startled society by marrying this sure-enough Royal Highness, who, Allah being willing, may sometime be the Khedive of Egypt.

As Princess Pearl she had a small palace of her own in Paris at No. 75 of the fashionable Avenue du Bois de Boulogne. No Mohammedan, unless forced by economy, lives under the same roof with any of his wives. This prevents them from asking, "When did you get home last night?"



The Prince's Beautiful Yacht "Meteor," in Which He Goes Honeymooning With His American Brides.

Besides this, she had a flock of fourteen automobiles, ropes of pearls, quarts of other jewels, the right to a cruise in the "Meteor," her husband's famous yacht that was once owned by the former German Kaiser, and the homage which Paris always renders to anyone with the title of "Princess."

Not living in the same house, the Prince did not mind having a mother-in-law around, so Papa and Mama Ginsberg turned the little shop over to Pearl's brother, Harold, and went to enjoy some of their daughter's prosperity. Her sister, Florens, came, too, and was about to announce her engagement to a Paris millionaire when just as everything was so lovely came bad news.

The Paris papers reported that "Prince Ibby," who was in New York, had just become engaged to marry Miss Vera King, former "Follies" beauty, next January when her divorce from Morris T. Lederer, president of the Lederer Iron and Steel Co. of Cleveland, falls due.

That would have been the cue for an ordinary wife to start divorce proceedings, naming the next one as co-respondent and asking a few millions in alimony—but not for Pearl. As a dutiful Mohammedan spouse it was her place to send her husband a nice telegram of congratulations and good wishes for many happy returns of the day. If she forgot that bit of etiquette her Moslem husband would be justified in speaking those fatal words thrice.

This may have gone against the grain a little, but still sadder is the news from Paris that on his return he has also reduced her allowance.

However, La Ginsberg, as she is also called in Paris, is not weeping much. She has absorbed some of the fatalism that goes with Moslem households and knew that this thing would happen sometime. Even if the Prince, who has about $700,000 a year to spend and spends it all, should further economize by divorcing her, she can look back on her few months of married life as very profitable. She has a big fortune in jewelry, many times more than any of her former playmates who married ordinary business and professional men could win from alimony, enough to keep her in luxury the rest of her life.

This Winter, as she reads that the "Meteor" has dropped anchor at Monte Carlo or is sailing up the Nile as it did on her honeymoon, she will wonder if their husband is saying and doing the same things at those places. Pearl will not be there to see because even a Mohammedan thinks one wife is plenty for a honeymoon.

It is not to Pearl's advantage to be divorced, and for equally practical reasons it is to her advantage that Vera should remain the Prince's favorite as long as possible. As soon as Vera loses favor, their mutual husband is almost certain to marry again, which would reduce Pearl's rank to third wife or even divorcee.

Therefore Pearl may be expected, at the earliest opportunity, to give her successful rival the benefit of all she has learned in the art of pleasing His Royal Highness. With this arrangement the Mohammedan usually finds it as easy to keep four wives on their good behavior as the unbeliever to keep his one. What the present wife hopes is that her Prince will not exercise his right to make both wives live under the same roof.

"I am afraid," she says, "that might get my goat."

The Mohammedan's privilege of divorce without alimony by merely saying so is not quite as harsh as it sounds. In the first place, he must give back his divorced wife's dowry. In the case of the shop-keeper's daughter there is none to return, but he cannot take back any of his gifts either, and these represent a fortune.

"It must be Kismet" (fate), said the deposed Pearl when she read that C. F. Zittel, the very man who had introduced her to the Prince, had performed the same service for the person who is now to outrank her. Prince "Ibby" and his friend Selim Bey, who is also a beauty connoisseur, were being conducted by Mr. Zittel on a pleasure tour of New York's night life, which led them to a fashionable road house. To that same road house had also come the ex-"Follies" beauty, Vera King, who had on her mind the problem of rearranging her life after the coming divorce from Mr. Lederer, the Cleveland steel magnate. Vera was there to call on her old friend, Florence Richardson, leader of the Hollywood feminine orchestra.

Princess Pearl, From Her Newest Photograph Taken Before She Learned She Had Become Wife No. 2 in the Ibrahim Household

Miss King's watchful eye noted that the dark, heavy man at a neighboring table was staring fixedly at her, but she was not offended. After a while the big, dark man remarked that he would like to meet the lady. "Zit" turned around.

"I can fix that, Your Royal Highness," said he.

He fixed it.

For the next two weeks the Prince and Vera were together almost constantly, and the Khedive's heir made a deep impression, as he usually does. His Royal Highness has his tailor line the pockets of all his coats with chamois, because it is his habit to go about with a handful or two of diamonds, rubies, emeralds and pearls, set in various ways, all loose in his pockets.

"Ibby" has a loveable habit when he is talking with a pretty lady of reaching into his capacious bosom and handing her one of those trinkets. He even keeps on doing it after he is married. Night-life ladies know this nice trait of Prince Ibriham, just as children learn that certain kindly persons carry candy in their pockets for them.

The Prince's friend, Selim Bey, meanwhile thought he had fallen in love with Eileen Wenzell, a chorus girl. Selim does not go in much for jewelry, but he showered Eileen with forty-dollar bottles of perfume, electric phonographs and other nice things for a girl to have. Yet, after all that expense, when he and the Prince were ready to return to Europe, Selim suddenly found that it was Betty Blythe, the film actress, he really and truly loved. Therefore it was not Eileen but Betty who dined with the Prince, the Bey and Vera at the Savoy Plaza before the two Orientals took the boat back to Paris.

Prince "Ibby" also has sudden changes of the heart, as Pearl remembers from the first day she met him. Before they had been acquainted five minutes she had heard him telephone the late Mabel Normand, picture star, and Mabel Withee, stage star of "Artists and Models," to inform them that circumstances beyond his control made it impossible to keep the dinner dates with them. Those "circumstances" were Miss Ginsberg, but he now has her quite well under control.

This scene occurred in the office of the Central Park Casino. Pearl was there, not to eat in such an extravagant place, but to ask her brother, Harold, who worked there, where she could find a stenographer's job, since nobody seemed to want her any more in the films. Harold could not answer that question and the Prince soon made it of no importance.

He had burst into the inner sanctum as if he owned the Casino, but instead of being thrown out for his boldness, he received the glad hand from the proprietor who called him, "Your Royal Highness."

At these words Pearl stared, for she had never seen a "Highness" before. He also stared because, apparently, he had never before seen a red-haired girl quite like Pearl and they were introduced. After a few moments conversation, the Prince grabbed the nearest telephone, got the two Mabels off his list and invited Pearl to take their place—in fact to take the places of all the girls he loved. Like most picture actresses Pearl owned a book on etiquette and had read that it is bad form to decline invitations from the heir to a throne, so she accepted.

No sooner had they sat down at the Ritz that evening than her host began reaching into his pockets and pushing glittering things across the table. He did this every time there was a pause in the conversation, but Pearl, to his amazement, passed them all back. It was the first time he ever got anything back in his royal lifetime. Pearl explained that she was not a gold digger, and that her mother would not let her accept presents from any man unless they were engaged.

This phenomenon so impressed Prince Ibrahim that he felt he ought to get permanent possession of such an incredible girl, with gold in her hair and in her heart instead of in an itching palm. Before long he called at the Ginsberg flat in the Bronx to formally ask the parents' consent to their daughter's heart and hand in matrimony. Mr. Ginsberg had never seen a prince in the flesh and doubted if this one was genuine, but consented because, as he expressed it:

"What's the use? Girls, these days, do as they please anyhow."

Knowing of Pearl's good fortune, perhaps Vera may have also handed back the royal jewelry and perhaps not. Anyway, she has the royal promise that he will come for his bride about New Year's Day. Then, of course, there ought to be at least as splendid a cruise on the "Meteor," at least as expensive a palace in Paris, at least fourteen cars and all the other perquisites that go with being the Prince's official Princess. If so, she will not be the least bit jealous of Pearl. In fact, the wives expect to be the best of friends. They had better be, or His Royal Highness may be moved some day to draw a long breath and shout at both of them some bad news—three times.

Mr. Lederer could say those same words in Cleveland, but they would not do him any good. They must be spoken for him by a judge, who, at the same time, will say how much alimony it will cost him. And that part of it won't do him any good either.

Pretty Mannequins at Last in Modernized Japan

T[illegible]

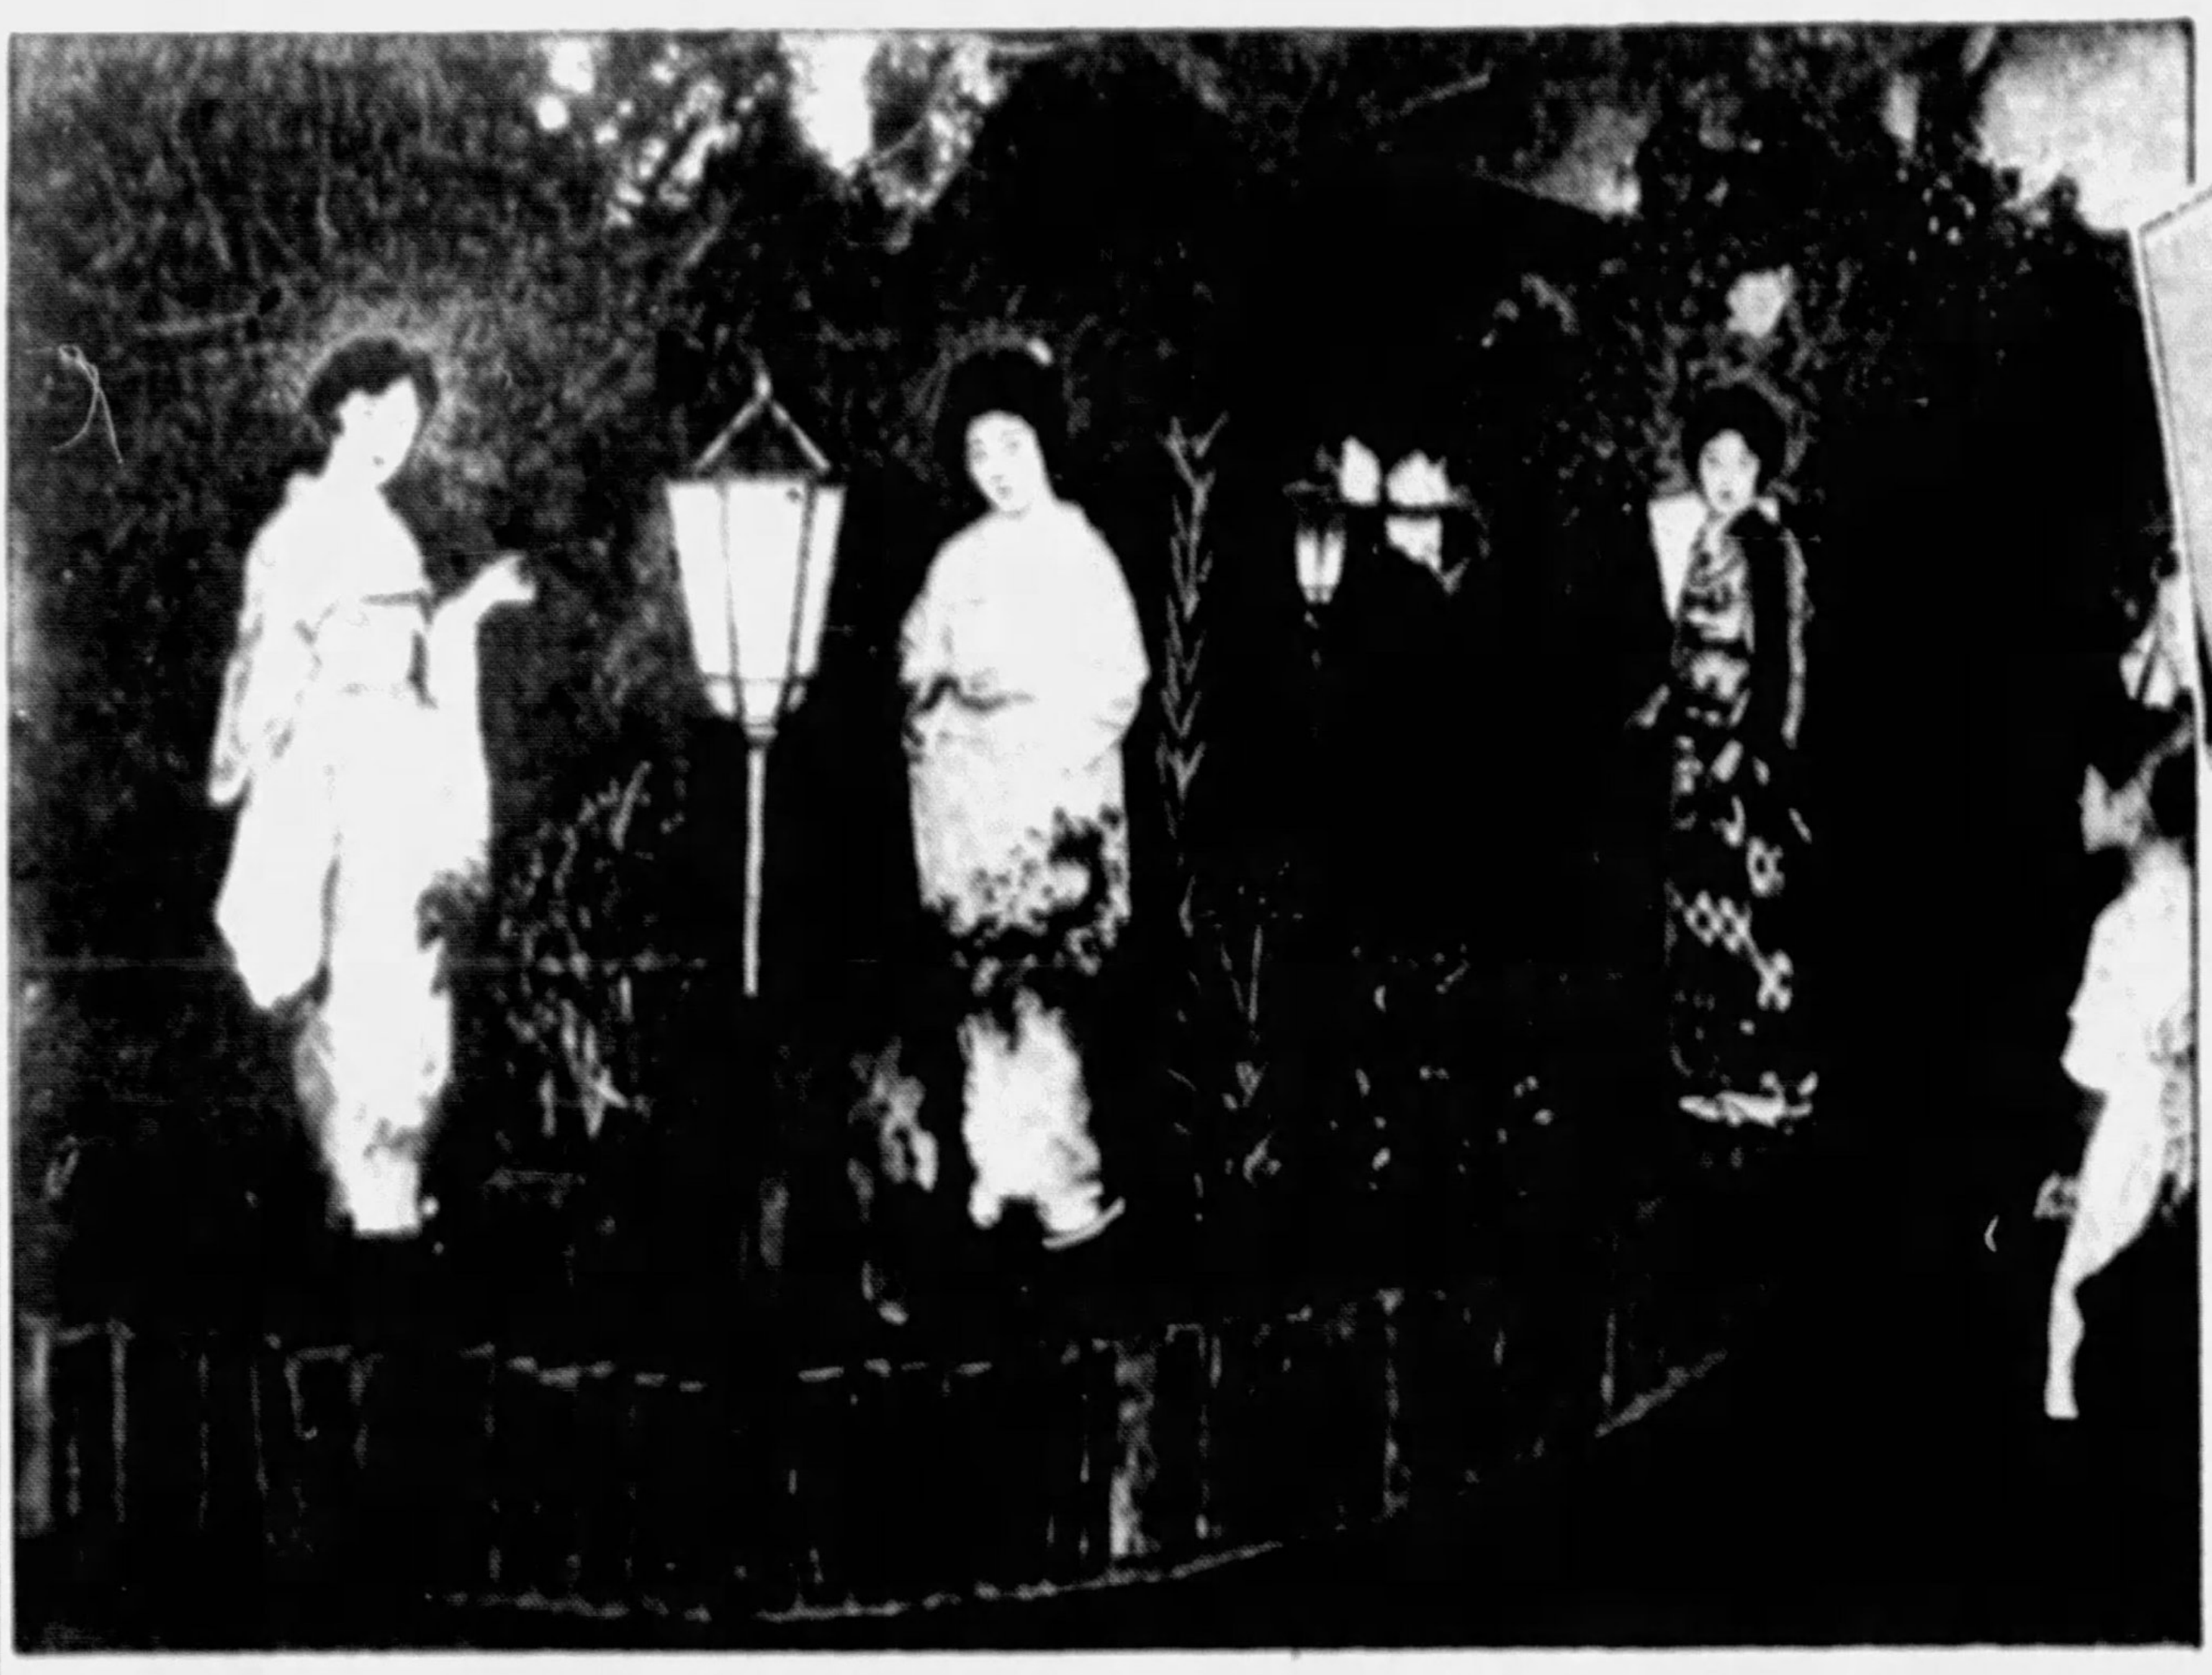
—Below—Waki Yoko, Japan's Pioneer Mannequin, Displaying a Striking Native Costume in One of Tokyo's Most Enterprising Department Stores.

[illegible] N[illegible] the A[illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] something that a few years ago would have been [illegible] [illegible] the average [illegible] of the Island Empire.

And now the [illegible] Tokyo and other Japanese [illegible] have made another radical departure from the [illegible] of the country by using mannequins for the display of clothes and to stimulate the sale of many other commodities.

The afternoon style parade in some of Tokyo's larger stores is not unlike the style parade to be seen in New York's most exclusive shops for women, and so numerous have mannequins become in the Japanese capital they have formed a union called the "Mannequin Club."

It was only a few months ago that [illegible] proprietor of a Tokyo department store braved the ridicule of his competitors, the solid citizens and perhaps [illegible] his [illegible] by engaging three pretty and shapely young women to display wearing apparel in his establishment. For a time he was charged with unfair business tactics and even with encouraging girls to enter a profession which savored of [illegible]. But the popularity of his mannequins and the increase in sales induced him to ignore his critics. Before many weeks rival concerns were also stimulating the sale of [illegible] both Oriental and American, by the employment of comely live models.



Mannequins Are Now Featured in Most of the Stores of Tokyo. The Photograph Above Depicts an Inside Window Display Which Attracted Thousands of Customers.

The Mannequin Club has more than a hundred members at the moment, and the membership is steadily increasing. The girls who comprise it earned three dollars a day when they first entered the profession. Now they command a salary of at least eight dollars a day and have secured a working day beginning at 10 in the morning and ending at four in the afternoon. Out of every hour they are allowed fifteen minutes' rest. And they received generous gifts of clothing from their employers to whom they are proving so profitable.

So rapidly has the mannequin idea spread in Tokyo the girls are called upon to advertise many things besides clothing. Within the past few months they have demonstrated the merits of beauty creams and lotions, the desirability of shoes that improve feminine posture, and the easiest and most sanitary way of washing dishes. The field for their professional activities is widening all the time.

The Mannequin Club recently admitted to membership the first and, as yet, the only male mannequin in Japan. His name is Chiaki Araki and his first job of modeling was for a prosperous men's store that sells male apparel made in America and Paris.

This masculine mannequin is, like every one of his sister mannequins, working by the grace of Government permit which stipulates that a mannequin can engage in the profession so long as he or she does not contaminate the morals of the young or hold up traffic.

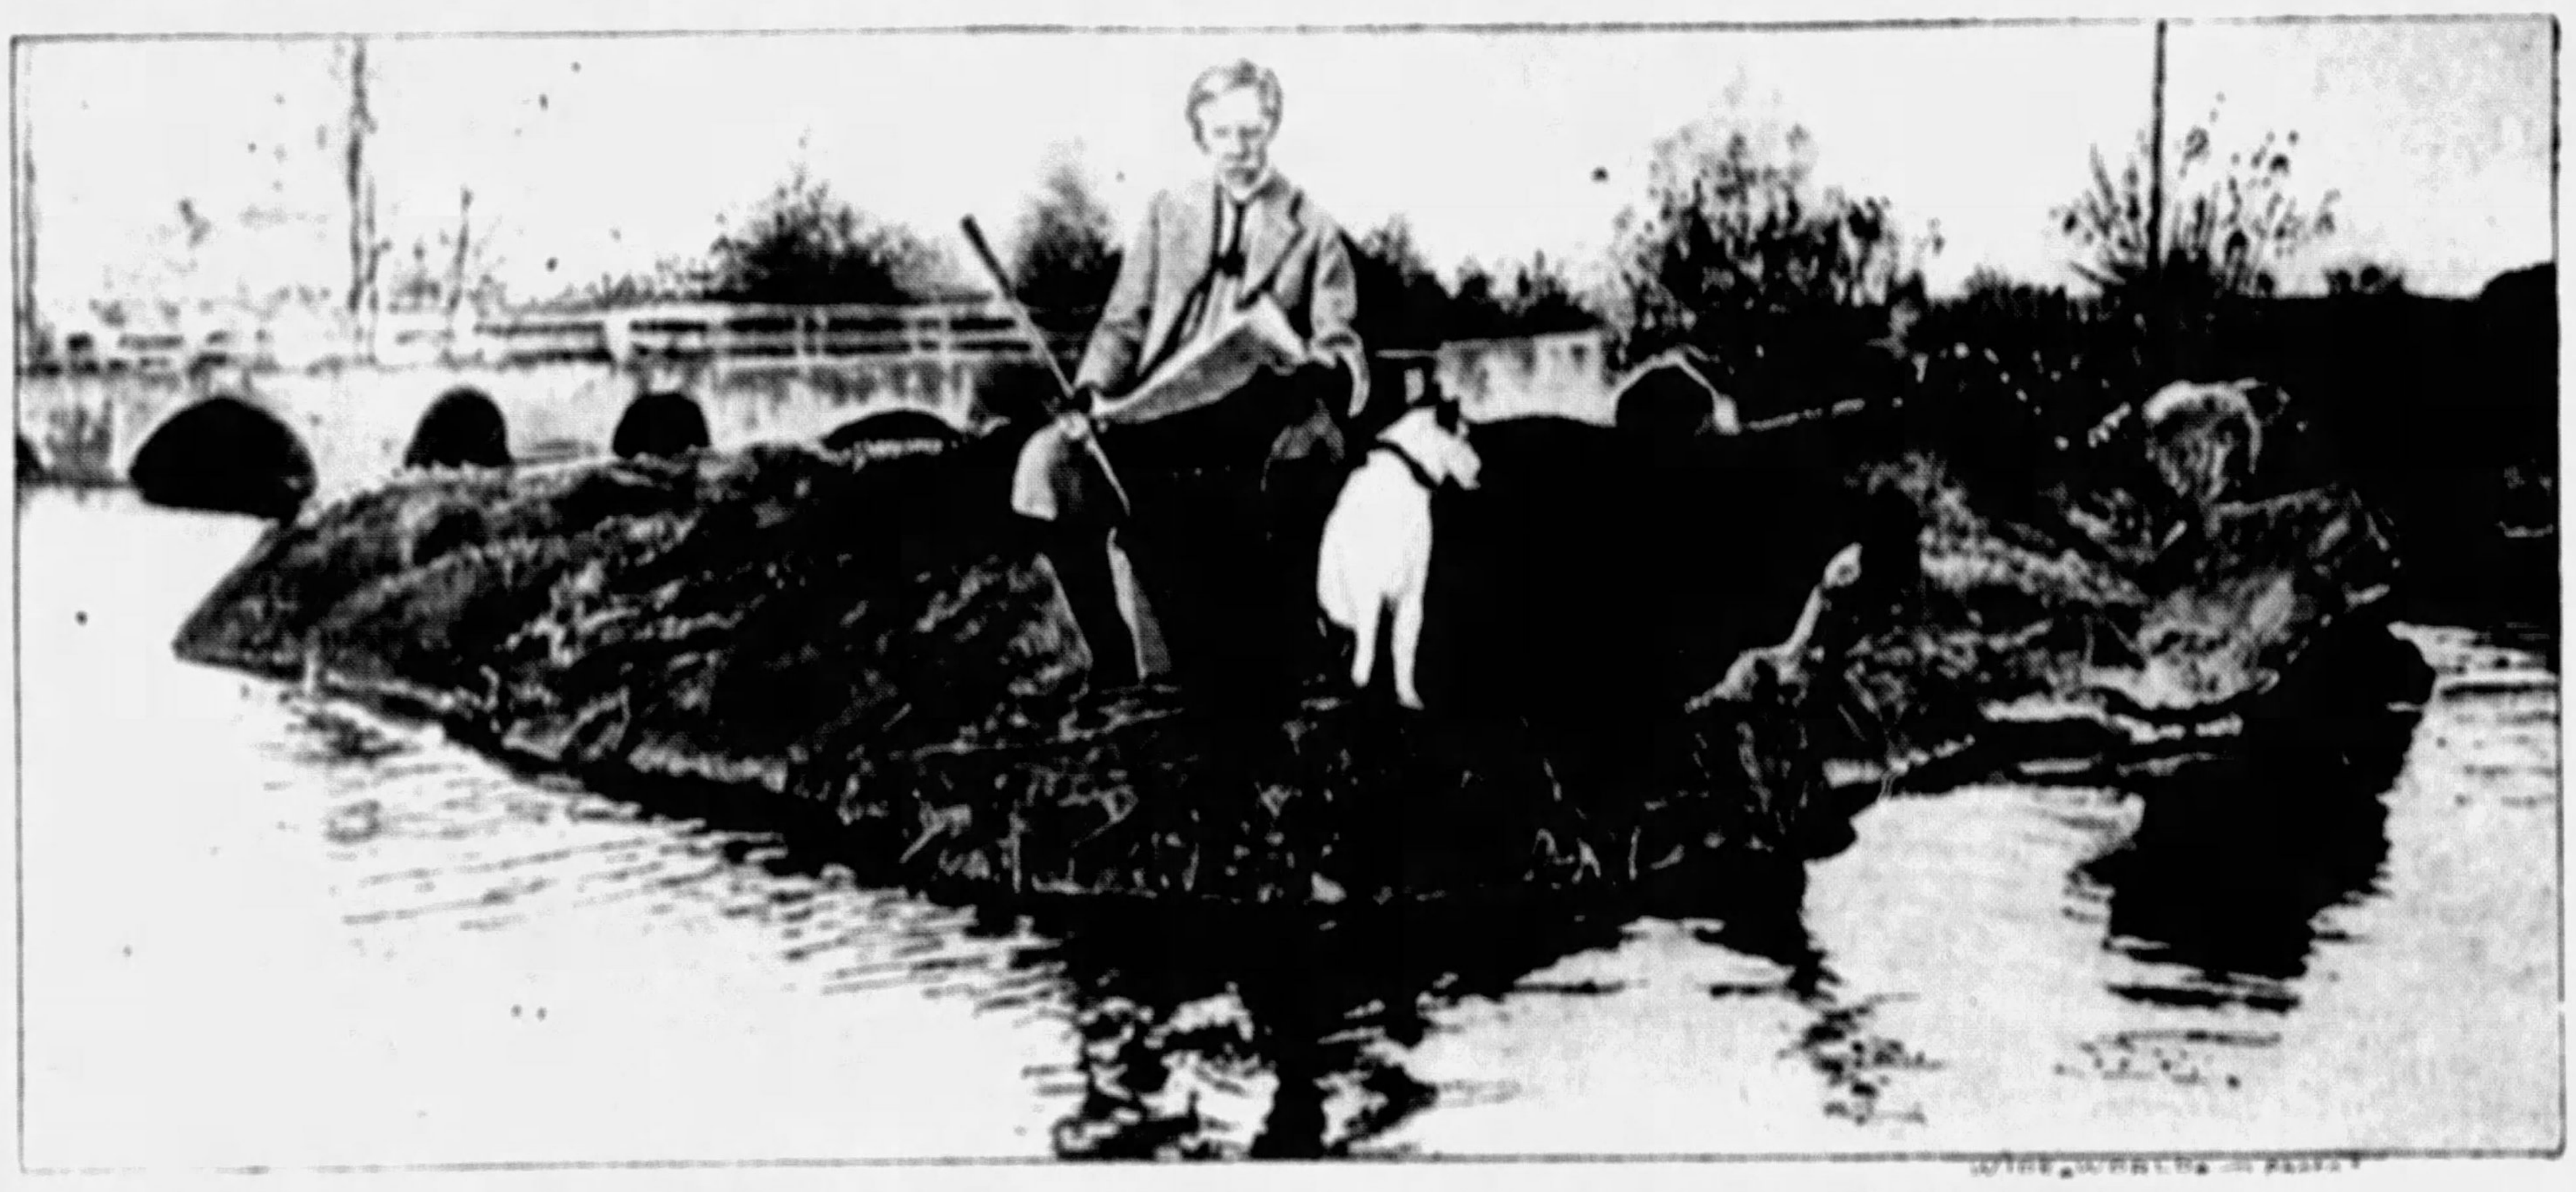
Defended His Little Island From the Government Engineers

ON the day, not long ago, when a gang of forty workmen headed by Government engineers arrived in the little town of Warwickshire, England, to demolish a small island in the river Avon, they found the worthless patch of land garrisoned by a white-haired man and a mongrel dog. The man, whose name is Vincent Mainwaring, was armed with an automatic shotgun, which he threatened to use if any of the invading party attempted to set foot on the island.

"Sir, I have authority from the Government to remove the island which you seem determined to hold," shouted the engineer in charge of the party, "and I shall have to ask you not to interfere with me or my men."

"I don't care by what authority you come here," replied Mr. Mainwaring, taking a firm grip on his shotgun. "This island is my property and no one will remove it unless they remove my dead body with it. I warn you, if you or any of your men attempt to land on here I'll give you a taste of what it means to infringe on a good Englishman's rights."

The engineer was more amused than angry, for the island was little more than a mound of soggy soil blocking the channel of the Avon.



Armed With His Gun and Accompanied by His Dog, Mr. Vincent Mainwaring Defied Police and Engineers on His Island in the Avon River, Near Stratford, Until the Government Met His Claims.

After a vain attempt to explain to the belligerent holder of the island that he was only making a silly, if dramatic, gesture, the engineers and their men departed and went to work in a meadow some distance away. That afternoon the Government men conferred with the local police, who willingly agreed to act as mediators in the case.

A constable, who happened to be a lifelong friend of Mr. Mainwaring, paddled across to the island and, after an hour's parley, finally convinced the old man that his behavior was absurd and that by permitting the Government to dig the island up he would earn the good will of the citizens of Warwickshire. Mr. Mainwaring laid aside his gun and came ashore to talk with the engineers, who courteously explained just how the removal of the patch of useless ground would improve the Avon in appearance and navigability.

The result of the conference was a compromise by which that half of the island projecting into the channel was shoveled away and the other half—a patch hardly big enough for a man and a dog to stand on—was left as a sop to Mr. Mainwaring's childish desire to own an island in the historically famous Avon.

Another Shop Girl Becomes a Movie Star

NOT many months ago Signorina Vera Galotti, the rapidly rising young star of the Italian movies, was just another shop girl in a Milan department store where she put in long hours for a [illegible] wage amounting to about [illegible] in American money. Today she is a popular idol of the films and makes as much every week as she formerly made in a whole year.

Of course the shop girl was blessed with beauty and latent ability, but she frankly and modestly admits that her meteoric rise to fame and fortune was due largely to what Americans call "the breaks." One day, late in the afternoon, a luxurious limousine drew up at the entrance of the department store where Signorina Galotti worked, and from it [illegible] a woman of wealth and refinement.

This patron wanted to buy an evening gown and the manager turned her over to Signorina Galotti, who, it happened, was very tired at the end of a busy day and looked it. The customer noted the girl's fatigue and also observed that the young woman smiled pleasantly and was very solicitous in her efforts to find exactly what the patron sought.

When the gown had been found, the woman [illegible] a hand on the arm of the shop girl and asked her her name.

"Vera Galotti," said the clerk.

"I am Signorina Grossi," smiled the expensively dressed patron. "The wife of the motion picture producer and I'm sure you won't mind if I presume to say that I think you are a perfect type for the films. You have beauty, and charm and grace. I believe that you are a 'find,' if you know what I mean and, if you like, I'll arrange with my husband for you to take a screen test."

Tears welled up in the shop girl's eyes. Her hands sought those of Signorina Grossi.

"Would you do that?" she asked, excitedly. "I've dreamed of a career in pictures or on the stage so long that it's become an obsession with me, but I never had the courage to apply for work at any of the studios. I'd give ten years of my life to make a name for myself in the movies."

"If I'm any judge of potential motion picture material," said Signorina Grossi, "you can realize your dream without paying any such price. You'll hear from me within the next day or so."

A week later the shop girl got her screen test and, inside a month, she was at work in the studios playing an important part in a big picture. Her undeveloped dramatic ability blossomed under the tutelage of able directors and six months after her first visit to a movie lot she began work on her first starring role. The success of that picture won her a handsome contract and gained her nation-wide recognition as a cinema actress possessed of unusual beauty and the ability to play roles ranging from "slapstick" comedy to stark tragedy.

Headlight Eye-Glasses for Night Reading

The Electrified Eye-glasses, Fed by a Battery, Throw Their Own Light on a Book or Newspaper, Making It Possible for the Wearer to Read in Unlighted Places.

IT was at a convention of opticians and optometrists recently held in Berlin that a German inventor demonstrated what, for lack of a better name, he called "headlight glasses." During the inventor's description of his rather odd looking illuminating spectacles, the eye specialists indulged in tolerant smiles of disbelief and apparently regarded the ingenious combination of glasses and reading light as just another fool idea.

But when many of the doctors had put on the glasses in a dark room and read from the pages of books and newspapers without the aid of any light except that supplied by the tiny electric bulbs attached to the spectacles, they were ready to admit that the "crazy" invention is, after all, rather practical.

A tiny electric bulb is attached to each of the lenses and is backed by an oval reflector which completely surrounds the edge of the lens through which the wearer looks. The spectacles are so made that none of the light shines into the eyes, but is directed onto whatever object the wearer is looking at. A small battery, which can be attached to the coat or carried in the pocket, supplies the current for the lights. This battery is connected with the glasses by a small, inconspicuous wire, covered with silk.

The headlight eye-glasses are so cleverly made that they weigh little more than ordinary spectacles and are practically as comfortable. The photograph on this page shows a man reading a newspaper without the help of any light except that which emanates from the spectacles themselves.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Sept. 15.

BEFORE American readers have read this article and studied these interesting photographs of the great German flying yacht, the huge 60-ton airplane DO-X, the biggest in the world, may already be riding at anchor in New York Harbor. The start of the trans-Atlantic flight was originally set for September 8, but minor adjustments in the mechanism caused delays.

The DO-X is the product of nearly four years' careful planning and painstaking work. It was designed and built by Dr. Claude Dornier at his airplane factory here on the shore of Lake Constance, high in the Alps. Launched a year ago last June, the great craft flew 110 miles over Lake Constance with a load of 150 passengers and a crew of 10.

But Dr. Dornier was not satisfied with this record-breaking achievement. While the twelve Siemens-Jupiter engines, with a combined horsepower of 6,300, had behaved perfectly for the work they had been called on to do, the builder felt they were not powerful enough to drive the great plane under all conditions. He therefore dismantled the airship of them and sent for twelve American motors, 625 horsepower Curtiss Condor Conquerors with a total power plant of 7,500 horsepower.

This meant a delay of more than a year in completion of the great air craft. The new engines, too, had to be thoroughly tested before Dr. Dornier would give the word for the transoceanic voyage. He has repeatedly declared that he did not design the DO-X for across-seas traffic, and consented to the trip chiefly because he wanted America to see the world's largest heavier-than-air craft and to demonstrate that it could, if necessary, cross the Atlantic in a series of hops.

The new American engines are expected to drive the DO-X, with its 60 tons of weight, at a maximum speed of 125 to 140 miles an hour. Normal cruising speed, it is hoped, will exceed 100 miles an hour. For the trans-Atlantic trip passenger accommodation has been sacrificed for additional fuel and oil storage. While the craft is designed to accommodate comfortably, even luxuriously, 70 passengers, beside the crew of ten, only 12 persons will be carried on the maiden sea voyage. The two "extras" are Karl H. von Wiegand and Lady Drummond Hay, Hearst newspaper correspondents, who accompanied the Graf Zeppelin on its trips across the Atlantic and around the world.

First plans for the trans-Atlantic flight included a preliminary "European inspection" trip, in which a number of big cities were to be visited by the German plane, including Berlin, Amsterdam, Southampton, Havre and Santander, Spain. Because of the delays in getting started, however, it was decided to go more directly from Friedrichshafen to Lisbon, where the first sea hop will start. From Lisbon the schedule calls for a nine-hour jump to Horta, in the Azores Islands; then an 18-hour flight to Hamilton, Bermuda, and finally an eight-hour hop to New York. This is a total flying time of 35 hours from Portugal to America.

A supply ship will be stationed half way between the Azores and Bermuda, so that if for any reason the DO-X is forced down in mid-ocean it can be given assistance. It may be found advisable for the airship to alight and tie up to the supply ship overnight.

The DO-X is built to withstand heavy seas and rough weather. Two immense pontoons are designed to enable it to land in very rough water. The hull is built like a yacht. The bow, if seen without the immense propellers above, might be mistaken for that of a speed boat. The DO-X is indeed a flying yacht.

The over-all length is 131 feet and the wing spread is 152 feet. There are three decks. The top, or "A" deck, contains the pilot house, navigation room, engine-control room and wireless station. Above are the gigantic wings and on them the motors.

The middle, or "B" deck, is for the exclusive use of passengers. It is 78 feet long with an average width of 9 feet, 8 inches, divided by a corridor. The first room in the bow is an "American bar." Next comes a mahogany finished smoking room, then the lounge with leather seats which can be converted into sleeping compartments at night. There are comfortable accommodations for 70 passengers, although more than twice that many have been carried. In the rear of "B" deck are the electric kitchen, wash-rooms and baggage room.

The lower deck is the storeroom. Here are tanks for 4,200 gallons of gasoline and 450 gallons of oil. For the trans-Atlantic flight additional tanks for oil and gasoline have been installed on the passenger deck so that the craft will leave Lisbon with 21 tons of gasoline and 1,000 gallons of oil.

In the bow of the passenger deck is the anchor room with a small capstan with 308 feet of steel cable attached to the 400-pound anchor which hangs outside in true marine fashion.

The wireless room is soundproof and equipped with the very latest apparatus. A long wave transmitter has a wave length of 600 to 2,100 meters and a short wave apparatus a range of 30 to 60 meters. The receiving apparatus ranges from 20 to 1,000 meters.

The twelve American Curtiss Conqueror motors are mounted tandem on the huge wing. The six forward propellers have four blades each, while the rear six have only two. The motors are controlled in sets of six by the pilot. He can open up or throttle down all 12 at once, or six at a time. But in the engine room, any one motor can be cut out at any time, or three or four together. Signal lights keep the pilot informed how many engines are not working.

The DO-X is equipped with the same clever device for repairing the motors in flight as the great super-Zeppelin, also being constructed at Friedrichshafen. A low runway traverses the wing from left to right beneath the motors. A little car can be propelled along this runway with the mechanic lying on his back. He pushes himself to a position under whichever engine is in need of attention.

The pilot and engine rooms are, to the layman, bewildering jungles of wheels, levers, cranks, push-buttons, dials, indicators, tubes and other gadgets. The dual control system is used, there being seats for two pilots, each manipulating six motors. Before each pilot seat are an air speed indicator, pitch and bank indicator, inclinometer, compass, course indicator, one altimeter for up to 1,500 feet, another up to 9,000. In front of and between the pilot seats are the Sperry Artificial Horizon, three gyro instruments for flying in mist, fog or clouds, small wheels for operating the water rudder, a central switch to stop all motors and one to turn off the electric power generator.

In the engine room are sixty levers and instruments for manipulating the twelve motors. Each engine has a separate throttle, electric revolution indicator, thermometer for temperature of oil and water in the radiators, gasoline indicator and oil consumption indicator.

Between the pilot and engine houses is the navigation room in which the captain and the navigator take observations, chart the course and issue orders to the pilots and the engine room. Telephones and speaking tubes provide instant communication between commander, navigator, pilots, engineer or wireless operator.

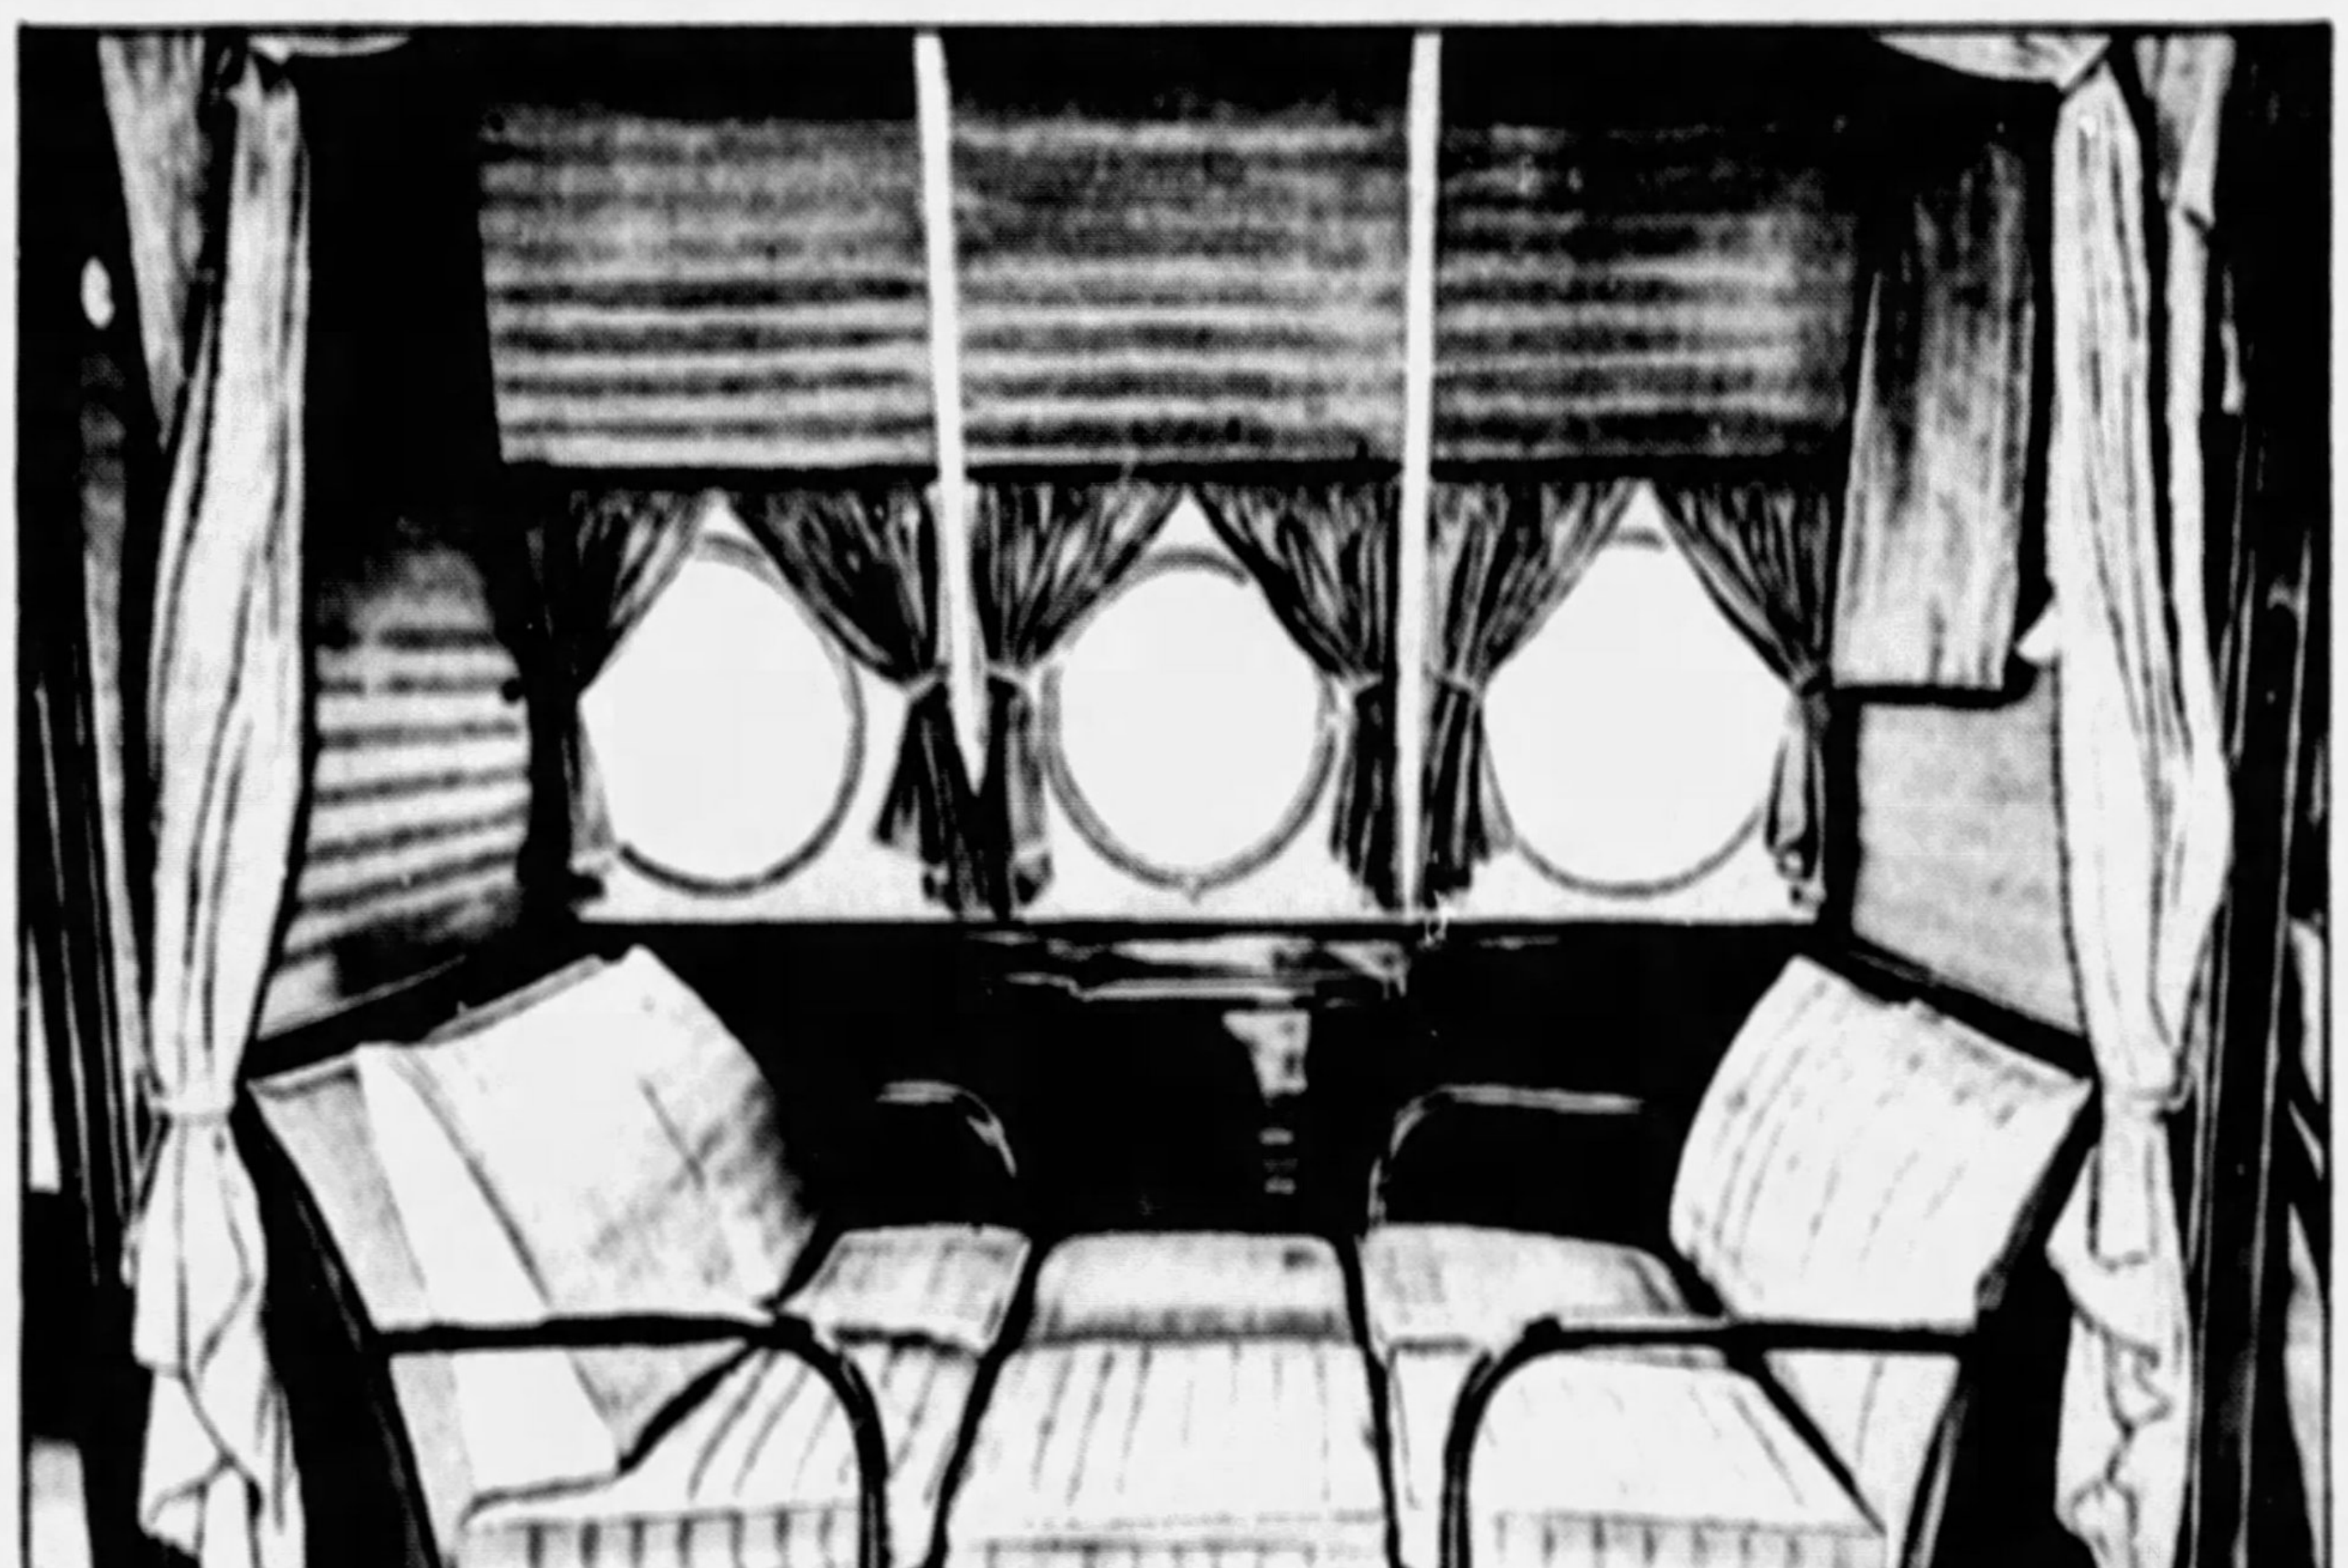
The DO-X is a large edition of the Dornier Super-Wal in which Captain Wolfgang von Gronau and his three companions recently landed off the Battery in New York Harbor after a series of hops from Germany by way of Iceland and Greenland. The Von Gronau flight demonstrated the practicability of safe commercial flights over the Atlantic. Three necessities for safe, commercial trans-oceanic air transportation are recognized by experts—that the craft shoud be a flying boat, capable of landing on and taking off from the sea, that it should carry two-way radio apparatus, and that the route followed should lie as much as possible over land. Von Gronau's Super-Wal met all these conditions and so will the DO-X, a vastly larger and speedier model of the Super-Wal.

The DO-X is commanded by Lieutenant Commander Christian Christiansen, Germany's leading "sea war ace." He commanded the German naval seaplane squadron stationed at Zeebrugge, Flanders, during the war.

Flight Captain Horst Merz, first pilot of the DO-X, three years ago nearly lost his life in an attempt to fly the Atlantic. His plane was capsized near the Azores and he was barely rescued from drowning.

Beside Von Wiegand, the correspondent, two other Americans are included among the pioneer twelve. Merz's co-pilot is Lieut. C. H. Schildhauer, formerly in the United States Naval Air Force, but now connected with the American Dornier Company. Second engineer is Harvey Brewton, of the Curtiss Company, who installed the new Conqueror motors and whose particular job it is to keep them working properly.

Maurice Dornier, brother of the designer and builder, represents him on the maiden sea trip.



The Luxurious Seats in the Passenger Lounge Are Converted at Night Into Comfortable Sleeping Compartments. There Are Accommodations for 70 Passengers on the "B" Deck.

Escaped Death on a Funeral Pyre to Win Fortune and Happiness

How Resourceful Princess Mah Patimah Hid in the Jungle to Avoid the Fate of a Hindu Widow and Now Rules a Little East Indian Paradise Where No More Men Than Necessary Are Allowed In

Princess Mah Patimah, Who Fled From the Funeral Pyre on Which She Was to Be Burned at the Death of Her Husband, and Built Herself Up a Rich Little Private Kingdom on the Picturesque Island of Bali

THE Princess Patimah, of the beautiful Island of Bali, near the great island of Java in the Dutch East Indies, is one of the most remarkable examples of womanhood in the world.

In a country where for years women have been treated worse than slaves, regarded as having no [illegible] and put to death simply to make a religious festival, she has risen to be a princess, an enlightened ruler over thousands of happy women, a leader of modern industry and a friend of cultivated people from all parts of the civilized world.

Her girls in Bali are said to be among the most beautiful in the world—exquisitely moulded, full-chested, free-limbed, tall, straight, strong, supple and graceful. All these qualities are largely due to the excellent system of education and training put into operation by the wise Princess Patimah—known happily in her own language as Mah Patimah.

At twenty, in the full bloom of her youth and beauty, the Princess Patimah was doomed to a cruel death in accordance with an age-old superstition. From this apparently hopeless situation she saved herself by her courage and resourcefulness, and rose triumphant not merely over her personal enemies but over the greater, more terrible forces of superstition and bigotry.

She was married in her childhood to an old man of great wealth and importance. In those days the Hindu rite of suttee, or widow burning, was commonly practised in Bali, because the Dutch colonial authorities did not have a sufficiently strong force to prevent it. The Balinese and the Javanese are not Hindus by race, but Malays, members of the race that inhabit Burma and Siam and produce the very attractive little girls described by Kipling in "The Road to Mandalay."

Many centuries ago some apostles of Hinduism went to Java and converted the people to their religion, which in many of its aspects glorifies bloodshed, cruelty, torture and human sacrifice. The Javanese are very fond of dancing and colorful spectacles. Probably the Hindu religion appealed to them because it gave an opportunity for some novel and spectacular entertainments.

After that the Mohammedans descended on Java and began to convert the inhabitants to their aggressive religion with fire and sword. Many of the most devout Hindu Javanese fled to Bali, where their religion quickly spread to the natives.

After a few years of married life the Princess Patimah's elderly husband died and she was informed that she was to have the privilege of being burnt with him on his funeral pyre, so that she might enjoy the inestimable felicity of accompanying him to heaven and waiting upon him hand and foot as she had done on earth.

It was supposed that Hindu widows were eager to be burned on the funeral pyre. Stories are told that they clamored for the privilege and sang sweet hymns of gratefulness while they were being burnt but there are also unquestionable records that some of them seized an opportunity to escape. It is possible that general hysteria and the terrifying ceremonies of an ancient religion made many of them think they wanted to be sacrificed, but there is no doubt that if left to themselves even Hindu women would not have chosen such a fate.

The Princess Patimah's husband was rich, and his cremation, together with his living widow, was to be made the occasion of a great religious and social ceremony. Relatives and friends were invited from all parts of the island.

Music was provided and copious refreshments for the guests. The dead man's body was placed on a pile of brushwood like a bed, and by his side was laid his young widow. She was bound securely to the funeral pyre so that the agony of the flames might not weaken her pious desire to sacrifice herself and cause her to try to escape. Around the funeral pyre were posts bearing idols of some of the principal gods of Hindu mythology.

The guests sat around the pyre and sang appropriate hymns in honor of the occasion. The character of these hymns is well known to students of Hindu religion. The words of one of them were, in part, roughly as follows:

"Glory to suttee! Glory to suttee!

"Behold the pious widow who will accompany her lord to Heaven.

"How much more fortunate is she than other women.

"She will have the honor of placing her head beneath his feet."

Everything was ready for the supreme moment of setting the torch to the funeral pyre, but the ceremony was delayed by the absence of the dead man's brother, the principal mourner. He lived in a distant part of the island and had evidently been delayed on his way.

The day wore on but the chief mourner did not make his appearance. The other mourners kept up their spirits with songs and feasting, but the misery of the widow bound helpless upon the funeral pyre must have been beyond words.

Finally it was decided that the lighting of the pyre would have to be put off until the next day. The mourners looked forward with pleasure and interest to another day of religious enthusiasm. Guards were placed about the widow, so that she might not attempt to escape and the rest went to sleep.

Some interesting thoughts passed through the head of the young widow during that terrible night. What had she done to be condemned to die at the height of her youth and beauty? Why should she obey a religion that inflicted such treatment on women only? She knew that women were just as much human beings as men, not mere parasites made to wait on the other sex.

With all the energy of her nature she determined to escape from her predicament. She knew that the Dutch authorities had forbidden suttee, and would give protection to any woman who was in danger of it. The nearest Dutch station was many miles away from her, separated by a territory filled with rivers, jungles and marshes, and swarming with wild beasts and deadly reptiles. But she thought she might reach it if she could only free herself from her bonds.

When night was well advanced, and she thought the guards might be drowsy, she began cautiously to try what she could do to free herself. With her strong teeth she bit on the rope that bound her hands until she wore it through. Then she found a piece of hard wood with a rough edge, and with this she sawed through the ropes that held her waist and feet.

She worked as silently and cautiously as possible, fearing that any minute she might awaken the guards and end her hopes of life and safety forever. They must have been sleeping soundly after their day of feasting and excitement.

About the middle of the night she decided that the time had come to make a dash for liberty. As quickly as a cat she stepped off the funeral pyre, ran like a flash over an open space two hundred feet in width and dived into a thick spot in the jungle with which she was familiar.

Then began a terrible struggle through the wilderness to reach a place of safety. The brush grows so thick that Europeans cannot move through it without cutting it down, but the natives have a way of working through it.

Innumerable stories are told of the Princess Patimah's adventures during this period by her numerous friends and admirers. It is said that one man sent to bring her back overtook her, and that she killed him with his own sword. Still another came after her, and she found it easier to dispose of him by her personal allurements.

After days and nights in the jungle she reached the Dutch settlement and told her story. It excited the greatest sympathy, and the large-hearted Dutchmen promised to protect her and assist her in every possible way. Her youth and beauty and appealing ways greatly increased the sympathy she excited.

From that time she steadily advanced in prosperity and importance until she became the principal person on the island. She was quick to perceive many ways of making money. She discovered how much Europeans valued the artistic articles made by the natives—jewelry, articles of wood, ivory and stone, etc. She established a curio shop in the town of Singaraja, which steadily increased in size. Tourists from many parts of the world stopped there and were delighted with the objects of rare Oriental art which they were able to obtain at moderate prices.

The clever Princess found that she could increase her own wealth and help her countrywomen by making use of women workers. Hitherto they had only been slaves for men. Why not give them an opportunity to work for themselves?

She let it be known that she would give women the preference in her stores, factories and other enterprises. They flocked to her service, delighted at the good treatment and pay they received, and the feeling that they were respected human beings. In this undertaking she was in danger from the enmity of evil-minded men, and the Balinese men are very expert in the use of a short curved sword. But she met their opposition with courage and cleverness. She enjoyed the support of the Dutch, and she organized guards of her own to protect her workwomen.

She established factories for weaving fabrics of silk, gold braid, cotton and other materials. All the workers were women. The looms and the materials used were of native origin and made typical Balinese products, not imitations of western articles.

Everything was done for the comfort of the workers. The intensive methods of an American factory would not have suited them. They had to have time to dance and sing and weave flowers in their hair. They were at liberty to work in the open air or in flower-decked arbors where they could find shelter from the tropical sun. It was out of the question to shut them up in a building or keep them to regular hours. When a girl has done enough to keep herself for the day, she collects her little pay and goes out to enjoy herself.

The Princess also established shops for producing fine articles in gold and silver, both for the foreign and the domestic trade. There again the workers are women.

She built up enormous rice plantations which supply this essential form of food to a large part of Java. Her rice barns are beautiful structures and quite proof against rats, ants and other vermin which make rice growing difficult. Nothing like them is known elsewhere.

While her Balinese women have been emancipated through the Princess from some of the worst terrors of Hinduism, they have not entirely discarded their old practices. The Balinese variety of Hinduism preserves many exciting features of an older religion, including a belief in ghosts and demons, that haunt the air every night.

The Princess Patimah deserves great credit for introducing a large element of happiness and prosperity into the lives of her women without destroying their picturesque customs.

Captain Bairnsfather at His Easel Making a Sketch of "Old Bill," the Character Which Made Him Famous.

Mrs. Bruce Bairnsfather, Who Says That She and the Captain Were Ideally Happy Until the Elderly Miss Collier Stole Him From Her.

OLD vamps are sometimes the most dangerous.

It has often been proved that a woman need not be young and beautiful to "get her man," provided she knows "the old vamp's secret." Helen of Troy is said to have been more than 50 when her husband and his friends sacked the Trojan city and took the lady back home. Ninon de Lenclos, at the ripe age of 90, was still alluring prominent men of France. Mohammed's favorite wife was the aged Fatima. Sarah Bernhardt was never beautiful, but, in spite of a wooden leg, had lovers right to the end of her long life. Lily Langtry retained her power to charm to the very end, and history records an abundance of others. How did they do it?

"By strange emotional appeals which destroyed the sweet, childlike person that was my husband. His very personality is gone — ruined and destroyed by emotional contact with this woman old enough to be his mother."

Thus Mrs. Cecilia Bairnsfather, wife of Charles Bruce Bairnsfather, the world-famous cartoonist, describes the methods by which she thinks her husband was taken away from her by Miss Constance Collier, the actress, whose age has been variously estimated at from fifty years up to several more. Mrs. Bairnsfather is not only suing her celebrated husband for divorce, but has brought an alienation-of-affection suit for $100,000 against her elderly but successful rival.

Captain Bairnsfather is forty-two years old, attractive, and, because of his fame as the artist who made all England laugh at the war during its darkest days, has been much sought after by young and beautiful women of many countries.

Having watched her husband successfully resist the lures of these charmers, who might well have caused the youngest and prettiest of brides to worry, Mrs. Bairnsfather now stands astonished and furious to find that he has succumbed to one whom she considered far beyond the dangerous age.

A hint of what these "strange emotional appeals" may have been is given in her husband's letter to Lady Margaret Hamilton Russell. The part that convinced Mrs. Bairnsfather, the moment she saw it, that her husband was lost forever and caused her to start legal proceedings, is as follows:

"I have to have my imagination and complete freedom. Domestic life, beautiful as it may be for those who can do it, is not for me, and poor Ceal, much as she may try, is unable to understand that inner thing which is me, and which I have to live by."

"How could he?" Mrs. Bairnsfather cried to her lawyers when they informed her that Bruce and his actress friend had been inhabiting a little love-nest at 22 West Fifty-ninth street, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce, while she was in England, wondering why he did not come home. The lawyers were unable to answer that question but a friend who had observed the couple in New York attempted it. She told her to look for the explanation between the lines of that letter.

"He had to have his imagination and complete freedom," the friend pointed out, "and you didn't understand 'that inner thing which is me and which I have to live by.'"

"But why didn't he tell me that I didn't understand and give me a chance?" the heartbroken wife complained.

"Because he didn't know it himself," the friend answered, "until an older and shrewder person, with plenty of imagination, described to him the marvels of his own character, made him believe it and that she was the only person who really appreciated and understood him. You say that he was sweet and childlike—that made it so much easier. A wife has to do the criticising and scolding of her husband because there is nobody else to do it, just as parents must scold and discipline their children.

"Boys and girls leave home to go with anyone who persuades them they are misunderstood and unappreciated. The people they run away with do not need to be young and beautiful, and it is the same with husbands who can be led astray by most anyone who knows how to butter them up skilfully with 'psychic' flattery. It is the older vamp's secret. The young vamp tries to make herself mysterious, the older one makes the man think he is complicated and mysterious.

"As every man likes to have his wife look up to him, the man goes home and tells her of the discovery, neglecting to give credit to the discoverer. His wife tells him he is a fool, and then he is sure she does not understand 'that inner thing that is me.'"

This theory does not sugar-coat the bitter pill for Mrs. Bairnsfather, who thinks she would feel less outraged if her rival were about 30 years younger. Nor does it help her peace of mind to remember that she and Miss Collier were old friends for many years, and that she had always welcomed the veteran actress in her home.

It was this friendship and trust which made it possible for Bruce to send her back to England last Spring on the understanding that he was to remain a few weeks longer in New York to collaborate on a new play with her old friend.

Perhaps most infuriating of all is the knowledge that the material for the play was her own unpublished novel, dealing with what the Saviour would do if He returned to the Earth in the year 1930.

"And with that before them, look what they did to me!" laments Mrs. Bairnsfather, who also states that this isn't the half of it.

"I have a terrible story," she said, "but I can't tell it all yet as my lawyers have forbidden me. But don't let anyone tell you that the Collier woman is only 37. She is 60 if she is a day."

The English "Who's Who" gives Miss Collier's age as 50, on information presumably furnished by the actress herself. The impression that she has been on the stage for nearly half a century is partly explained by the fact that she began her career at the age of six.

Though all Summer Mr. Bairnsfather had refused to come home to England, he suddenly changed his mind and started to take the Berengaria for his native land the very day his wife landed in New York, looking for him. Thinking that Miss Collier was also on board, his wife had detectives search the steamer to arrest the pair for eloping. But the actress was not on the liner.

These activities caused the artist and playright to again change his mind about seeing Merrie England. Next day he threatened to prosecute his wife if she publicly annoyed him again. Miss Collier, irritated at hearing that she was "the oldest vamp of modern times," talked back so vigorously that presently she found herself faced with a slander suit on top of the alienation one.

She also promised that there was a lot to tell about Mrs. Bairnsfather, and it came to the wife's ears that the legitimacy of her seven-year-old daughter, Barbara, by her present husband, and her first daughter, Miss Heather Scott, by her former, divorced husband, the Hon. Michael Scott, had been questioned. It is reported that Miss Collier denies having said just that, and an affidavit of denial has settled the war on that particular front. Bruce also threatened to "tell all" about his wife unless she behaved. Mrs. Bairnsfather showed no signs of "behaving," but her husband has not told anything so far.

The abandoned wife states that these threats and alleged attacks on herself and her children were a desperate attempt to make her drop the divorce and alienation suits. She has a cable from her London attorneys stating that the records show she married Bairnsfather in January, 1921, and that their child, Barbara, was born December 26, 1922.

Besides the promise to her lawyers not to talk too much, Mrs. Bairnsfather claims to be somewhat muffled by the proud but embarrassing fact that she is related by marriage to the royal family of England. Burke's Peerage shows that the Hon. Michael Scott, whom she married in 1906, is the fifth son of the Earl of Eldon and a relative of Viscount Lascelles, husband of Princess Mary. The Prince of Wales once said of him:

"While I am getting commoner and commoner, Lascelles is getting royaller and royaller."

The alienation suit has possibilities of being unusual. Actors are notoriously hard to beat in court because they are used to public appearance, are not ashamed of being conspicuous, usually enjoy it and make excellent witnesses for themselves.

Should Miss Collier choose to accept her adversary's estimate of her age as correct, she could, with her dramatic skill and experience in make-up, hobble into court and appear as a nice old grandmother-effect who could easily convince a jury that she had merely mothered a poor, misunderstanding boy. However, it is reported that she scorns any such methods and that her defence of "telling it all" will be sufficient.

Charles Bruce Bairnsfather came out of the war not only its most famous and popular artist but a hero of the long struggle. Among the first to enlist, he saw the early horrors and, four months after that fatal August 4, was a second lieutenant in the mud of Flanders. He inherited his military talents from his father, Major Thomas Bairnsfather, of the Cheshires, and his artistic ability from his mother who was considerable of a painter. Bruce was an able soldier and two years later when he was severely wounded had risen to the rank of captain, but his real greatness came from his brush and charcoal.

Soon after the opposing forces settled down to the "dirty, dull and dangerous" monotony of trench warfare, Bairnsfather started to amuse himself by little charcoal sketches of what he saw around him. Instead of trying to make the soldier's life appear less dreadful than it was, he drew the actual truth, with a grim laugh in it. His "canvases" were old scraps of paper or the sides of oil cans.

Their popularity was proved by the speed with which they were stolen each night, and treasured above German helmets and iron crosses. Soon the men began sending specimens home with their letters, and after a while they got into the papers. His character, "Old Bill," became popular the world over, and his picture, "The Better 'Ole," got through the lines and made even the Germans laugh.

The fame of that drawing of "Old Bill" sitting in a bombarded shell-hole and telling his terrified companion: "Well, if you knows of a better 'ole, go to it!" lived on after the war, and became the title for his play, which became the hit of the New York season and made him moderately wealthy.

Miss Collier, English-born, like the rest of the triangle, first became known to the American public in 1908, when she appeared in New York with William Gillette in "Samson," under the management of Charles Frohman. Since then she has become well known in many plays. Her real name is Laura Constance Hardie, and she is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hardie, prominent actors of 50 years ago. Her most recent appearance was in 1930 in the title role of "The Matriarch." She was for a time the wife of Julian L'Estrange.

Persuaded His Church to Pay His Alimony

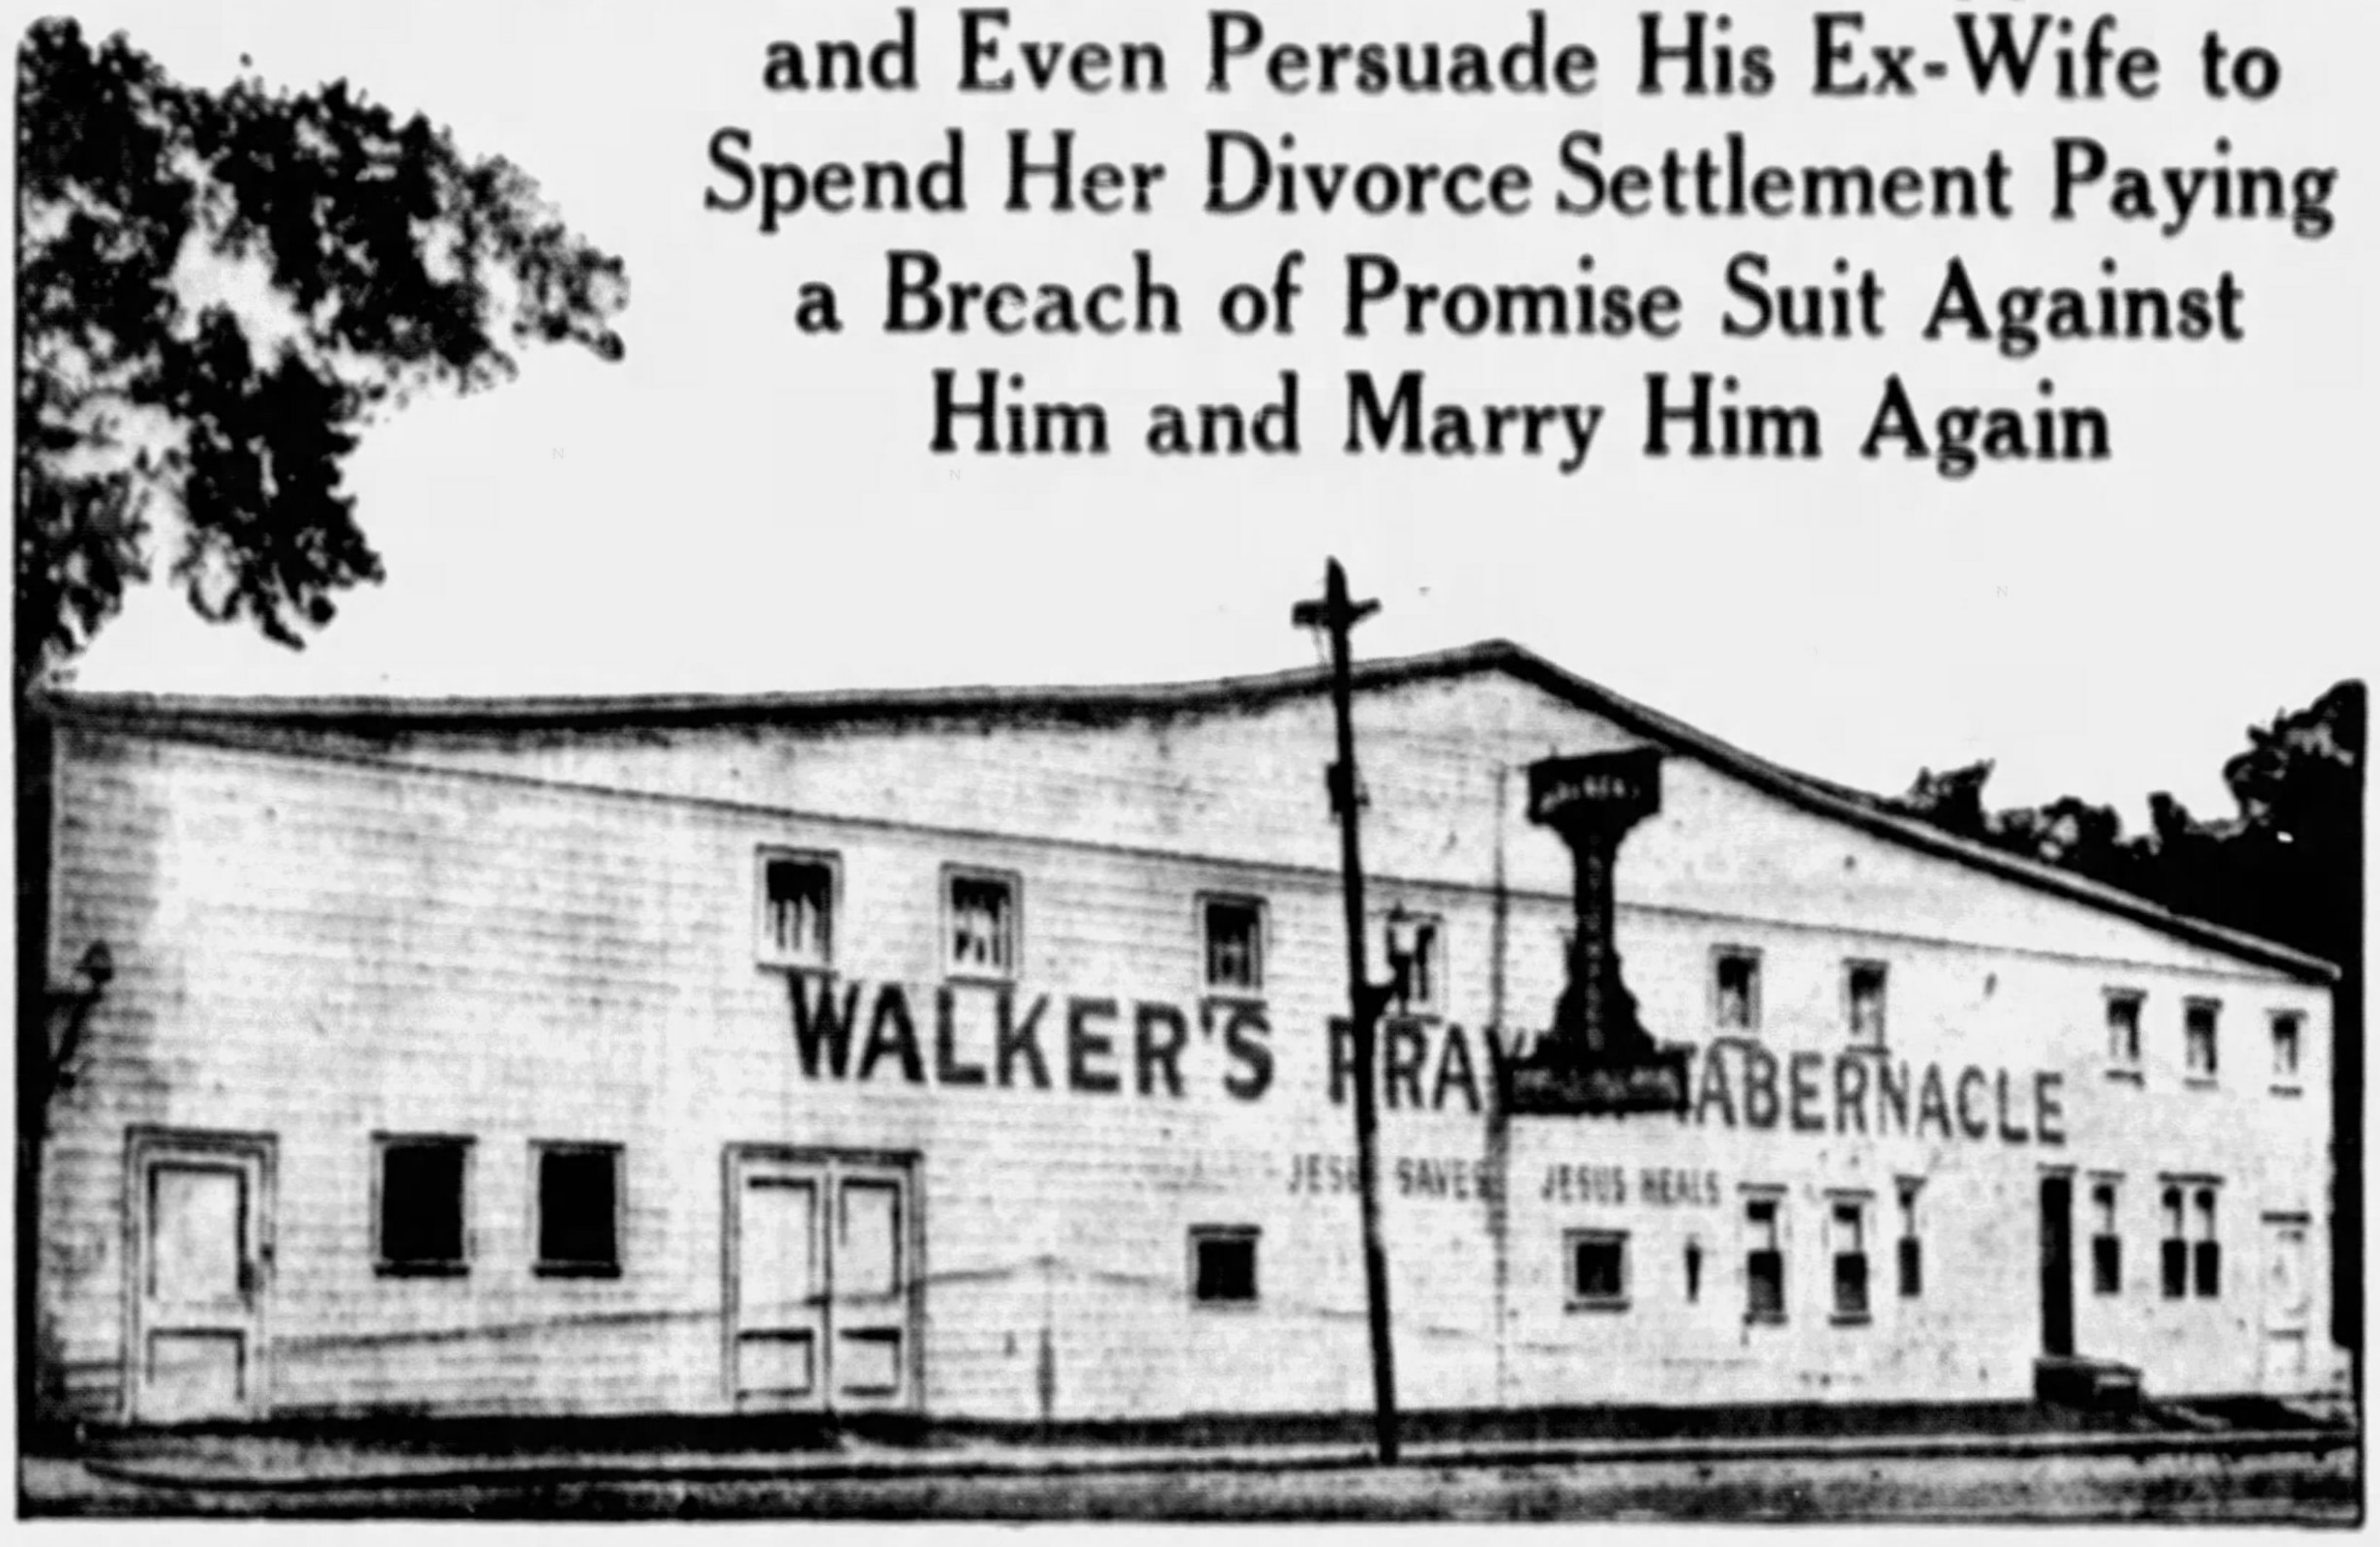
Almost Miraculous Persuasive Powers of the Rev. C. C. Walker, of Kansas City, Who Could Persuade Cripples to Walk and Even Persuade His Ex-Wife to Spend Her Divorce Settlement Paying a Breach of Promise Suit Against Him and Marry Him Again



The Prayer Tabernacle in Kansas City, Formerly Presided Over by Rev. Mr. Walker, and Whose Doors Were Broken Open by His Wife and the Furniture Carted Away and Was About to Be Sold at Auction When the Congregation Agreed to Pay Her Alimony.

ONCE in a while an unusually gifted and persuasive husband becomes famous by inducing a later wife to pay an earlier wife's alimony for him.

But, so far as known, only one man ever succeeded in having his alimony paid by a church and that remarkable person is the Rev. Carl C. Walker, pastor of the Prayer Tabernacle in Kansas City, Missouri. Out of the collections, it paid Mrs. Walker $900 down and is paying her $50 a week. To make the situation still more surprising, the Rev. Mr. Walker has moved away to other fields and left his church "stuck" with the alimony.

This sure-enough miracle may have been wrought by Mr. Walker's prayers, but they were certainly assisted somewhat by Mrs. Jesse Wooldridge Walker's persuasive hammer which broke the lock on the door, opened up the church and enabled her to cart away the furnishings to a sheriff's sale.

The background of this miracle began ten years ago when Carl C. Walker was a college student, intending to earn his living by ordinary, worldly methods. At that time his sweetheart, Jesse Wooldridge, was the religious one of the pair, a church worker in Kansas City.

They were married and young Walker began to worry about getting a job. His bride suggested going into a church and praying for one, to which the husband agreed without much enthusiasm. They entered the nearest church to find an evangelist holding forth, not only saving souls but apparently healing the sick and crippled by the "laying on of hands."

"I can do that as well as he can," announced Walker, but Mrs. Walker, who, up to that time had noticed no special signs of sanctity in her husband, doubted and wanted to know what made him think so.

"Because all you have to do is have faith," Walker answered. "The man says so himself."

The young man went right home, borrowed his wife's Bible and proceeded to study it. That same year he became pastor of a small church at Eugene, Oregon. But there was only the barest living in it and, after a while, the minister became so ill he had to go to bed. It was so serious that the doctors could not help him, in fact, they were unable to find out what was the matter. One day he dismissed the doctors, called in witnesses, prayed over himself and then jumped out of bed, cured. Somehow this manifestation failed to impress the natives of Eugene as much as the minister expected and therefore, one Sunday, he preached his last sermon on the text:

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

A few weeks later he turned up in Joplin, Missouri, holding meetings in a tent. There he proved to his wife's satisfaction that he could do the "laying on of hands" as well as anyone. After the sinners had been attended to, she saw men and women go limping down the "sawdust trail," leave their crutches and come leaping back shouting loud hallelujahs. The Rev. Mr. Walker then broke the crutches over his pulpit and passed the contribution box. Mrs. Walker says that after each service the revivalist came home with a hatful of money.

People drove in from more than 100 miles away to have their children "treated" by the evangelist, but the field at Joplin was limited, causing the Rev. Mr. Walker to transfer his activities to Kansas City. There he employed singers and musicians of both sexes and, under a bigger tent and the title of "Sunshine Evangelist," staged such an impressive spectacle that soon one hat would not hold all the takings from a service. Even better than that, he raised money enough to build a tabernacle on a piece of ground valued at $65,000, and became so wealthy himself that he bought a hotel.

Mrs. Walker Showing How She Broke the Lock of the Tabernacle Open With Her Persuasive Hammer.

—On the Left—The Rev. Mr. Carl C. Walker in a Particularly Persuasive Moment.

His wife began to worry about these signs of "Mammon" being around and was shocked one day when her husband junked their old rusty "flivver" and drove up to their apartment in the tabernacle in a big, shiny, new, expensive car with gaudy yellow wheels.

"I knew that was the beginning of the end," said Mrs. Walker. "I knew that no minister who preached simplicity and humbleness from the pulpit, could get away with riding around in a gayly colored $5,000 motor car."

But nightly crowds at the Walker tabernacle grew. The building was extended to occupy an entire block. Tickets were given out each night, limiting applicants for miraculous cures to seventy-five. Each night Walker, standing with a Bible in his hand and, often dressed in overalls, preached a short but eloquent sermon. Then he began calling the numbers and the applicants for treatment, from No. 1 to No. 75, stumbled or were led or carried to the pulpit.

The healing ceremony was simple. There was the laying on of hands and then:

"Thank you, Lord!" uttered the evangelist.

Or—

"Arise and walk!" he often ordered sufferers.

Many deaf declared they had been made to hear. Many lame walked without a trace of previous difficulties.

Physicians, newspaper workers and doubters attended the services and heard themselves bitterly censured for not believing. They left still unconvinced, with the announcement that the evangelist probably used a form of hypnotism. Despite these scoffers, things went on most prosperously for the Walkers. Mrs. Walker became quite reconciled to having "Mammon's gold" around the apartment. It was the things that the gold attracted which soon made trouble. The evangelist had a lady secretary who became great friends with his wife. When Mrs. Walker was praising her husband's ability to persuade the sick that they weren't, the secretary one day answered:

"Yes. He's a great little persuader, but he also persuades in ways he shouldn't."

"You mean there is another woman?" Mrs. Walker demanded.

"Lots of them," said the secretary. "That lure of his that calls sinners up the sawdust trail is just as good at luring ladies along the primrose path."

Mrs. Walker did not believe it for a moment but she investigated just the same. Presently she denounced her husband publicly and sued him for divorce, charging infidelity. There was much hullaballoo in the church and city and it was soon hushed up with a divorce and a handsome cash settlement. Mrs. Walker went to New York, and Rev. Mr. Walker announced that he had been so upset by the "unjust charges" that it would be necessary to recuperate on a long trip to the Holy Land.

A few days before the steamer left, another almost miraculous coincidence occurred. The divorced Walkers met accidentally in the streets of the world's biggest city, giving the evangelist opportunity to reproach his ex-wife for ruining his health by leaving him.

"Why don't you heal yourself, if you are so good at it?" she replied scornfully. Thus challenged, the evangelist said that he would and he did. He invited his ex-spouse for a taxi-ride in Central Park, put his arm around her and made love the same way as in the old, flaming-youth college days. Once more the persuasive voice and the laying on of hands worked their miracle. Next day, at the Little Church Around the Corner, they were remarried and went on the Holy Land tour together.

The Rev. Mr. Walker's triumphal return to Kansas City with his wife was greeted by the biggest and most profitable audiences he had ever had. Everything was lovely for a few weeks and then a large fly appeared in the ointment of their happiness. It was a $10,000 breach-of-promise suit against the evangelist. Mrs. Walker was furious, but her husband explained that the cause of the suit had happened while his better half was divorcing him and he was so unhappy as not to be responsible.

Mrs. Walker allowed herself to be persuaded—but where was the $10,000 to come from to heal the other woman's broken heart and hush her mouth that had not been broken? The Rev. Mr. Walker happened to be short of ready money just then, so he got down on his knees and prayed that the Lord would provide. The prayer was answered in a manner that tinged on the miraculous. His wife listened to him and was moved to take her cash alimony settlement out of the savings bank and pay her rival's claim. No sooner, however, had this cloud been erased from the horizon than a bigger one loomed.

Mrs. Walker announced to friends that she had been walking on a downtown street when she saw her husband's shiny motor car draw up to the curb, a door open and a flashily dressed woman enter the car.

"I ran up to the car door just before my husband started away and demanded to be admitted," she said. "He slammed the door in my face, and he and the woman laughed at me as they drove away."

Mrs. Walker since has charged that her husband, who preached nightly against drinking, card playing, dancing and use of the lipstick, began a whirlwind life of drinking and carousing.

At a preliminary hearing in the Municipal Court, Rev. Mr. Walker denied his wife's charges and wished to pray, but the judge would not let him and set a date for another hearing. When the evangelist failed to attend, a warrant was issued but the police could not find him at the tabernacle apartment.

"He is hiding there, shielded by his housekeeper," Mrs. Walker said and when the police paid a second visit they found him in his underwear, hiding in the bathroom. To get him they had to break down the door and beat off two dogs the housekeeper set on them. But when Mrs. Walker won her decree, with lawyer's fees and $50 a week alimony, her husband always managed to be out of town when she tried to collect.

Asserting that she had helped pay for the furnishings of the tabernacle, both the auditorium and the apartment, Mrs. Walker went there with a force of deputy sheriffs who found the place locked and dared not break in without a court order.

"Well, I dare!" stated Mrs. Walker, and with a hammer knocked off the padlock, permitting the minions of the law to enter. Then they carted away:

One electric refrigerator, one vacuum cleaner, one electric heater, one bed, complete, one vanity dresser, one breakfast table, four breakfast chairs, one kitchen range, one davenport, two overstuffed chairs, two rugs, one radiant fire heater, one end table, one bridge lamp, one chifferobe, one living table, two stools, one magazine rack, one lawn mower, one throw rug, one shotgun, one xylophone, one library table and 195 folding chairs.

Several "pillars of the church" appeared to protest against the sheriff's sale, but Mrs. Walker said, "Where's my money?"

The "pillars" replied that the Rev. Mr. Walker was praying that the money would be found.

"That prayer will have to be answered in just 15 minutes," stated John A. Deming, deputy sheriff, and it was.

Within that time the "pillars" paid $900 in cash and bound the church to pay $50 more weekly.

In return for this they got the property back.

But the Rev. Mr. Walker has now vanished, his church has had to hire a substitute and is now praying for light as to how it can get out of that obligation to pay its ex-minister's ex-wife's alimony.

How to Get Rid of Unwanted Animals?

Man, Having Usurped the Domains of the Four-Footed Creatures, Now Is Faced With the Problem of Exterminating Undesirable Beasts, From the Little House-Mouse to the Recently Outlawed Wild Camels of Australia

The Australian Dingo, or Wild Dog, Is Held Responsible for the Destruction of 20,000,000 Sheep, Yet It Serves a Useful Purpose in Keeping Down the Rabbit Pest. In Fact, Australians Face a Dilemma. To Exterminate All the Rabbits Would Mean Destruction of Sheep Herds by Dingoes; to Wipe Out the Dingoes Would Bring an Enormous Increase in the Number of Rabbits. Eventually Both Will Have to Go.

The Patient Camel Is a Delight to Children Visiting the Zoo, But Not to the Farmers of Australia. Imported as a Beast of Burden for Desert Wastes, the Animal Was Superseded by the Motor Truck. Kind-hearted Owners, Rather Than Slaughter the "Inoffensive" Creatures, Turned Them Loose to Shift for Themselves. They Bred Rapidly in Their Wild State and Now Are a Serious Menace to All Crops. Their Weight Enables Them to Crash Through Ordinary Fences, and Through the Holes They Make Rush in Myriads of Smaller Crop Devastators.

The World's Most Accomplished Fruit Thief. The Giraffe's Long Neck Makes It a Serious Problem to the Fruit Growers of Africa. It Generally Robs by Night, But Even in the Daytime Its Extraordinary Periscope Vision Enables It to See and Elude Approaching Defenders of the Fruit.

A GREAT fortune awaits anyone who can tell the world how to get rid of unwanted animals.

The "Camels Destruction Act," just passed by the Australian Government, shows that one more beast has added himself to the long list of those that recently have learned to "domesticate" man and defy him to exterminate them.

When this ungainly heavyweight, with a previously blameless reputation, joined the ranks of animal marauders, it was a calamity to the Australian Dominion. More than other nations the Australians have been persecuted by animal and vegetable invaders and vexed by the problem of freeing themselves. To grow crops of any sort or raise sheep, it had long been necessary to surround most farms and ranches with a vermin-proof fence.

This had to be high enough to keep kangaroos and dingo dogs from jumping over, and tight enough to prevent rabbits, kangaroo rats and other small pests from creeping through. But, as the cost of so much fencing ran into a staggering sum, the fence was not built any heavier than necessary. Hardly had Australia found out just how strong and expensive the fence had to be, when the camel "went bolshevik," and literally smashed the whole scheme.

The camel is a clumsy brute, and could not jump over much of anything, certainly not a fence that is "kangaroo-high," but he is heavy and strong and unscrupulous. Shortly after dark, guided by his homely nose, he reaches a fence from the other side of which come smells of good things to eat, and simply crashes through it. Then the emblem of prohibition eats his fill of the farmer's crops until dawn, when he calmly departs through the hole he made.

This would be bad enough, but what the camel eats and tramples with his big, spongy hoofs is an insignificant amount of the damage he causes. Through that breach in the fortifications pours all the rest of the vermin. If the fence-crashing occurs Saturday evening, the farmer appearing Monday morning may find himself a ruined man. So Australia has declared a war of extermination against the wild camel. She has declared plenty of others, but this one she ought to win because her adversary is a good target for a rifle.

It may be news to some readers that there are such things as wild camels in the lone continent. They do not belong there and there were no wild ones until quite recently when the motor truck made their employment no longer profitable as beasts of burden. Then their kind-hearted owners, rather than slaughter them, turned the hump-backed animals loose, to work out their own salvation if they could.

They could and they did. It was the greatest mistake Australia has made since they imported the prickly cactus but not so deadly as the rabbits. Up to that time, since its first importation, the camel had been a domesticated animal that had thrived in the climate, was useful and had done no harm. Now as a wild animal, he became a scourge.

Australia could well afford to pay a billion dollars to anyone who can tell her an inexpensive and practical way to get rid of her undesirable animal citizens and so could many other countries. It is estimated that in the United States rats destroy almost as many dollars' worth of property as human thieves make away with.

Whenever the white man invades a new country, as, for instance, he has recently done in Kenya, Africa, the wild animals flee in terror at his firearms, and other noises, smokes and strange smells. But presently they slink back, and, from cover, watch the strange creature. What they see is fascinating and tempting, something to stir an animal's wits. Man grows and hoards food in such quantities as wild animals never find in their natural environment. He has also under protection such helpless and good-to-eat creatures as poultry and sheep.

After a while, led by the cockroach, the mouse and the rat, the bigger animals start trying out schemes for robbing the white man, without getting hurt, just as man robs the bee of his honey without getting stung, and the cow and sheep of their milk and wool. In other words, they start to domesticate man, and some of them are quite successful. It seems that any animal is likely to turn on man and rob him. When the white man first started settling Kenya nothing ran faster or further than the timid giraffe, and one would expect it to be the last to turn robber. It was one of the first, and remains one of the worst.

As a vegetable and fruit thief the giraffe has natural advantages. He is swift, far-sighted and his eyes are on top of a lofty movable observation tower. The rascal is well fixed to see if anybody is coming, and his body is thin enough to hide behind trees and bushes.

Having sneaked up to the plantation, that longest neck in the world comes in handy again, for with it he can reach a prodigious distance over a fence, and in an orchard it is a splendid fruit-picker. Of course the planter has his dog, and if that dog goes charging and barking into the orchard at night the giraffe will go away. But if he is a prudent canine he just barks where he is until his master gets his boots and trousers on and accompanies him with a gun. When the man returns, having seen nothing, the dog stays at his heels, if he is wise. About as soon as the planter is asleep, the dog's voice announces that something is back in the orchard again. But that can't be kept up all night, many nights.

Should the dog tackle the foe all alone, the fleet and timid giraffe will not hurt him but some night he will make the acquaintance of certain wild and distant relatives, the wild dogs of Africa. These canines, like the dingoes of Australia, have a pet hatred for their civilized, well-fed and high-hat, noisy cousin and enjoy nothing better than to ambush and eat him. Most domesticated dogs are saved from this fate because in their daylight walks with their masters their noses inform them that a pack of these treacherous creatures has been reconnoitering the night before.

Perhaps the most discouraging feature of man's attempts to dispossess his undesirable co-tenants of the planet is the fact that when he does succeed in evicting one, others, as bad or worse, move in. A vigorous campaign of shooting, trapping and poisoning resulted in almost eliminating the hyenas, leopards, wild dogs and jackalls from certain sections of Kenya. Immediately the herds of oribi and reedbucks, which these carnivora had fed upon, increased in astonishing numbers. The menace to sheep and cattle had passed, but the oribi and reedbuck, freed of their natural enemies, became bold and caused far more destruction by devastating the crops. Even buffalo have become a problem.

Australia's rabbit plague has cost millions of pounds, and more than twenty million sheep have been killed by the wild mongrel curs called dingoes. Over $3,500,000 has been paid in rewards for killing the wallaby, which is only rivalled in destructiveness by that larger jumper, the kangaroo. In many lands the opossum plays havoc with fruit crops, but the little animal is good to eat, and, therefore, being a bounty in himself, has been eliminated in some areas. Then it was found that he was an enemy of the sawfly, which, in his absence, filled the air in such numbers that it destroyed even more crops.

Stoats, weasels and ferrets are glad to kill rabbits in other countries, where rabbits are scarcer, so they were imported into Australia. But for some reason, in that climate they preferred raiding the farmer's poultry and now the Government has three more animals to worry about while the rabbits remain. The problem is not only complicated but dangerous. It is said that toxicologists have cultivated a disease germ which they believe might exterminate the rabbits but they dare not try it until they first find one to wipe out the dingo. The sheep herders say that if the dingo's rabbit supply is suddenly cut off it will make a concerted raid on all the sheep flocks and put an end to the industry.

In Madagascar, the large island off the east coast of Africa, hardy white settlers are plagued by a little-known animal called the tenrec. The tenrec's claim to fame is that, for size and weight, he can open his mouth further than any other living animal. He lives chiefly on worms and bugs, and his chief delight is to burrow and plow around gardens where succulent worms and bugs abound. He helps the farmer by devouring crawlers and insects that feed on his produce, but what he does to the growing plants is nobody's business. The natives solve the tenrec problem by killing and eating the foot-long animal whenever they can, for the tenrec grows very fat and suits well the aborigine palate.

The American coyote combines the destructiveness of the wolf and the rabbit. All our Western States offer bounties for his scalp. As his pelt is also valuable, he is hunted afoot, on horseback, by auto and even by aeroplane. Yet the coyote cannot be exterminated, as he is fleet, cunning and wise to the ways of humans.

Man, having crowded the animals out of the choicest spots of the earth, now finds that they have come back to collect rent. His methods make this easy and convenient, especially for the insect tax collector. For instance, the cotton boll weevil used to lead a difficult existence because cotton, in its wild state, was scrubby, tough and scattered about. Under cultivation, the bolls are big and succulent and the delighted insect finds whole acres devoted to nothing else. This makes it possible for it to multiply beyond Nature's wildest dreams.

The rat usually does not bother to attack the crops in the field, that would be too much trouble. He lets man, after fighting with the other animals and the insects, carry in the fruits and kernels, and when these are nicely stored Mr. Rat collects his tax.

Science frowns on some of the new rat baits which most people think contain poison but, in reality, owe their effectiveness to rat-disease germs. These germs are known to be fatal to some domestic animals and dangerous, if not fatal, to man. The best scientific opinion today is that it is not advisable to exterminate any creature, even the rat, for fear of unforeseen complications, but to keep all creatures in check.

From the seventeen-year locust to the giraffe, creatures are a menace only when too numerous. This applies to a man himself, who spreads war and destruction when his numbers outgrow his food supply. An overcrowded nation becomes the most dangerous "vermin" in the world to its neighbors.

Distinctive Period Cabinets

The Georgian

The Georgian period includes English furniture produced between 1714 and 1760, noted for curves with a tendency to massiveness. The cabriole legs are decorated with carving. This model is a complete, electrically-equipped radio-phonograph of impressive character—finely made and beautifully finished. Eight-tube, screen-grid chassis. Price $270, without tubes.

The Late Italian

A period style name applied to furniture which originated in Italy during the seventeenth century. The character is sculptural and largely architectural. Carving in low relief is the chief form of decoration. This model is an unusually handsome highboy of butt-walnut with a distinctive serpentine front. Eight-tube, screen-grid chassis. Price $172, without tubes,

The Sheraton

A style named for its originator, Thomas Sheraton, who furnished designs to English cabinetmakers between 1790 and 1800. It is noted for charm and delicacy of detail, subtle curves and chaste, classic lines. A beautifully finished highboy with a serpentine front—a new feature in radio cabinet design. Eight-tube, screen-grid chassis. Price $152, without tubes.

The Hepplewhite

This style was named after its creator, George Hepplewhite, an English cabinetmaker whose design began to influence British furniture-making about 1760. It is noted for the use of straight, refined lines and graceful curves. This model is a simple, graceful lowboy in harmony with practically any home setting. Eight-tube, screen-grid chassis. Price $136, without tubes.

Where We Got Our Modern Furniture

Discovery by the Italian Government of Remarkably Up-to-Date Beds, Chairs and Tables in Ancient Etruscan Tombs Directs Attention to the Antiquity of the Shapes of Many Familiar House Furnishings of Today

RECENT excavations by the Italian Government in the long-buried tombs of ancient Etruria have brought to light remarkable pieces of furniture. Spring beds, armchairs and folding tables, very little different from those in use today have been discovered, although archeologists estimate the age of the finds at 2,500 to 3,000 years.

Man's progress from savagery to civilization is reflected in his household furnishings, and those found in the tombs of the old Etruscans indicate they had reached a very high state of civilization before being conquered by the younger and cruder Latins in the third century before Christianity.

The history of Etruria has been so overshadowed by the grandeur of its conqueror, Rome, that until lately not very much was known of its beginnings. The excavation of the tombs now being done by the Italian Government is expected to bring out much additional ancient history as it has already revealed the remarkable degree of civilization they had attained, as shown by their furniture. In the past, of course, many objects have been dug up in the old Etruria, but they are mostly relics of the period following Rome's dominance. The tombs now being explored are underneath the ruins of the buildings and cities erected in the Roman era.

Etruria was the ancient Italian province north of Latium. It was separated from the city of Rome only by the river Tiber. About 1000 B. C. a great migration of Greeks to Etruria took place, and from then arose its civilization and power. Just before 600 B. C. the Etruscans held all Italy from the Tiber to the Alps, most of Latium, including Rome itself, and the entire province of Campania south of Latium.

It disputed with Carthage for the mastery of the Tyrrhenian Sea, a large arm of the Mediterranean, and at one time ruled over the island of Corsica, which 25 centuries later was to produce Napoleon Bonaparte. But from the sixth century B. C. its power declined. First, Rome and the Southern States threw off the Etruscan yoke and about 300 B. C. Rome conquered Etruria, and from that time on it was an integral part of the Roman Empire.

The influence of the Greek immigration of 1000 B. C. is seen in the weapons, pottery and furniture found in the tombs now being uncovered. The Etruscans, like most of the other very ancient races, buried with the deceased his favorite weapons, furniture and household decorations.

The Etruscans, with their own language, just now being deciphered for the first time, developed the art of furnishing the home quite as independently as they lived and fought for domination. While the Etruscans profited by the types introduced by the early Greeks, they had enough originality later to develop their own furniture, going far beyond anything in grace and comfort that Greece produced.

Because furniture was a luxury at first, the earliest chair was a throne, reserved for the chief or for the god. It conferred dignity to sit on this throne, while every one else had to crouch on the floor. And the Etruscans developed an original type, with a barrel-shaped bottom, and a large rounded back, with curving sides—all in one piece. Here is the origin of the modern armchair, with all the comfort associated with it.

It is most probable that this type of chair was developed from a log, which was hollowed out to form the seat, making a complete, one-piece throne. It was much more comfortable than the Greek straight-backed thrones, or the great stone throne found in the Palace of Minos in Crete, and believed by some to be the oldest chair on earth.

The ancient Egyptians and Babylonians also had chairs with legs, made of many pieces of wood, often covered or inlaid with metal. When they sought artistic forms their artisans imitated the legs of animals or birds, producing what is now called the "Claw-foot" chair or table. For the table soon followed the chair.

Curious Roman Dining Couch of the First Century With Footstool, a Transition Formed Between the High Reclining Couch and the Chair.

The Etruscans were skillful workers in metal, especially in bronze, and on account of the abundance of this alloy, they utilized it largely for making their furniture. It lent itself easily to the various shapes and forms which these skillful artisans designed, taking the place of wood in many instances.

The Etruscans are credited with the invention of the first spring-bed, which was impossible without the use of copper. Weaving bands of this metal lengthwise and cross-wise, they achieved a spring-bed upon which their bodies found far greater comfort than was possible on a solid bed, no matter how thick the mattress may have been.

The inventiveness of the Etruscans anticipated much which is now considered ultra-modern. They had stools with four legs—and folding stools, even, with collapsible seats. These stools were light and easily carried, being used for temporary purposes at funerals and games and other places where no permanent seats were provided. The seat was made of skin or woven material, something like our canvas. There are pictures on vase-paintings of slaves carrying these stools following their masters.

In the making of their couches the Etruscans manifested considerable variety and ingenuity, using rectangular and lathe-turned legs, sometimes supporting sphinxes, and many types of decorations and carvings on the legs and body of the couch. This was always covered with a very heavy mattress which sometimes reached down to the floor, according to some of the vase-paintings.

By far the larger part of these couches are of bronze, which lent itself easily to elaborate designs. It is especially interesting to note from the vase-paintings, which are real illustrations of the life of the people, that the Etruscans dined and banqueted with their wives, unlike the Greeks who never permitted their wives to appear at their feasts. The Etruscan women had far more freedom than the Greeks, as did the Roman women after them.

The charming foot-stools of the Etruscans were a later refinement, adding to the luxury of life. Many of these have carved legs ending in lion's paws, while some have a sphinx on either side.

There is considerable variety in the design of the Etruscan tables, which sometimes have three legs, sometimes four. Some have stretchers or leaves, so the hostess could enlarge them when company came. Others have a tray at the end. Some have crossed legs and are made entirely of bronze, quite artistic tea-tables they would be called now, although there was no such thing as tea or coffee served by the Etruscans, so far as is known. These small tables were used probably for serving light refreshment, probably wine and cakes, in the afternoon when guests called between meals.

The Etruscans also had a large variety of chests in which clothing and more costly treasures were kept. Some of these are oblong boxes, with paneled sides, others are round with short feet in the form of animals' paws, all made of bronze, which has helped in their preservation for twenty-five or thirty centuries.

Some artistic urns were made for preserving the ashes of those whose bodies were cremated. One of these, dating back to the seventh century B. C., has been recovered. It is quite ornate, standing on four legs, with a gabled top, all covered with bronze plating, decorated in geometric designs of considerable intricacy and ornateness.

The cabinet-maker of today who loves the grain of the natural wood and has a "feel" for every curve in his work, is strikingly like the wood-worker of ancient Greece, Etruria and Rome, even though many centuries have rolled between them. The most highly prized wood, according to Pliny, was the citron, which "gave rise to the mania for fine tables and extravagance with which the women reproach the men when they complain of their vast outlay upon pearls."

Cicero was not one of the wealthiest of the Romans, yet he is said to have given one million sesterces (about $50,000) for a citron table. It was considered more valuable than gold, its color being especially notable. It is said to have resembled "wine mixed with honey, the veins (grains) being most refulgent." This wood is described as having "veins arranged in waving lines, or else forming spirals like so many little whirlpools." One of the most famous of these citron tables was said to have belonged to Monnius, a freedman of the Emperor Tiberius. It was almost four feet in diameter, made of a single piece.

Maple was also used by the Romans, two species being described; one of extreme whiteness, the other "covered with wavy spots running in all directions." Beds and tables were made of maple, while beach was used for chairs, tables and chests. The value of the cedar was well understood, this wood being used for "work which is either to be exposed to the air, or buried underground, because it does not decay." The art of veneering was quite common, ebony being used to cover some of the most costly furniture.

The ancient carpenter and joiner had practically the same tools at his disposal as the modern wood-worker. He had axes, saws, planes, hammers, chisels, borers, knives, lathes, screw-drivers and files. Pliny gives the information that: "Daedalus invented working in wood and for it the saw, the carpenter's axe (our hatchet), the plummet, the auger, glue and isinglass; but the level, the lathe and the key were invented by Theodorus of Samos". This takes the history of wood-working tools back to primeval times in Greece. Probably the lathe was a natural development of the potter's wheel, one of the most ancient inventions of man.

Homer gives a very interesting detail of the way in which Ulysses made a bed: "Next I sheared off all the light wood of the long-leaved olive, and rough-hewed the trunk upward from the root, and smoothed it round with the adze, well and skillfully, and made straight the line therto and so fashioned it into the bedpost, and I bored it all with the auger. Beginning from the bedpost, I wrought at the bedstead till I had finished it, and made it fair with inlaid work of gold and of silver and of ivory."

The art of veneering, gluing very thin layers of expensive woods on the cheaper woods, became most popular in Rome, where the citron, terebinth, maple, holly and other beautifully grained woods were used. In fact Pliny finds fault with this desire to cover up one wood with another, as a mark of degenerate luxury.

The wealthy resorted to plating with ivory, gold, and bronze, while the most ostentatious had furniture of solid gold, silver and ivory. It was just one more way of displaying wealth when Rome was at its acme of luxury and ready for the final plunge into degeneracy.

It would seem that the modern antique collector would have to go back further than the days of ancient Etruria and Rome to get something really out-of-date in the way of furniture. He may well say with the Preacher in Ecclesiastes:

"There is no new thing under the sun."

Jones [illegible] a sapphire from a ring belonging to Ruth Derrick [illegible] and several strands of her red hair from the dead man's [illegible] fingers and slips them [illegible] pocket before the sheriff [illegible] Palliser's mouth [illegible] a silver piece of eight. As they are wondering [illegible] Jack Shevlin enters with a bandaged head. He admits that [illegible] beat him to the draw and takes charge.

Jones decides to give him the letter the captain wrote but when he reaches in his pocket for it the letter is gone.

As Shevlin figures it out almost everyone in the place could have a motive for murdering Palliser.

Jones investigates the room [illegible] Palliser's face and in the dust on the floor discovers two sets of footprints—one apparently of Palliser and the other that can only belong to Ruth Derrick. He wipes out Ruth's and under the rug finds a blood-stained knife. He takes it to his room to hide [illegible] gave the girl [illegible]

[illegible]

In the [illegible] Jones and the sheriff discover the dead body of the stranger whom the cow-puncher saw talking with Palliser. Shevlin hints that Dorgan, a teamster, was the one who took the pot shots at Jones and they grab him as he is about to flee. Among his belongings they find several pieces of eight and a letter which tells how Palliser poisoned Dorgan's brother and cheated him out of a fortune in pearls.

CHAPTER XXXV.

New Suspicions.

MUMBLING to himself, Dorgan sat with his head in his hands.

I wasn't thinking so much about him, or Palliser either. I was thinking about that poor fellow out there in the sailing ship on the ocean, with that whale of a fortune in his fist, and death already grabbing him by one leg. It seemed to me that the truth yelled out loud from the letter. Palliser had poisoned him with the food that he sent back from his own table.

But the size of the wad spilled my ideas all over the table, so to speak. A million and a half! That's ninety thousand a year of interest—a fortune that managing could hold together forever. Suddenly everything seemed stepped up on a bigger and higher stage. It had looked like dirty, low revenge. But when a gent has glommed a million or so, it stops being thievery. It's more like statesmanship, I'd say.

The killing of Palliser seemed different, too.

When you've been stuck for a million, it's sort of a holy duty to get somebody for the crooked work!

The sheriff was just as easy, however, as though he never handled anything but cases on the scale of this one. Dorgan looked sick, but he looked fighting mad, too, if you can get an idea of how those two expressions would work out on a man's face. He was a pea-green; but his lips were snarling like a dog's about to bite.

Well, we took Dorgan down to the house.

When we got into the patio, we saw Frances Mornay there, playing with the golden cat. It was a sight to look at her leaning back in her chair with her head canted over to one side while she dangled a thread for the yellow beauty.

Frances Mornay stood up, looking startled, and as though she hoped the tied hands of Dorgan were a joke.

Dorgan sang out: "Miss Mornay! Lemme warn you that they're gunna tell you a yarn about me, but I want you to know that it's a lie! Every word of it, mostly! I—"

Shevlin was a gentle acting sort of a man, but he could have his rough moments, and he showed one now. He tapped the chest of Dorgan—a chest like one side of a big round barrel—and said to him: "You'd better choke off and be quiet. I'll do the talkin' for you, old son!"

Frances Mornay came running up to Dorgan, holding her cat steady with one hand and loving it against the side of her face, at the same time that she stood before Dorgan, looking small enough for the wind to pick up, and beautiful enough for the wind to want to. And she said to the sheriff: "But this is my friend Dorgan! He can't have done anything wrong! Why—I know all about him! We've talked about everything, haven't we?"

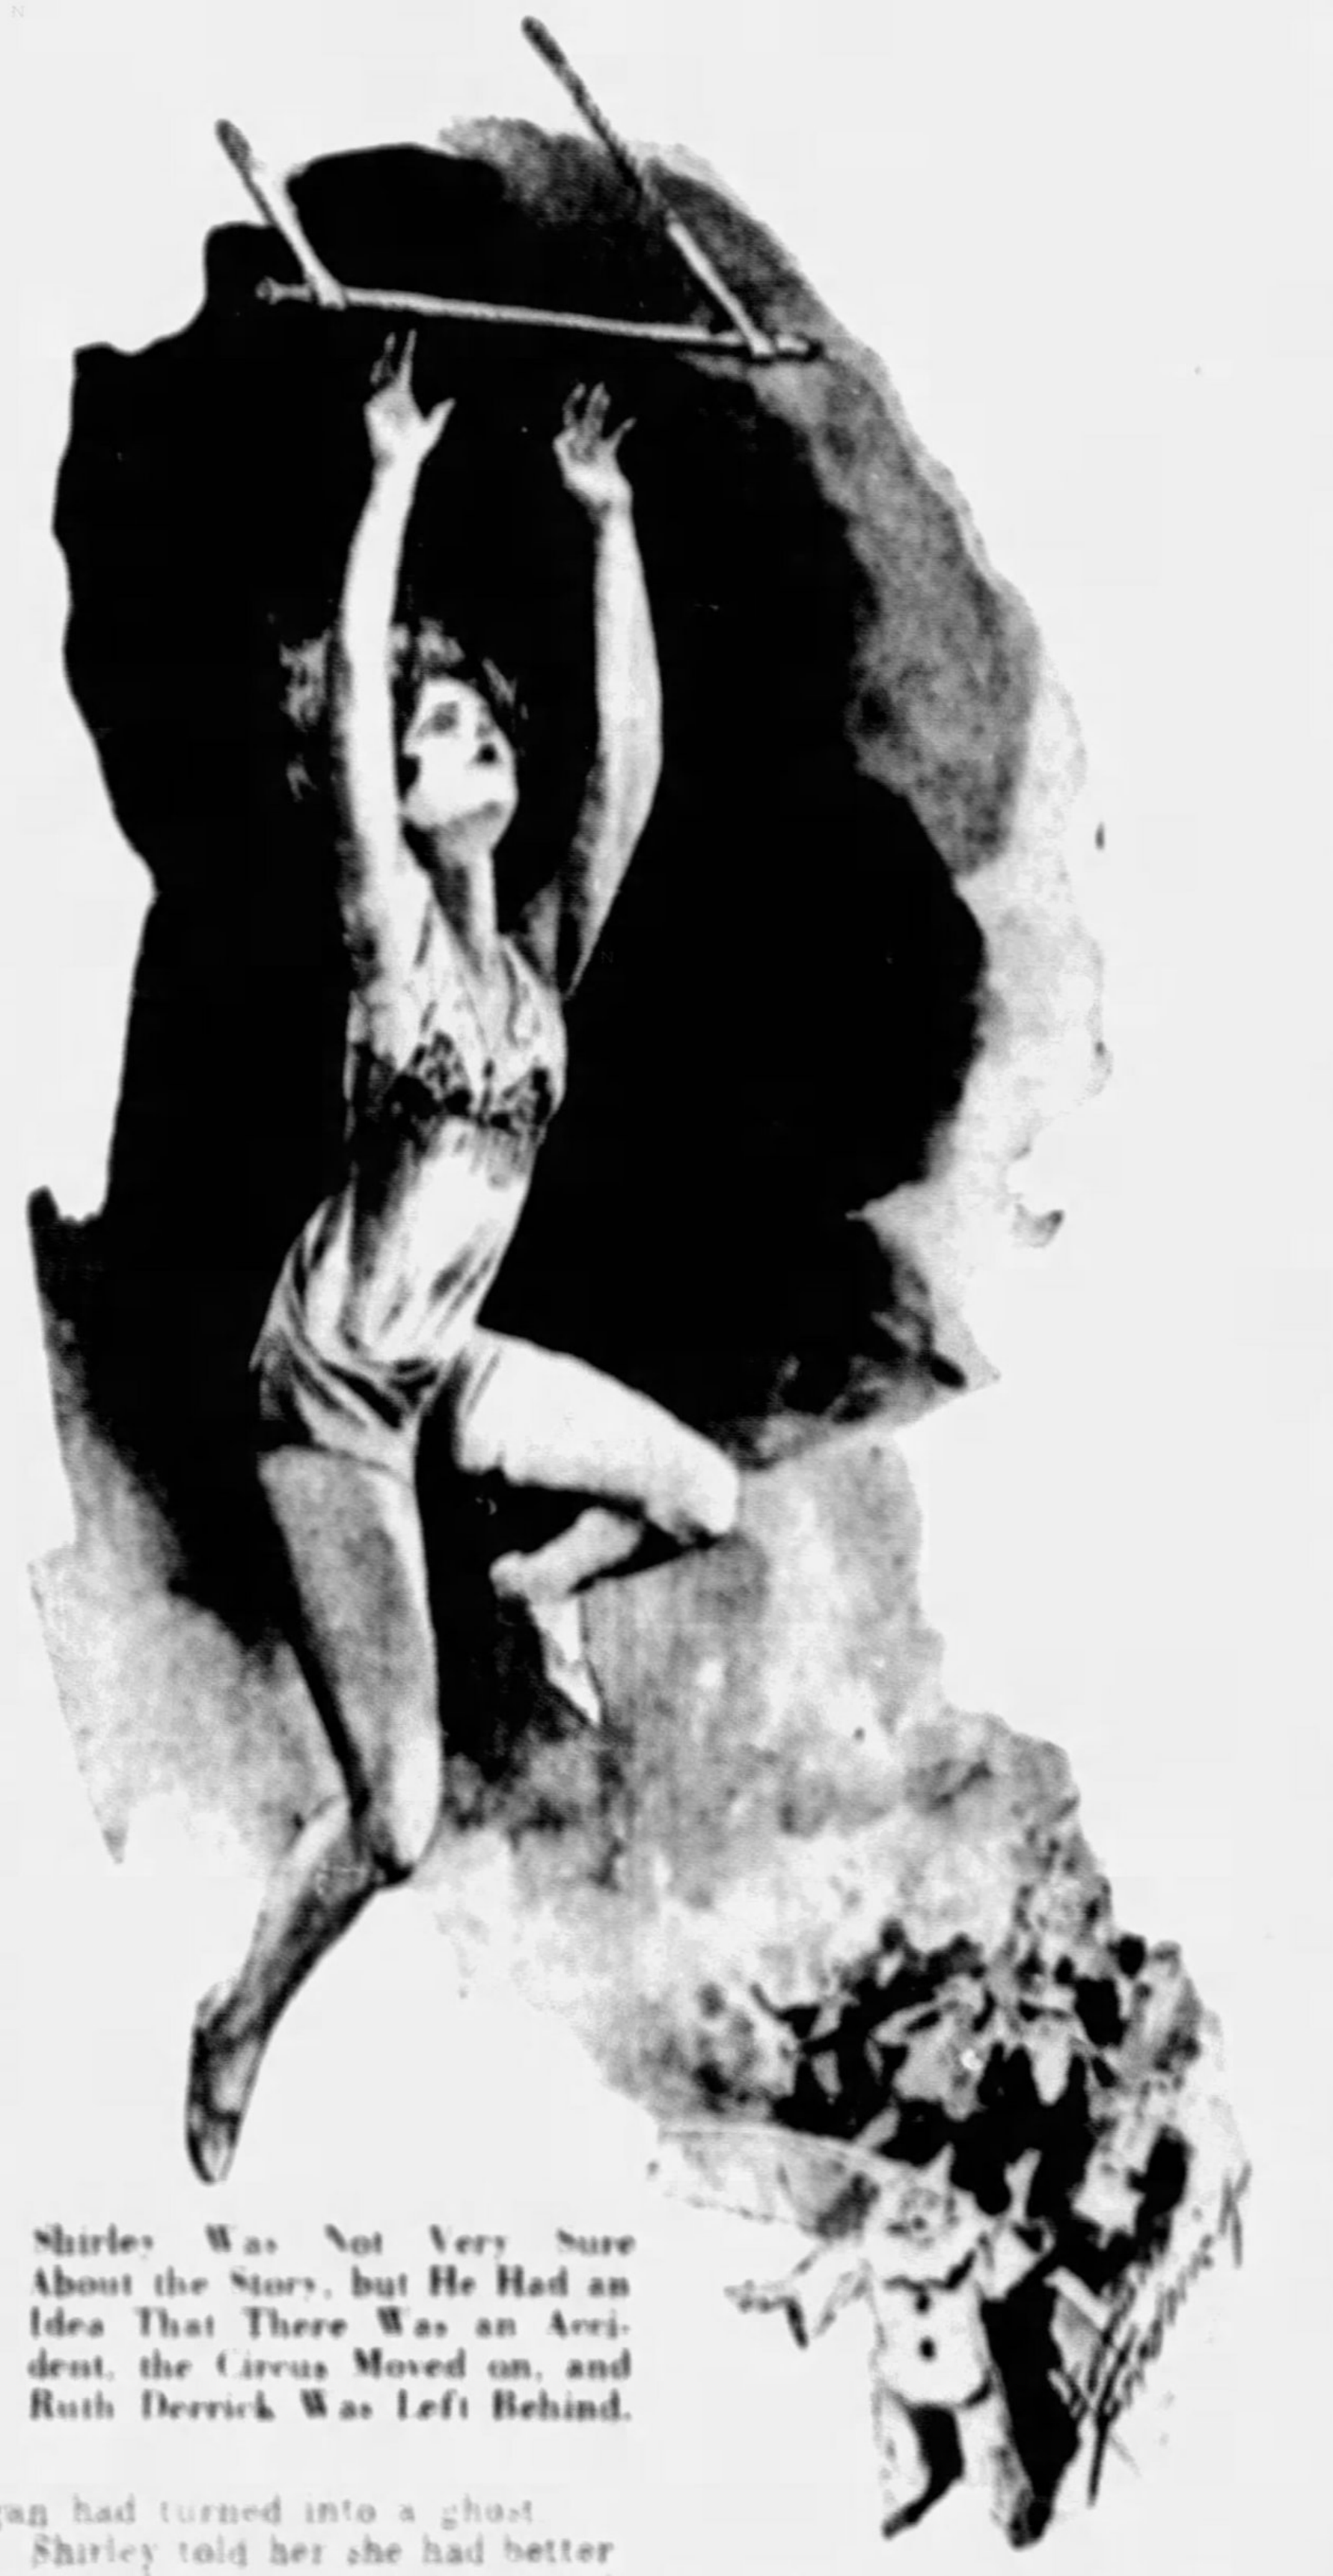
And she laughed a little, uncertainly.

Big Dorgan took on a good deal when she was so close to him, looking at him with a child's fondness for a big man. He worked his hands behind him and his chest worked, too. Then he said: "Ay, ay, ma'am, and everything that I told you was true. Even though I didn't tell you my whole life!"

"It is all an unhappy mistake," said Frances Mornay. "I know that. And I know that the sheriff will set you free."

Shirley came over beside her. He nodded and smiled down at her, but he had sense enough not to directly interfere with the sheriff. He merely acted like a man who wants to have something proved.

Shevlin read the letter to them, and the point of it was too direct for even a girl like Frances Mornay to miss. She backed up a little and looked as though Dorgan had turned into a ghost.



Shirley Was Not Very Sure About the Story, but He Had an Idea That There Was an Accident, the Circus Moved on, and Ruth Derrick Was Left Behind.

Shirley told her she had better go into the house, and she obeyed without a word, only turning at the arch to look back at us, wonderful graceful and wonderful pale; then she turned and fairly ran on into the house.

"You see how people take that letter?" said Shevlin.

"I see how you've made her take it," said Dorgan. "But she's only a girl. What does she know? She ain't a jury—"

He bit his lip as he said that, because he must have thought what a lot harder deal any twelve men would give him.

He glowered at us all, and was silent.

Said Shirley in a matter of fact way: "You think that this man is a perfect scoundrel? That he really came all the way from the East to trail Palliser, that he found him and murdered him in cold blood, and then that he put into his mouth one of the silver coins—almost as the Parthians did to Croesus?"

"Ha!" said the sheriff. "Then that accounts for the coin that Jones found in the mouth of Palliser!"

"Blast you!" bellowed Dorgan. "There ain't a line of truth in what you're saying!"

"I reckon that there's enough to hang you to a pretty high tree," said Shevlin. "We'll wait and see about that! If this story is right—"

"I'm gunna say one thing," said Dorgan. "Will you tell me how I ever got across that wall in a white shirt or even in trousers?"

I looked at the hulk of Dorgan, and I had to say: "Sheriff, that's too big for what I saw walking on the top of that wall!"

"Of course it is," agreed the sheriff at once. "I don't doubt that, though it's a pretty cool man that can figure out the height of a walking ghost that he seen on top of a wall! But suppose that he didn't go that way. I've already told you that I think that two people had hands in that murder!"

"Ha!" cried Shirley. "How on earth did you make that out?"

"Why, by the wounds on the breast of Palliser and in his throat; different hands and different knives made 'em, I'm sure!"

"That's extraordinary," said Shirley. "I never would have thought of that! Really different?"

"They are."

"A cut is a cut, and blood is blood, I would have said," remarked Shirley, quietly, to me. "But Shevlin understands these things wonderfully well!"

He seemed filled with admiration, but I had heard the idea before.

"As for Dorgan getting into the room," said the sheriff, "of course, he could climb up the wall on the west."

"Me? It ain't possible for any man," said Dorgan.

"Jones has done it, for one," said Shevlin.

Dorgan started to answer, but he finally closed his mouth and said through his teeth:

"You're agin me. I ain't going to say another word."

And he kept his promise. Not another syllable could be pried out of him.

"But," said Shirley in his thoughtful way, "it seems to me that there's one very major point—how did they get out of the room of the captain?"

"Of course, that's a point," agreed the sheriff. "But I've sounded the walls of the room, and I don't hear a hollow place. What I figger is that my partner, Jones here, was not counting time any too well. And there was longer wasted in breaking into that room than he thought. After all, what time would it have needed to throw a line out of the window and climb down it? Ay, or even for two active people to get down the surface of the wall itself, using the cracks between the rocks for finger and toe holds?"

He looked at me, and I tried to think back. Well, it seemed to me that there really hadn't been time between the end of that crazy laughter I heard and the time when I looked out from the window for anybody to have got away. If they had used a rope, yes, possibly they might have managed. But there would have been a rope left hanging from the window; and if they tried to climb down, it was not such an easy job—ten times harder than climbing up, you understand, because it would be such a lot harder to look for holds of any kind. It would be hard enough to find two people to do that sort of a job, together, and as fast as they would have had to slide down that wall in order to get shut of it before I looked down at them.

But still, a good many strange things are done, here and there, and the minute that you say a thing is impossible, you read in the paper the next week how it was done!

I simply shut up and said nothing, except to point out: "It would take a circus performer to cake walk across the top of that wall! Let alone shinneying down the wall outside the captain's window!"

"Here's a sailor, for one," said the sheriff, jerking his thumb at Dorgan, and Dorgan's face wrinkled, but he wouldn't speak.

We talked for a while about where we could keep Dorgan secure before we started back for the town. It was arranged that Palliser should be buried at dawn of the next day, and that then the whole lot of us would light out and make a forced march for the town. He would send one of the Mexicans ahead on a good horse to get to town and bring in our news.

They talked of other things, then. There didn't seem to be any importance about their conversation, at first, and it wasn't until it took a sudden turn that it began to have a lot of meaning; the result is that I don't remember very well how the subject began, but I think that it was the sheriff talking about how well Frances Mornay was standing up under the shock of the murder. Shirley's idea was that it would hit her hard, later on, and that she was apt to have a nervous breakdown. Just now, she was fighting hard to keep her head up.

They switched from that onto the fact that the captain hadn't spent much time with his niece, because he was always off at sea, and she was raised on land.

I can remember exactly what happened in the talk from that time forward.

The sheriff said: "Ruth Derrick's an old friend?"

"She's been with Frances for years. They saved her from a life as a bareback queen, or some such thing!"

The sheriff showed a good deal of interest and Shirley explained that Ruth had lost her parents when she was very young, and that an aunt or a cousin, or something, took her on with a traveling circus. The girl was picking up all kinds of stunts. She was riding bareback and doing trapeze, and such things, when the mother of Frances picked her up.

Shirley was not very sure about the story, but he had an idea that there was an accident, the circus moved on, and Ruth Derrick was left behind; then the mother of Frances got hold of her and took her into the family. Shirley said that that could be proved by asking Frances, of course.

But the sheriff shook his head.

He got up and walked up and down and up and down. Then he snarled at Dorgan to walk ahead of him; and he and I took Dorgan into a room that suited Shevlin.

It was like a dungeon, and it was cold and dank even on that bright Summer day. There was one small window that it would have broken a cat's heart to crawl through, and there was nothing but bare floor to sit on or sleep on. When Dorgan saw the place, he gave Shevlin one fierce look — but that was enough!

Then we went out and the sheriff locked the door.

I remarked that perhaps Dorgan would be just as safe if we were to throw in a straw mattress to him, but the sheriff shrugged his shoulders. He said that for a murdering devil like Dorgan he had less respect than he had for a pig, and like a pig he would treat Dorgan.

That surprised me. It was by all odds the worst side of the sheriff's character that I had ever seen.

Then he went back into the patio with me, after he had seen that the door of the cellar room was locked properly.

In the patio, Shirley was back in his chair, reading his book again, and he seemed surprised and only mildly interested when Shevlin came up to him again. He only said: "I haven't congratulated you, sheriff, on the fine work you've done here. This is the sort of thing that ought to get into print."

Said Shevlin: "I don't want congratulation. I want to know how old Ruth Derrick was when she left that circus?"

"She was around ten or eleven, I believe."

"Did she do any tight-wire work?" asked Shevlin.

"I think she did a little," said Shirley.

Then he jumped from his chair. I jumped, too, and looked at the thin, ragged top of the wall, along which the "ghost" had walked that night of the murder.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Rourke Turns Up.

THE sheriff didn't speak again and he didn't have to. I turned to Shirley, hoping that he would have something to say, but one look at his

When You Go To Bed

Can You Go To Sleep?

Now there's a way without drugs

—that not only brings instant sleep; but builds new energy while you sleep!

WHEN you go to bed do you have trouble going to sleep? Do you wake up in the morning feeling dragged out, nervous, irritable, unable to concentrate, your vitality drained by afternoon?

This, authorities say, keeps thousands of people below par. Never capable of their best.

Now modern medical science has found a natural way to combat this. A way without drugs. A way that usually brings instant, restful sleep and creates new vitality in mind and body while you sleep!

Morning finds you a new man—fresh, clear-eyed, buoyant. You have the vitality to carry you right through the day and into the evening.

A remarkable Swiss food-drink does this for you, as it has for thousands already. A simple food-concentrate that you mix with milk. A super-delicious drink that's making a great difference in the lives of thousands of nervous, sleep-starved people.

What It Is

This scientific food-concentrate is called Ovaltine. You simply take it in a cup of warm milk at bedtime. It brings you both sleep and vitality in a natural way.

First, it induces sleep. A few minutes after you go to bed, you get sound, natural sleep. For Ovaltine contains no drugs—as every doctor knows.

Then, while you sleep, its peculiar dietetic properties re-supply your system with the vitality lost during the busy day. For it contains, in easily digested form, practically EVERY building element necessary to vital energy. And thus you not only enjoy sleep as soon as you go to bed, you get the kind of sleep that rebuilds and reinvigorates.

You can take it night after night and not only not form a habit, as with drugs, but build up your health as well. You feel like a new person all the next day!

Do you wonder then, that people are flocking to its use? New to America, Ovaltine is being recommended by over 20,000 doctors. Used for 30 years in Europe, its use has spread to over 54 different nations. It marks one of the most important scientific findings of its time.

Try It Tonight

Doctors urge it not only for sleeplessness, but for all nervous and run-down conditions. They recommend it, too, for nervous, underweight children. Thousands of busy people take it during the day to relieve fatigue and restore vitality. Widely different from powdered, sugary, chocolate, malt or cocoa "mixtures," its scientific standing is unquestioned.

A few weeks' use will make an amazing difference in the way you feel. Your whole appearance will show the result of restful sleep and vitality restored this natural way.

Believe or not what people claim for Ovaltine—but try it. Try it without delay. Start tonight. Just 'phone your druggist or grocer now—ask for a can of Ovaltine.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Many people have asked us, "Does Ovaltine contain any drugs?" It is such a wonderful "night-cap" they feel it "simply must" contain something in the nature of a drug. In short, it works so well they sometimes "wonder" about it. So we wish to go on record here in public print, that Ovaltine has never at any time contained any sleep-producing drug of any kind whatsoever. It is made entirely from food and nothing but food. The government would not permit us to make such a statement in public print unless it could be proved beyond a doubt.

THE ESMOND MILLS — ESMOND, RHODE ISLAND

WHAT IS THE meaning of "PELAGE"?

Pelage is nature's way of providing complete protection from severe cold. Pelage is the thick, curly undercoating of fur which holds in the body heat of fur-bearing animals.

Esmond has studied the secret of fur warmth and has applied this "Pelage Principle" to the art of blanket making.

The new Esmond Pelage Blankets have a texture like fine fur — light and fluffy yet surprisingly warm.

Truly a startling innovation in blanket making!

The New ESMOND Pelage BLANKETS

PATENT RIGHTS RESERVED

The Golden Cat — by Max Brand

[illegible] face showed me that he was seeing the same picture that I saw. He was dumb with it.

Then Shevlin went into the house, and I knew why he had gone.

He came out again in about ten minutes, and he said that Ruth Derrick could not be found. None of the servants had seen her.

And at that my last thread of faith snapped.

I said gloomily: "She's cut and run, sheriff, when she had a glimpse of us bringing in Dorgan. She saw her partner gone."

"Partner to a rough sailor and teamster like Dorgan?" cried Shirley. "Sheriff, I can't sit by and hear such nonsense."

"You'll have to, though," [illegible] striking his [illegible] hand together. "What could have been the purpose—what motive could have induced—"

"She has a soft berth with you and Frances Mornay," said the sheriff. "She saw that Palliser might live on for years, making everybody miserable. Besides, she was afraid that something would happen to Frances in this house, where things have happened to other Mornays. It was that streak of superstition in her that made her determine to play the ghost herself. She made an agreement with Dorgan. How they broached it I don't know. But when two people want the same thing, it's easy enough for them to find ways of talking about it."

There was no doubt about that. We had proved that Dorgan wanted the death of Palliser for a hundred per cent revenge for the death of his brother. Now the hand was pointing so straight at Ruth Derrick that suddenly I groaned out:

"Sheriff, I thought she was the best and the squarest that ever stepped. But you've proved she's not, and you've proved it all by yourself! Now I can tell you the facts myself! Here's the proofs that will hang her! I found them in the room when I went in. I found them before another soul was there!"

I took them from my pocket and placed them before Shevlin—the wisp of red hair and the broken sapphire.

The sheriff pinched them together as he took them.

I said: "That hair I found in the hand of Palliser. I found this stone on the floor. It's the hair of Ruth, and [illegible] of her ring. Heaven help her!"

I ran out of that patio as though there was a whip hanging over me, and I got Pinto and rode the heart out of him across the hills. Rags went with me and the three of us kept on going until I was pretty nearly lost, and had to lay a careful course to return to the house of Mornay again. And when I [illegible] over the edge of the hill in the thick of the day, I shook my fist at that house and cursed it with my whole heart.

They would have Ruth Derrick by this time. There was not much chance that they would hang her, though. No, the juries in the West are always merciful to women. Besides, the majority of the crime would be loaded onto the shoulders of Dorgan. She would simply drag out a dozen years behind the bars and come out as I had seen other women come from prison, hard as steel and brittle as glass.

That house had become the most hateful thing in the world. I had to force myself to gather up the reins, ready to start on again, when Rags whined and I looked around into the face of Dennis Rourke.

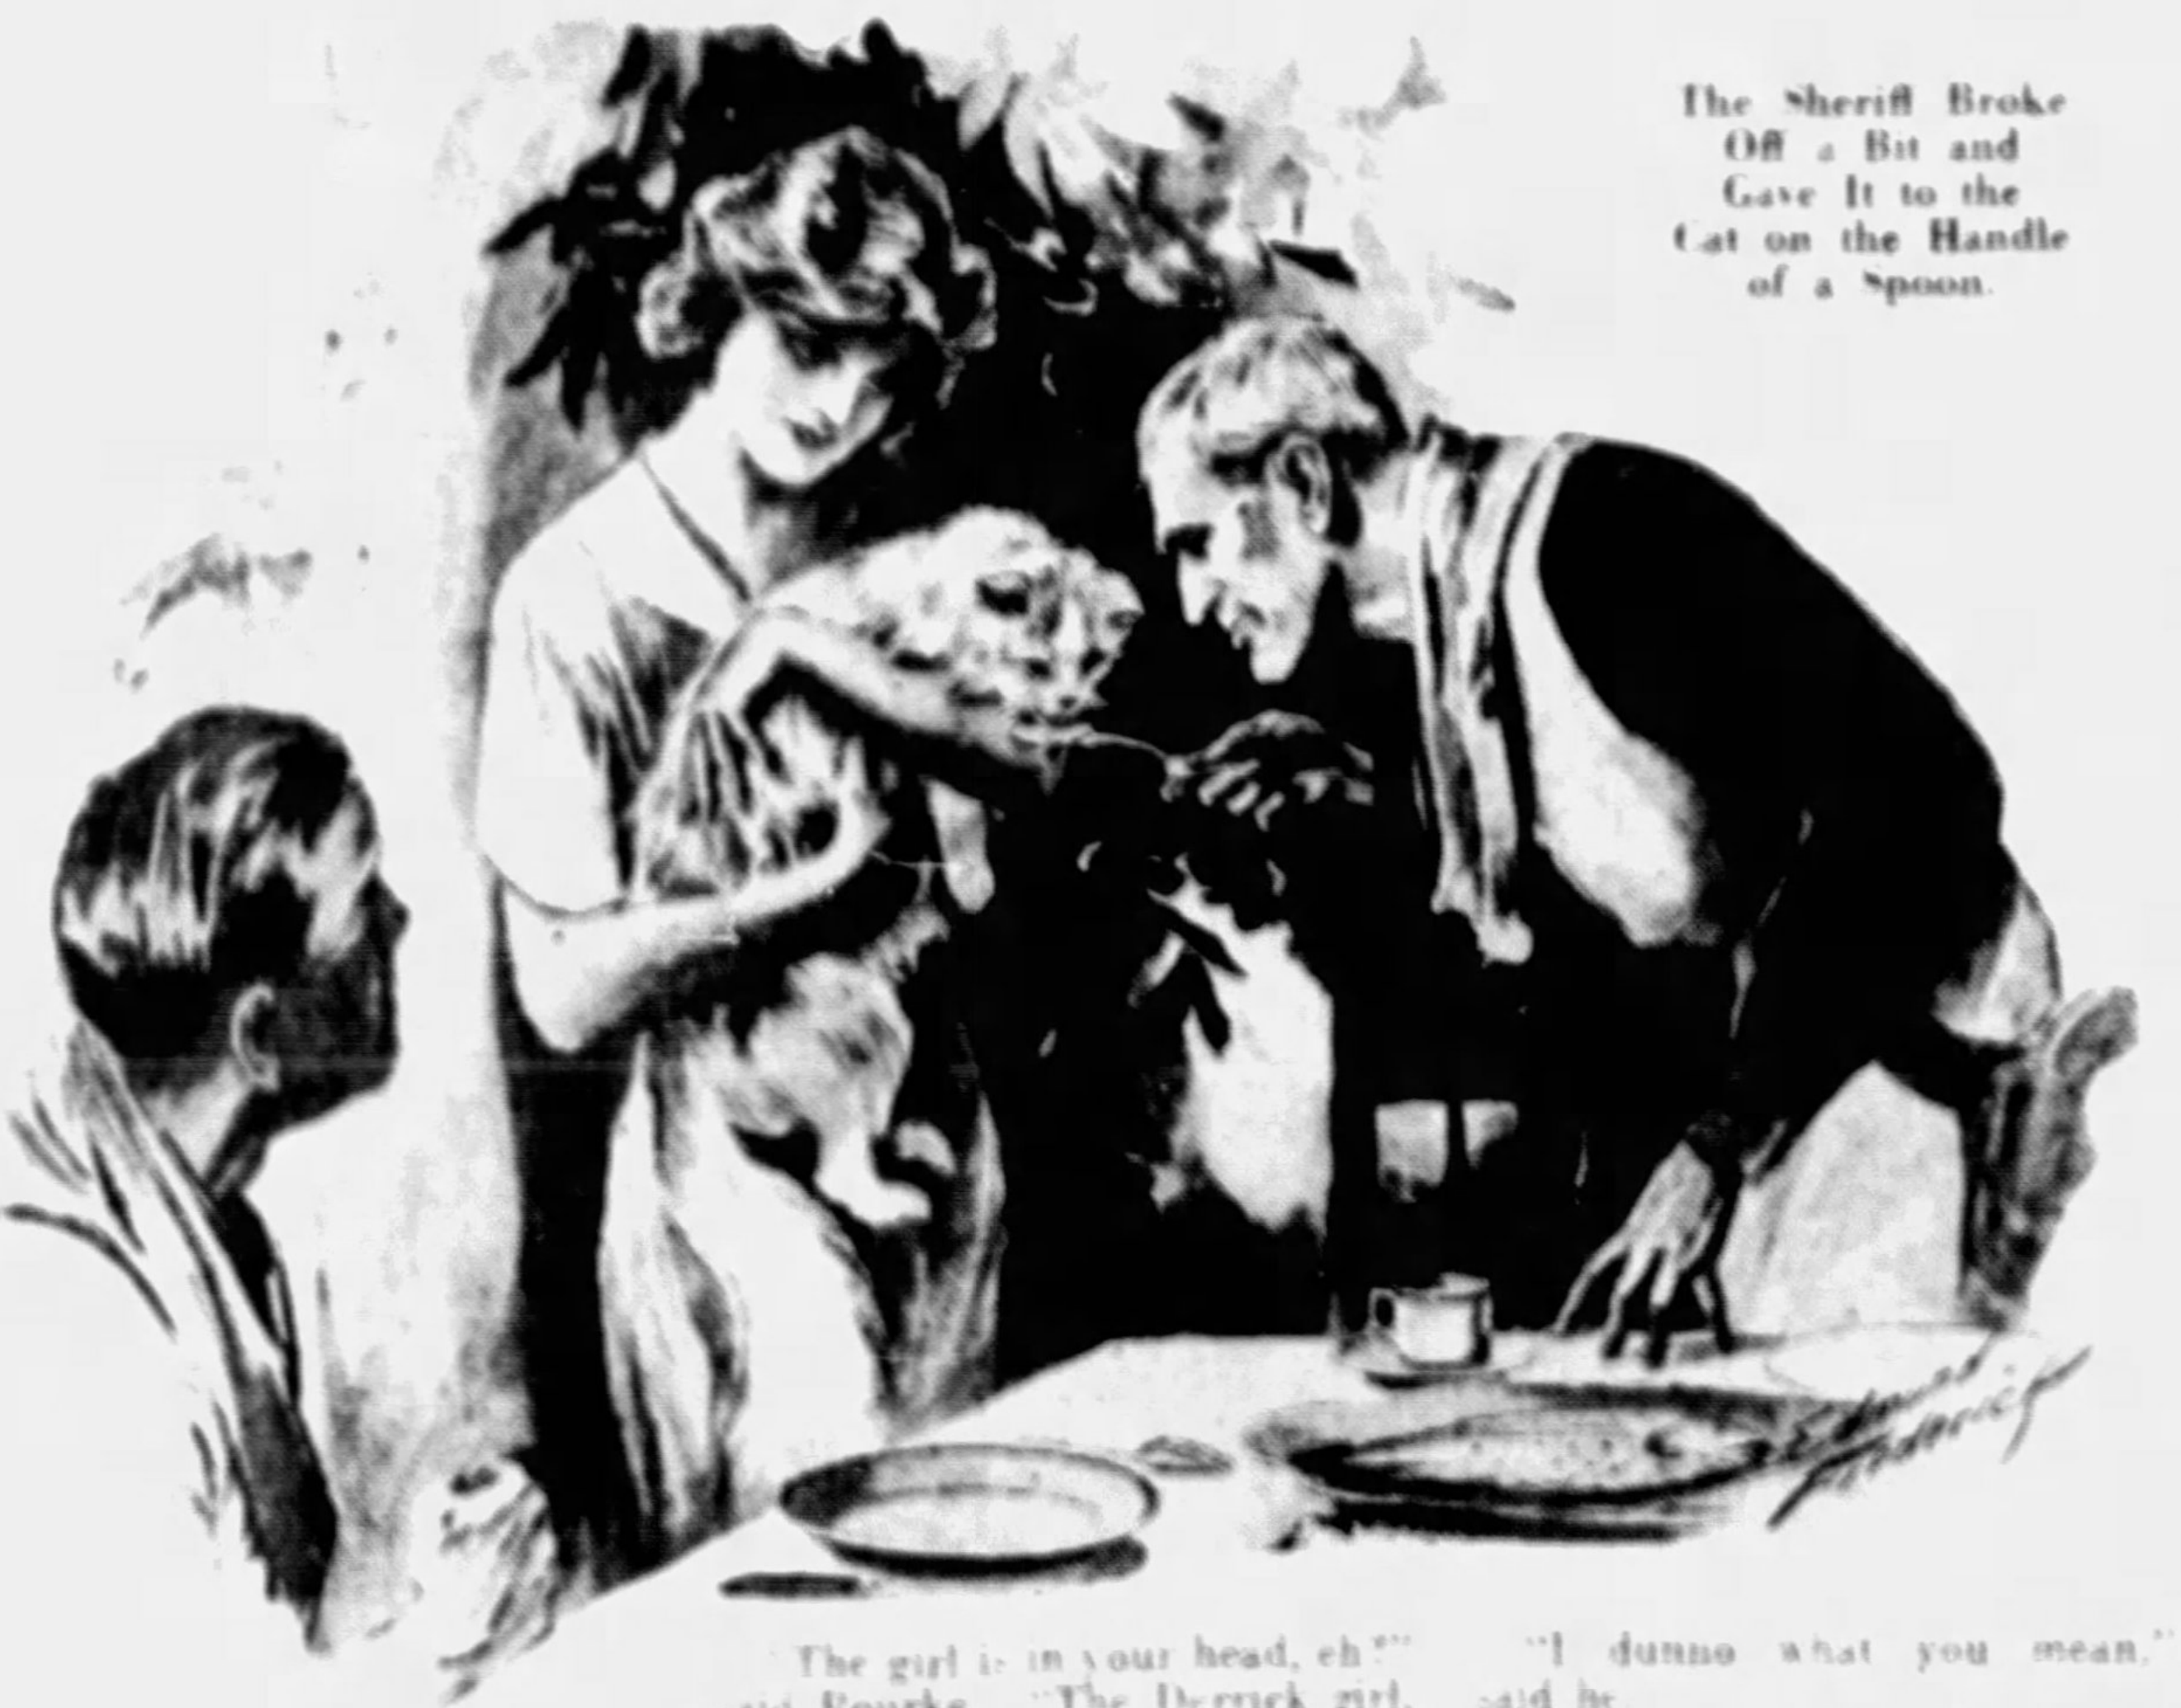
It looked like a head hanging there among the branches of the tree, then the wind stirred the boughs, and I could see the man and the horse better. Rourke was grinning at me in a pretty cheerful way. And to see the smile on his face made me angry.

I said to him: "You poor sap, why do you sit there and split your face? What have you done to be proud of?"

"I was laughin' at the fool look you wore, kid," said Rourke.

I almost forgot my troubles, Ruth Derrick and all, while I looked at Rourke's smile.

"What you live on out here, Denny?" said I. "Excitement, or fernroots? Come around and I'll chuck a heel of a loaf or a stale biscuit over the wall to you."



The Sheriff Broke Off a Bit and Gave It to the Cat on the Handle of a Spoon.

"Thanks," said Rourke. "That's spoke like a real bunkie! But I live on news, Johnny! It keeps me fat."

That made me blink again. Suddenly I said to him: "Denny, come out and tell me the truth: you wanted to help Frances Mornay and so you sashayed up the back wall and slipped through the window and knifed—"

I stopped. While I talked, I realized more and more that, no matter what crazy idea got into my head, Rourke wasn't the sort of a fellow to run a knife into an old man like Palliser. He couldn't go crazy enough to do that. Not even the face of Frances Mornay was pretty enough to make him so wild.

"Go on," said Rourke.

"You ain't had enough to interest me," I told Denny.

"I'm not bad, but I'm just playful," said Rourke. "How is the sheriff?"

"He was a mite upset by that bullet of yours. You can thank heaven that you didn't kill him."

"I did," said Rourke. "I thanked heaven twice. Once for dropping the sheriff without putting out his lights, and once for enabling me to set loose my playmate, Cattrin."

"I had a guess that your friend and you must of got pretty chummy," said I.

"Him and me? Like two sisters," said Rourke. "I been hangin' around waitin' for another look at his pretty face!"

"I've only seen him once, and that time he looked like he'd just swallowed a rusty nail," I told Rourke.

"He'll swallow more than that when I meet up with him again," said Rourke. "That boy is a bad one, Johnny, and if I was you, I'd wear padded gloves in handling him. Otherwise, he'll put a brand on you!"

"Thanks," said I, "but when I meet him again, I'm going to handle him with my feet like a doggone juggler, Denny. What news have you been picking up around here?"

"Mostly when I follow you and the sheriff," said he.

"Follow us?"

"Sure. To where horses are cached away, and dead gents are laid out under the leaves. That was a mighty jolly little show that you and him staged this morning. What's on for this evening?"

"Is that the last that you know?" I asked.

"The morning paper was the last that I read," said he.

I said: "Ruth Derrick and Dorgan are the ones who murdered Palliser."

"Who found that out?" asked Rourke.

"The sheriff. That gent is a devil! He can find out anything!"

"He can do even more," said Rourke. "If he was able to find out that, he can tell you anything. He's a doggone mind reader and a prophet rolled into one mouth!"

"Are you kidding me a little?" said I.

"I'm trying to feed you some sense by hand," said Rourke, "but you don't seem able to take nourishment that strong."

"What sense?" said I. "What do you mean, Denny?"

"Aw," said he, "I dunno. I'd simply say that they ain't hung Ruth Derrick and Dorgan, yet."

"That's bright and useful," I told him. "Is that all that you have to say? Is that all you know, Denny? Man, man, do you know anything more, anything real?"

"I know enough to eat three times a day and sleep seven hours," said Rourke, "and that's about enough book learning to suit me."

"You chuckle-head," I yelled at him. "I've got a mind to soak you, Rourke!"

"You keep your eyes open and look around, because maybe you'll see something worth while," said Rourke.

"Denny," I pleaded, "if you know anything, will you for heaven's sake tell me—"

"The girl is in your head, eh?" said Rourke. "The Derrick girl, I mean?"

"She is!" said I. "I've seen it proved that she's a murderess. But I can't help being stirred up about her, still. Denny, if you even knew enough to explain—"

"You keep right along at the right hand of your little sheriff," said Rourke, "and you'll graduate at the head of your class."

He pulled his horse around, waved his gloved hand at me, and went off; and I didn't follow. I felt too beaten and miserable and confused to make any sort of an effort, but I went on down to the stable and jerked the saddle and bridle off the Pinto. Jose found me at work and he began to talk with two eyes and two hands, the way a Mexican will. He told me that Ruth Derrick was gone and that the sheriff had found her out trail.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Shevlin Plays the Fool.

THAT put the crown on everything. I went down to the house as fast as I could and came in for supper in the patio with my hair on end and my head aching.

It was just as Jose had told me. The sheriff said that he had spent three hours cutting for sign, and he had found the out trail of Ruth Derrick cutting across the hills. He hadn't followed, because he knew that she would be brought in whenever we got to town and sent out a telegram giving her description.

Shevlin didn't pull me to one side and tell me all of this. He chattered it out at the table, in front of Frances Mornay. I never heard of such lack of sense in any man.

Up to that evening, I had figured Shevlin as a level-headed, mighty decent and intelligent fellow; but now I changed my mind, I can tell you. It's too bad that when a man is successful he has to puff. He can't let his success stand by itself, but comments. He wants to have everybody point and stare and say: "There goes the man who—"

I've seen more flat-headed millionaires talk that way then ever there was buffalo in the old days, making roaring on the prairies; and I'd rather hear a bronco bawl or a cow mourning all night for her calf, than to listen for five minutes to one of those double-jointed jackasses called "self-made men."

But Shevlin, for all the brains and the sense that he had showed before, now talked like one of the worst boosters. And while he was praising himself, he couldn't dwell on things he'd done in the past, but he had to dwell particularly on his work that day, and most of all about how he had made out that Ruth Derrick had left the house and gone down the hollow.

And there was Frances Mornay, listening to this talk about her friend and growing sicker and sicker.

Finally, she excused herself and got up, and the sheriff, he stood up like a fool, too, and said that she wasn't eating enough. And that perhaps the cat ought to have a bite, at least, before it went.

We'd broiled trout, and mighty good ones, and the sheriff broke off a bit and gave it to the cat on the handle of a spoon. It's a sight to see any cat swallow fish, and the golden beauty was no exception. Then she pulled in her head and looked dreamily at the sheriff, so that you couldn't tell whether she was praising him, or thinking of eating him next.

Frances Mornay stood through this nonsense, and then she said good-night to us all, prettily, and went off, carrying the cat.

When she was gone, Shevlin said: "That girl don't look none too well, Shirley, and she's clean off of her feed!"

Shirley was too disgusted to say anything. He looked across at me, and I chimed in. I said:

"Shevlin, do you think that the brand of talk you've been turning up this evening is the kind that would freshen her appetite any?"

"I dunno what you mean," said he.

"You wouldn't," said I. "I seen a while back that you didn't know your drift any more than a calf in a November blizzard up Montana way, Shevlin," said I, "what made you carry on in this way?"

"I dunno what you mean," said the sheriff. "How have I been carryin' on? I've been showing the way the business is done. That's all. Is there anything wrong with that?"

I pointed a forefinger at him.

"Suppose that you had a brother that a doctor had done a fine operation on—but your brother died. Well, would you appreciate what the doctor said, if he started a long yarning about what a smart operation he had made?"

"I wasn't talking about an operation," said Shevlin.

I gaped at him.

But everyone has noticed that the smart fellows who are so able to talk about themselves, are always able, at the same time, to work up a blind point from which they can't see a thing.

Still, I was amazed at Shevlin, because always, before this evening, it had seemed to me that his heart was right, if that makes me clear. But there never was any more clear proof of wrongheartedness than he was showing now, or had showed during that meal. He couldn't understand what I was driving at, because the fool didn't see that he'd been tearing the heart of Frances Mornay to bits!

"Ah, well," said Shirley, who always was reserved and in control of himself. "We'll soon be through. We'll start back tomorrow, sheriff, I suppose?"

"At daybreak. I'm having the grave dug tonight," said Shevlin. "We'll drop the old fellow into his grave and then away we start; we ought to make better time going back; the grades will all be in our favor!"

You can understand from this specimen the way he had been talking all during supper; only it was worse when he told how he had parted some leaves and spotted the place where the heel of Ruth's shoe had made an imprint, and his reasons for looking in just that place, and why it was that he suspected that the ground would be soft enough to take an imprint even through the layer of leaves. And how he had come to the top of a hill, among the trees, and seen the course that she must have looked at ahead of her—through woods and wilderness, with the blue mountains far off, and the white streaks on their summits. Of course that made Frances Mornay sad. She stuck to the table as long as she could, with her head down and her shoulders quivering a little from time to time. But at last she had been driven away.

And even after she was gone, and we could use our tongues freely on the sheriff, we were not able to show him that he had been a combination of brute and jackass. There's nothing worse than a fool, unless it is not to be able to make him see his folly.

Shevlin was carrying on in this cheerful little talk about the dead man and the grave, when a window slammed up and we heard the voice of Frances Mornay ringing clear and sharp across the patio: "Hugh! Oh, Hugh! Mimi is sick—she's writhing and screaming—she's sick!"

And we could hear the voice of the cat yip and yowl, at that moment.

Shirley got up. The sheriff got up, too, and I had to admit that he was a queer mixture of good and bad heart when he said that he knew something about veterinary treatment, and that he would do what he could.

That left me alone at the table, and in spite of myself, I could not sit still. I had to get up and walk, and wherever I walked, I couldn't be easy unless I had in the corner of my eye the window out of which Cattrin had looked at me, and the wall along which the figure in white had walked. And that patio seemed to be getting bigger and emptier and colder all the time, and the whispering of the fountain began to frame words—if only I could understand them—talked behind my back.

In a word, I was losing my nerve, and I knew it. I could thank heaven that we were pulling out from this place in the early morning, but I dreaded a good deal worse than ten years in prison the night that lay between me and the dawn of the next day! Perhaps that is a sign that I have a streak of prophet in me, though that is a kind of pay dirt that don't sell very well on any market!

I had to look back to Rourke, too, and somehow the sassy way in which he had talked made me feel a good deal better. I mean to say, it made me feel as though perhaps the sheriff could be wrong. Not that I banked much on Rourke's way of talk. He always used that high-handed way when he didn't know what else to do.

About this time, back came Shirley and the sheriff, and it turned out that the sheriff had cured the cat's stomachache by using some kind of ginger on it, and now the cat was sleeping sound, and Frances Mornay felt a lot better.

Shevlin was well oiled up for blowing about himself, by this time, and now he turned loose on how he happened to be such a good doctor, and told how he had learned something from the Comanches, about horses, and something from the Mexican's, about cows and other animals.

Shirley said good-night in the middle of this, and I did the same, but the sheriff threw a shot of cold misery into me, when he said in the most matter-of-fact way that you could imagine that he supposed that I wouldn't mind sitting watch in Palliser's room that night.

It simply drained the heart out of me, and I looked at him and groaned out that I was pretty well beat.

"You had some sleep, however," said the sheriff, "and I didn't have a wink, you know."

"There's Shirley, then," I pointed out.

The sheriff looked at me in an odd manner, and then he said: "What's the matter? Are you nervous, old timer?"

You would think that pride would keep me from saying it, but it didn't.

"Nervous?" said I. "Nerves ain't the way to express it. I've got a tangle of chills all the way from the top of my head down, and I'm plumb icy around the heart."

He nodded while he watched me.

Then he came closer and took my arm, and led me down the patio, and he said:

"Jones, you're gonna sit up with the captain's body, tonight."

"For heaven's sake come here and sit with me, then," said I.

He considered, and then he shook his head.

"I have to be some other place," said he. "And besides, two would be no good. One will look more like a bait."

"A bait?" said I. "Thanks, old son. I've been in a trap before and I don't like the feel of the jaws when they close down on you!"

"You'll do this job, I reckon," said the sheriff. And then he added to me: "This is the night that tells the story! I may be right, and I may be wrong. I don't know. But Heaven forgive me if I've slipped up! The harm will be done before the morning!"

"To me?" said I.

He didn't answer, but as we had come to the foot of the stairs that led to the room where Palliser lay, he waved his hand to me; I couldn't resist, but like a poor puncher that always has taken orders, I turned around and went up the steps.

Don Lorenzo's Bride

By Juanita Savage

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

WHEN Don Lorenzo de Cortez, a handsome, wealthy aristocratic Spaniard, meets Isabel Berkeley he realizes that here is the girl of his dreams. His ardent love-making frightens unsophisticated Isabel who has only recently eloped from the country village in England where she lived with her Aunt Agatha and married Noel Berkeley.

Noel Berkeley turns out to be a [illegible] and in an unsuccessful burglary shoots a detective. Don Lorenzo helps him escape from England and then demands that Isabel go abroad with him, saying that Noel surrendered her to him as the price of his assistance and silence. Helpless and at his mercy, Isabel agrees and they cross to France, Isabel traveling as the Spaniard's wife.

In Paris Don Lorenzo loads her with gowns and jewels and she is vaguely jealous when she realizes that he must have done the same thing with countless other women. They see Noel with a woman companion but upon recognizing them he hastily disappears. When they reach Spain Don Lorenzo tells Isabel that they are to be married immediately as her English Registry marriage is not considered legal in that country. She protests that she will be committing bigamy but upon the Spaniard's insistence they are married.

Don Lorenzo's aunt, the Senora Valera, and her daughter Dorotea call upon them as soon as they arrive at de Cortez castle in Granada. Dorotea is suspicious as to Isabel's identity.

When Isabel has tea with her the next day she discovers that Dorotea knows everything. Don Lorenzo's beautiful cousin threatens to expose her, telling her that she and Lorenzo were in love. Later Dorotea commissions her lawyers to investigate Isabel's past thoroughly.

Don Lorenzo admits that the two families planned their marriage, but denies that he ever loved Dorotea. Furious, he goes to her to protest but partially succumbs to her impassioned advances. When he finally repulses her she stabs him.

He refuses to tell Isabel what happened other than that he has put things right with Dorotea. Isabel begs him to let her go and he tries to quiet her by telling her that he believes her marriage to Noel Berkeley was illegal as Berkeley was already married and that Noel, whose passport read "Henry Noel Cranston," intended to use her as a blackmail decoy.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Disquieting Summons.

THE fact of the matter was that Isabel had spoken truly when she said she did not know what to believe. Indeed, she would have found it difficult to say exactly what it was that she wished to believe. She found it quite possible to believe that there had been other women in Noel Berkeley's life, just as there had been other women in Don Lorenzo's life, before she met him, and she remembered that Noel had been accompanied by a woman when she saw him in the Folies Bergere.

But she could not understand why Lorenzo, if he knew her marriage to Berkeley was not valid, had refrained from telling her so until she spoke of leaving him. It seemed the refinement of cruelty to allow her to imagine for so long that she was only his mistress, and a bigamist to boot, if she was, in fact, his wife. She could not help but think that possibly the explanation had been invented for his own protection in case Dorotea Valera suggested there had been a bigamous marriage.

"I am sure the story about how he received his injury is a concoction," soliloquized Isabel as she prepared for bed. "Dorotea either shot or stabbed him, but he wants to keep the fact a secret. That is the reason why he has refused to see a doctor. I wonder if it also means that he is in love with Dorotea, or if he is afraid of her? I wonder——"

Dorotea Valera was wondering much the same thing. The diplomatic telephone message from Lorenzo's man had relieved yet perplexed her.

"So she has not been told!" she reflected as she paced to and fro, trying to compose herself. "I wonder why? I wonder what the truth is? I wonder——"

Lorenzo spent a sleepless night, and had to resort to morphia to relieve the pain of the wound, over which the impassive Esteban puckered his face when he appeared to dress it early in the morning.

"I do not like the look of it, sir," he said, shaking his head. "It is greatly inflamed, and you are feverish. Is there a possibility that the dagger was poisoned?"

"Poisoned?" repeated Lorenzo, flashing a startled glance at him. "Nonsense, Esteban! Nonsense. And yet I have heard of poisoned daggers being used in the days of the Moors—and the weapon was an antique Moorish dagger with which I accidentally injured myself," he added hastily.

"Accidents will happen, and it is unfortunate to have had an accident with a Moorish dagger which may have been poisoned," commented the imperturbable Esteban. "Last night I sterilized the wound, yet this morning it looks as if it were septic. That is why I suspect a poisoned dagger, sir. A strong and healthy man would be able to make little of a knife wound which had not damaged a lung or any of his vital organs, but a wound with a poisoned dagger is a different matter. No, I do not like the look of it, master, and I would strongly advise you to call in a surgeon or a physician. There may be complications."

"To call in one of the local doctors might lead to complications of a different kind," said his master grimly. "Do your best, Esteban, and patch me up as well as you can. I have some important business to transact this morning."

"You should rest, sir," said Esteban, "but to give advice which will not be taken is as useless as trying to ride a headstrong horse without bit or bridle."

He was pale and somewhat haggard and the wound was very painful as the result of the exertion of dressing, but he made light of the injury when he met Isabel at almuerzo a little later. She, too, had spent a restless night and her lovely face was pale and there were dark shadows round her eyes.

"Don't worry about me, beloved, and try not to worry about anything," said Lorenzo with forced cheerfulness. "I shall be all right again in a day or two. As for the other matter, I have decided to see the Valera's family lawyer this morning, confide in him part of what I told you last night, ask him to see Dorotea Valera and tactfully explain the situation to her, pointing out that her suspicions are groundless. He has acted for the family for many years, is an old friend of mine, and a man to be trusted. Impetuous as she is, Dorotea may be relied upon to take his advice."

"I doubt if she is to be relied upon at all," said Isabel drily.

Lorenzo sighed and turned his attention to his correspondence, opening first an official looking envelope and muttering a curse after glancing at the document it contained.

"Infernally awkward," he explained, in answer to Isabel's inquiry. "A very important law suit in connection with my Castilian estate comes up for hearing at the Law Courts in Madrid the day after tomorrow and I am informed it is essential that I shall attend. That means traveling all day tomorrow, and the hearing of the case may last several days."

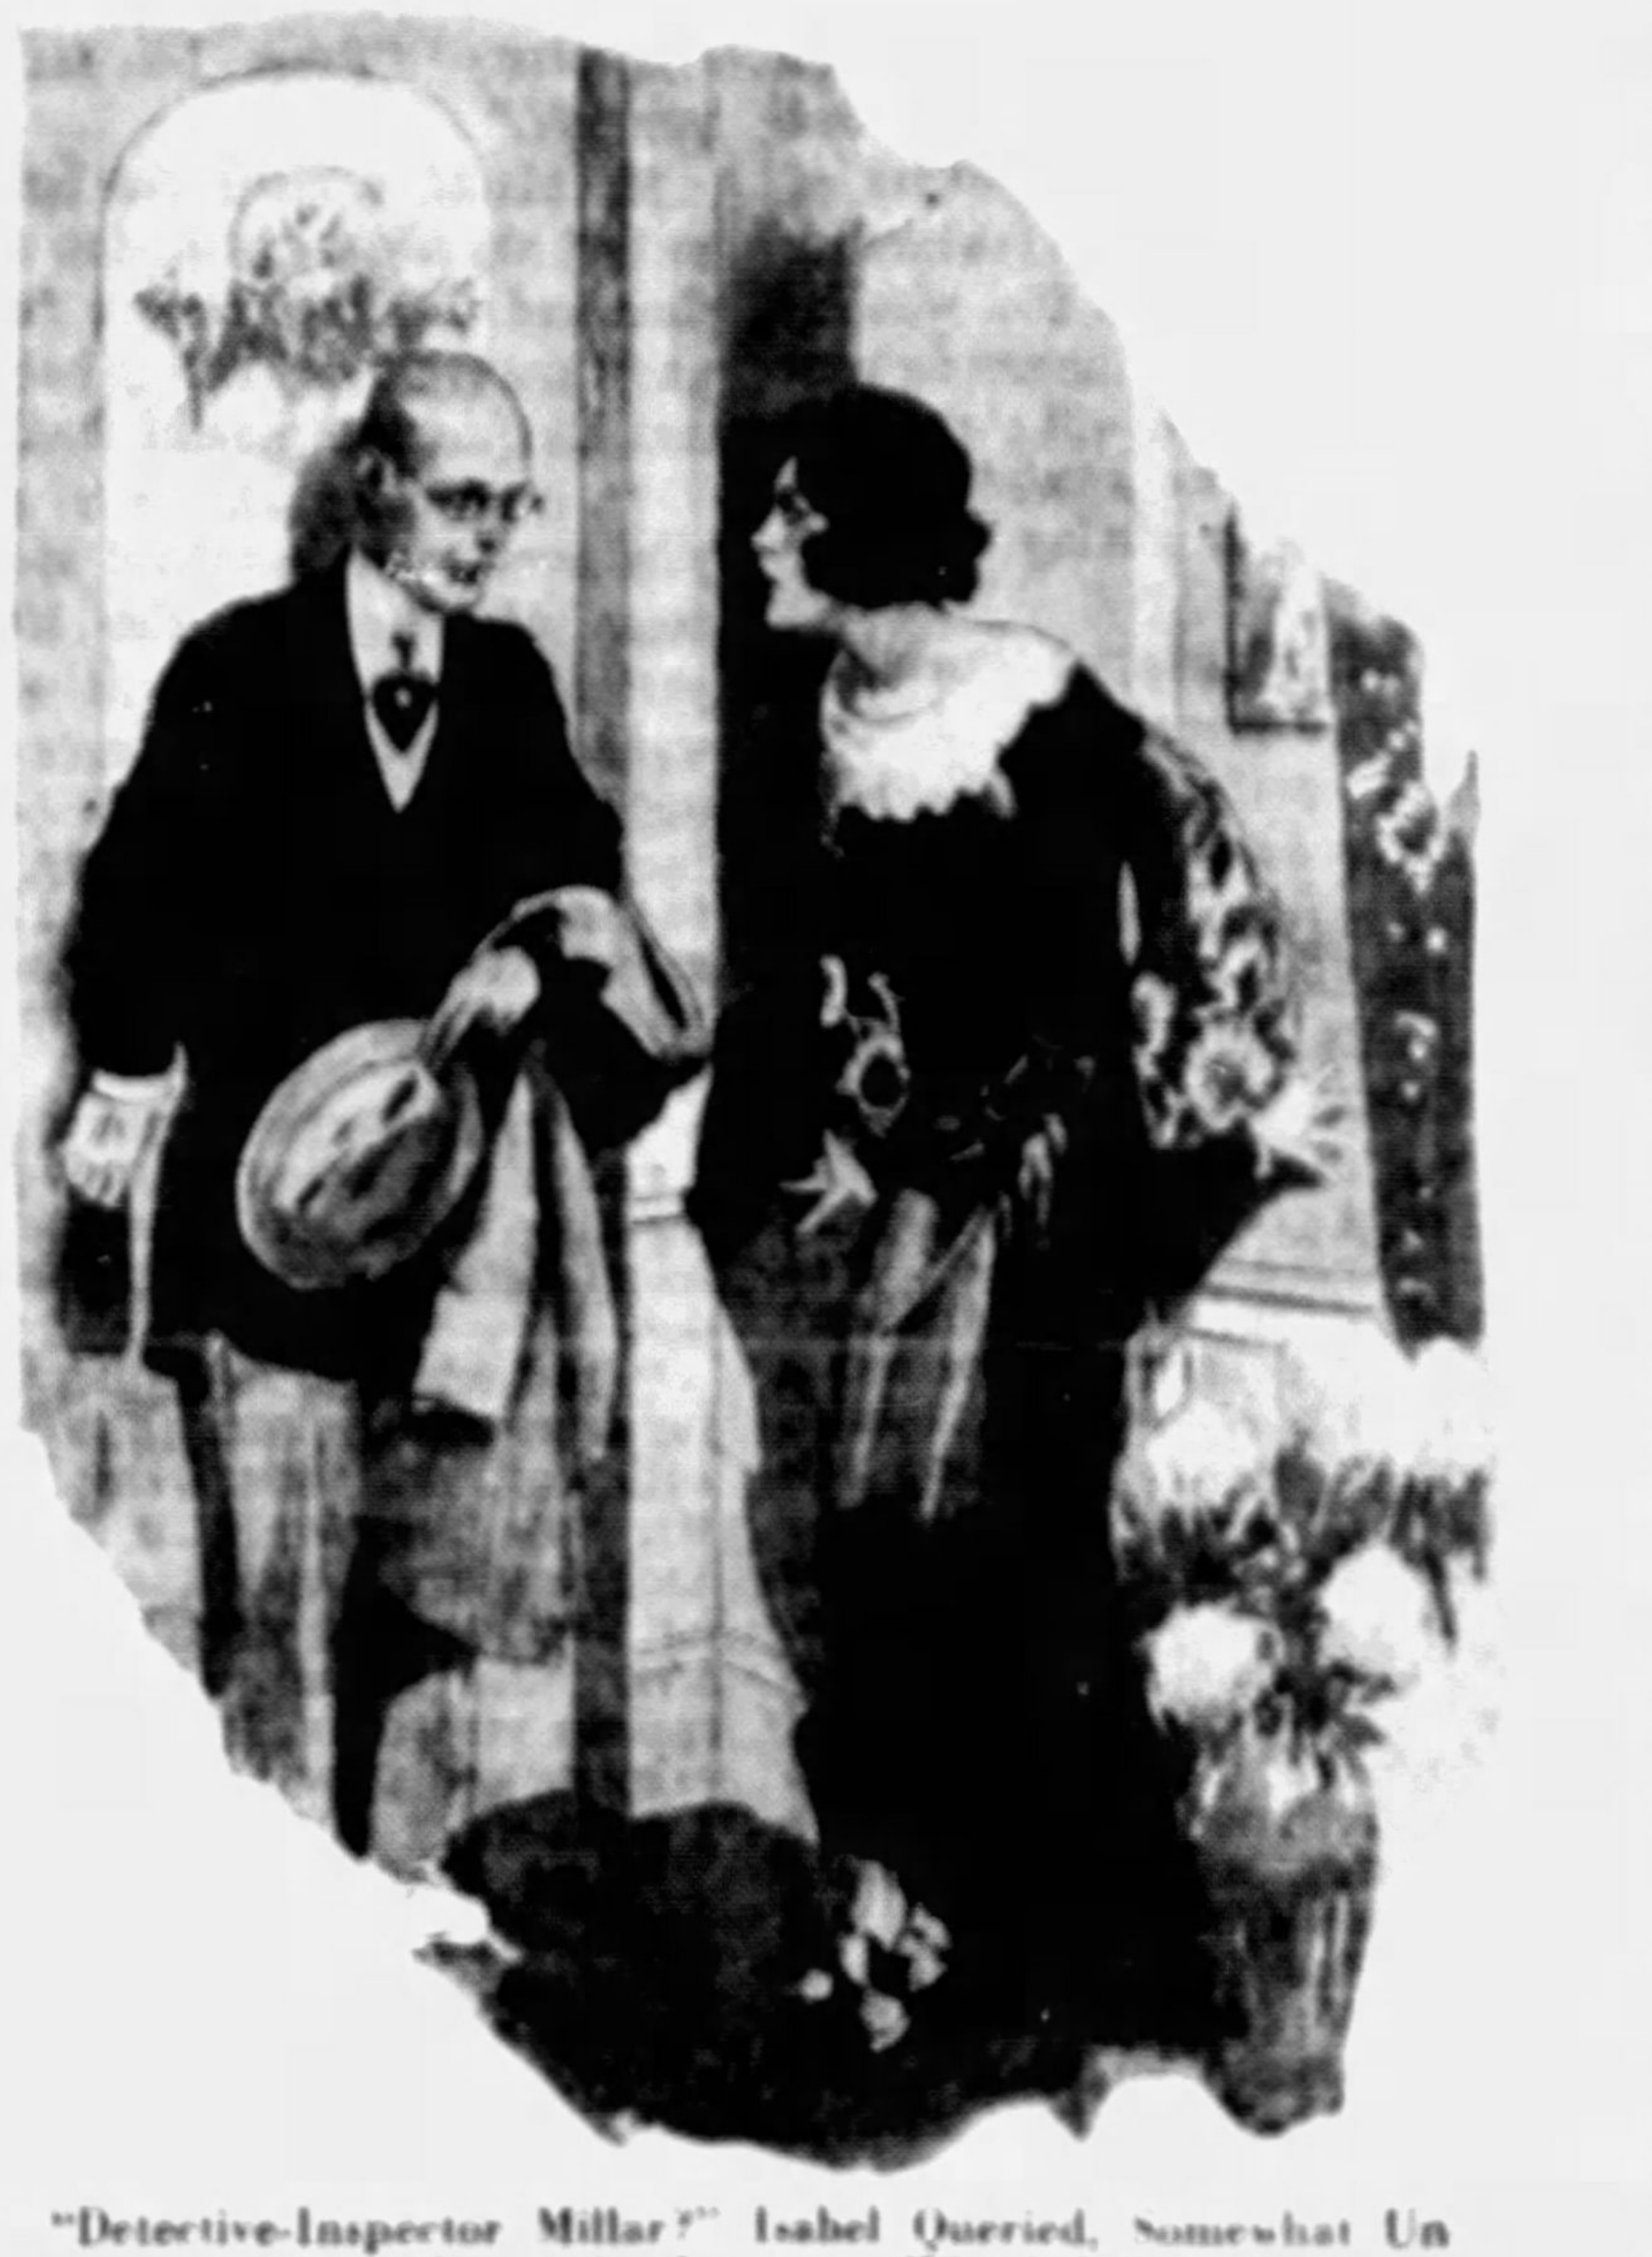
Isabel's fair face brightened.

"It will be a relief to get away for a few days, away from Dorotea Valera, and give her time to digest what her lawyer tells her about me. I shall be glad to see Madrid again."

Lorenzo pursed his lips, wrinkled his brows thoughtfully and regarded her with troubled eyes.

"I do not think it would be advisable to take you with me, Isabel mine, much as I shall hate having to leave you," he said, after a pause. "In the first place, darling, I shall be in court all day until the case is finished and it would be no fun for you to be alone in a hotel."

"I should be no more alone than I shall be if you leave me here, and I should feel safer," protested Isabel, looking disappointed.



"Detective-Inspector Millar?" Isabel Queried, Somewhat Unnecessarily, as the Inspector Wheeled Round.

"My dear Isabel, you are much safer here than you would be in Madrid," responded Lorenzo. "No harm can come to you here, surrounded by trusty servants, and I expect I shall be away for only a few days."

"The very thought of being left alone here scares me," said Isabel. "Please take me with you, Lorenzo. I need not be alone in a hotel. I could attend the court with you."

"Darling, in the circumstances, it would be better for you to stay here. Don't look so disappointed and reproachful, darling. It would strike everyone as strange if I took you with me when I have legal and official business to transact. Dorotea Valera might jump to the conclusion that we had run away from her and that her suspicions were justified; whereas the very fact of your remaining at home during my temporary absence will convince her that your position is secure. You have nothing to fear from her now, and I am sure you do not want to give her a chance to boast that you are afraid of her."

"It is not of her personally that I am afraid, although I know if she had it in her power she would strike me dead," Isabel said, after a silence. "I am scared at the thought of being here alone, with no one to turn to for help if anything should happen, but if you think it would look as if we were absconding, I will stay."

"Brave, sensible little darling," exclaimed Lorenzo, with an expression of relief, and blew her a kiss across the table. "I think it in every way advisable that you should remain here, Isabel mine. I need not tell you I shall return at the earliest possible moment."

"Are you sure you are well enough to travel?" asked Isabel anxiously. "You look white and ill this morning."

"My shoulder was very painful during the night, but I am all right," replied Lorenzo. "Don't worry about me, beloved. I shall be able to get expert medical advice when I get to Madrid, and will take Esteban with me. And when I get back, my Isabel, we will have a second honeymoon."

He was far from being as light-hearted and confident as he tried to appear, and he received something of a shock when he visited Dorotea's lawyer a little later to enlist his assistance.

"The Senorita Valera has already set inquiries afoot regarding Mr. and Mrs. Noel Berkeley," the lawyer told him. "Acting on her instructions I yesterday telegraphed to London for information, and also requested the Chief of Police to make confidential inquiries through the English police headquarters."

"The deuce you did!" exclaimed Lorenzo, changing color. "You might at least have questioned me before putting the matter in the hands of the police."

"I told the senorita I feared you would be offended, but she was insistent, senor. I am rejoiced and relieved that I shall now be able satisfactorily to explain the mystery to her, and to allay her doubts and suspicions."

"You will be cleverer than I take you to be if you do that," thought Lorenzo. Aloud he said: "I would suggest, senor, that you might tell Senorita Dorotea what I have told you as if it were the first result of your telegraphic inquiries, and without mentioning that you received the information from me. But I do not presume to advise you. I know you can be trusted to deal with the matter tactfully, and to do everything to maintain good relations and avoid any possibility of a scandal."

"I will do my best, Don Lorenzo, but I do not need to tell you that it is not easy to satisfy a suspicious woman," the lawyer answered with a wry smile. "However, I assure you I shall act in this affair more as a friend of the family than as a legal man. But it is a pity you did not explain the facts concerning Senora Berkeley to Senorita Valera in the first place."

"It is also a pity that Dorotea did not accept my explanation in the first place when, for my wife's sake, I tried to gloss over the actual facts," Lorenzo retorted, and the old lawyer nodded.

"Strange are the ways of fate, senor, and stranger still are the ways of women," he commented. "But be assured I shall do my utmost to restore harmony."

"Thank you, senor," said Lorenzo. "You might also mention to the Chief of Police that the matter has been satisfactorily explained, and that it will be unnecessary for him to trouble the English police to pursue investigations."

He was more concerned by the fact that the police had been asked to assist than he was by the discovery that Dorotea had instituted inquiries about Noel Berkeley prior to her dramatic interview with him (Lorenzo).

"But surely I am alarming myself needlessly," he soliloquized. "Scotland Yard probably knows that Berkeley did victimize several women, but it is highly improbable they have any suspicion that he was responsible for the Mingleham Court murder, or there would have been a hue and cry for him long ago. I will say nothing of this to Isabel for fear of alarming her. Dorotea is hardly likely to carry her enmity further, knowing that I have it in my power to have her arrested for attempted murder, and by the time I return from Madrid that spitfire may have cooled down or I may have thought of some way of conciliating her. I don't think I have any real cause for alarm——"

So he returned home to assure Isabel that the lawyer had promised to satisfy Dorotea and that she need have no misgivings.

"Do you regard it as a good sign that the Senora Valera telephoned while you were out, to say how sorry she was to hear from her daughter about your accident, and to ask if you were recovering?" inquired Isabel.

"Undoubtedly, my dear Isabel," replied Lorenzo promptly, and met Isabel's quizzical glance gravely and unflinchingly, but inwardly he was laughing sardonically and wondering how much, or how little, Dorotea had told her mother, and how much his aunt knew about the accident. "Yes, an excellent sign, my dear," he added, "and a manifestation of friendship. I must ring up the senora, thank her, and tell her I shall be away for a few days."

He did as he proposed, ascertained that his aunt was evidently under the impression that his accident was the result of a fall, that apparently Dorotea had told her nothing of what had actually happened, and, incidentally, that Dorotea was feeling very unwell, too unwell to fulfil any of her social engagements.

"I feared Dorotea was sickening for something when she suddenly decided she was not well enough to go out last night, and when I found her in a nervous and feverish state when I got home," said the Senora Valera over the wire, and again Lorenzo could not help chuckling inwardly. "I shall insist upon her remaining at home for a few days."

Lorenzo duly reported the latter part of the conversation to Isabel, when he had hung up the receiver after an exchange of formal compliments, and she heaved a sigh of relief.

"That means, I hope, that she is not likely to try to do any more mischief during your absence," she remarked. "But it may also mean that she may not be able to receive her solicitor and hear the story you asked him to tell." She paused and looked at Lorenzo thoughtfully. "I wonder if her indisposition has any connection with your accident, Lorenzo?" she added, and was quick to note his change of color. "Is she so conscience-stricken at having tried to kill you that she has made herself ill?"

"Perhaps I struck such terror into her heart that she is afraid even to venture out of doors," said Lorenzo with forced lightness. "Useless to speculate, my dear Isabel. Enough to know that she is unlikely to cause you any further trouble."

Attended by the faithful Esteban, he left for Madrid next morning, and as he kissed Isabel good-by and strained her close she suddenly clung to him convulsively.

"Oh, Lorenzo, I wish you had not to go!" she cried tremulously. "I have a horrible foreboding of coming evil, a presentiment of disaster, and if anything happens there is no one to whom I can turn for help."

"Why, you foolish darling, you are talking as if I were going to the Antipodes instead of merely to Madrid," said Lorenzo, patting her shoulder reassuringly. "No harm can come to you here, beloved, but in the unlikely event of anything untoward happening, a telegram will bring me back within twelve hours. Snap your fingers at forebodings and presentiments, Isabel mine, and be happy. All will be well, sweetheart, and I shall be back within a few days, eager for our second honeymoon. Adios!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

Detective-Inspector J. Millar.

ISABEL tried to assure herself that he was right and she had nothing to fear, but the foreboding of evil persisted after Lorenzo had gone, and she could not shake it off. Yet the day passed pleasantly and peacefully enough.

She spent the morning exploring the wonderfully beautiful gardens, the rare loveliness and peace of which soothed her jangled nerves, and when the heat of the day was over she ordered the car, as Lorenzo had suggested she should, and, accompanied by a maid, drove down to Granada, did some shopping, and paid a visit to the Alhambra, the wonders of which fascinated and entranced her.

She dined alone, but she did not feel lonely, for through the open windows there came the sound of men's voices singing melodiously to the accompaniment of a guitar, and the butler assured her that the choir was composed of some of the outdoor servants who were singing songs in her honor.

She slept soundly that night and woke feeling refreshed, but the odd, disturbing feeling that something disastrous was about to happen still persisted, although she tried to laugh it away and convince herself she had little occasion for apprehension.

"If only I knew the truth, if only I could be sure that Lorenzo really loves me and will be true, if only I could believe that I am not Noel's wife, and that Dorotea Valera will not rob me of Lorenzo's love, I could be happy here in this paradise of flowers," Isabel ruminated, as she wandered idly through the lovely gardens after a late and leisurely breakfast. "I wish I could put out of my mind the horror of that night when Noel confessed, and the day of terror that followed."

From a distance she noticed a taxicab speeding up the drive towards the house, and she hoped she would not have to entertain a caller. A few minutes later she saw a footman hastening towards her [illegible]

FOR DIRTY DIRT USE GOLD DUST

No nice WOMAN wants DIRTY WOODWORK

. . . GOLD DUST cleans it quickly, safely without the use of harmful grit!

UNSIGHTLY finger marks or smudges on doors and woodwork look awful. Yet you see them in many, many homes. WHY? Because lots of women DON'T KNOW the RIGHT way to clean.

• Expensive CHIPS and FLAKES won't move that dirty dirt. GRITTY CLEANSERS scratch and mar. There's one thing that's really MEANT for that kind of cleaning. It's Gold Dust, the soap for all HEAVY-DUTY work. A tablespoonful in a pail of water is enough.

There's more REAL SOAP in Gold Dust. That's why it cleans so fast. Thousands of women KNOW this to be TRUE, and they wouldn't be without it when there's dirty dirt to clean. These women have found that Gold Dust works faster and safer. If you'll try Gold Dust you'll know it, too.

Your grocer carries Gold Dust in two handy sizes. Get a package from him today. Use it for all heavy-duty cleaning. It will save you time and money too.

Woodwork washed with expensive flakes or chips looks gray and smudgy — not quite clean.

Harsh cleansers are so likely to scratch and mar. And they leave unsightly deposits of grit.

Gold Dust, the ideal soap for dirty dirt, cleans things clean. It works quickly—easily—safely.

KITCHENETTE SIZE 5¢ and the Big Household size, even more economical detective is commonly depicted as a hawk-eyed, lantern-jawed sleuth with uncanny powers of deduction or else as a fat-headed, flat-footed, fatuous fool who invariably [illegible] the wrong conclusion and chases will-o'-the-wisp clues while the amateur criminologist [illegible] solving the mystery.

Detective Inspector John Millar was about as unlike a Sherlock Holmes on the stage idea of a detective as is the sheik in actuality as compared with the romantic flapper's conception of him. He was a frail-looking, gentle-mannered elderly man with a drooping gray mustache and calm gray eyes, and he wore horn-rimmed spectacles. One would not have been in the least surprised to learn that he was a professor of some abstruse science whose hobby was collecting butterflies or postage stamps.

Actually, he was a collector of blue china when he was not collecting criminals for exhibition in the dock of the Old Bailey and he was admiring with the affectionate interest of a connoisseur a Ming vase on the mantelshelf when Isabel, still pale but mistress of herself, entered the drawing room, nervously fingering his visiting card.

"Detective Inspector Millar?" Isabel [illegible] somewhat unnecessarily as the Inspector wheeled round.

"At your service, madam," he responded with a smile and a polite bow. "You, I presume, are the Senora de Cortez. You will forgive me for calling at such an unusual hour, but I am acting on official instructions. I believe you have it in your power to supply us with certain information which will be of assistance to us. What a delightful place you have here, senora!"

His manner and appearance were so disarming that, although at first Isabel was terrified, at once she began to feel that she could surely hold her own against this mild-mannered elderly gentleman. Which was scarcely surprising, for even international crooks on occasion had fallen into the same error and made the mistake of judging by appearances.

"I am afraid I do not understand," she said steadily, "but please take a seat and tell me what it is you wish to know and how I can be of assistance."

"Thank you, senora," said the Inspector. "Pray be seated yourself."

He placed a chair for Isabel so that she faced the window and thus had the light on her face, and then sat down facing her so that his own face was in shadow.

"A most delightful room and you have some beautiful specimens of china of the Ming period," he resumed, his eyes wandering round the apartment before they came back to Isabel's face. "And now, dear lady, as to the reason for my visit. I am anxious to discover the present whereabouts of Mr. Noel Berkeley."

"Why? And why do you think I am in a position to tell you anything about him?" countered Isabel after a moment of hesitation.

"Am I mistaken in stating that for some months, and up to May 14th last, you were living with Mr. Noel Berkeley in a flat in Knightsbridge, London, and during that time you were known as Mrs. Noel Berkeley?" the Inspector responded, following her example and answering by asking a question.

"Must I answer?" inquired Isabel after another moment of hesitation. "Who has sent you here? What have you been told?"

"I have been sent here by my Chief at Scotland Yard, madam," explained Inspector Millar gently. "You are not under any compulsion to answer my questions, but I need hardly point out that failure to do so might give cause for suspicions unjust to yourself and other parties. I am uncertain, incidentally, whether you are a British or a Spanish subject. If you were married to Mr. Noel Berkeley, you automatically became a British subject. If you were not, you remain a Spanish citizen. I mention the matter, senora, because in the event of your [illegible] to assist the authorities by answering my questions, it will be necessary for me to request the local police to conduct the interrogation."

"I do not know myself whether I am English or Spanish," said Isabel, more to gain time and collect her thoughts and conquer her inward terror than to impart information. "My father was English, but I was born in Spain and my mother was Spanish."

"A woman takes the nationality of her husband when she marries, and even if there was any doubt as to your legal standing previously, you became English when you married Mr. Noel Berkeley," the Inspector informed her.

"I was not married to Noel Berkeley," said Isabel, remembering the explanation Lorenzo had suggested she should give if she were questioned. "We went through a ceremony of marriage at a registry office, but he confessed afterwards that he had a wife living when he met me, and therefore our marriage was not legal and binding."

"When did he make that confession?"

"When I complained to him that Don Lorenzo de Cortez was making love to me and begging me to elope with him. Don Lorenzo fell in love with me at first sight, and when I first complained to Noel he told me not to take Lorenzo seriously and to be nice to him, as Don Lorenzo might be able to assist him in his career."

"What was his career?"

"He told me he was in the British Secret Service, but he would never tell me anything about the nature of his duties, as he said he was pledged to secrecy. I had no suspicion that he was anything other than he pretended to be until—until——"

"Until the 14th of May?" suggested the Inspector, as she hesitated.

"I do not know," answered Isabel, drawing a long breath. "I was terribly upset and can hardly remember exactly when it was."

"But you can surely remember the date within a day or two, senora? You can remember what day of the week it was, and that it was somewhere about the middle of May. The occasion must be deeply impressed on your memory."

"It is, but I cannot remember either the day or the date," Isabel replied, nervously shaking her head. "It was probably about the middle of May, but I cannot be sure."

"If I tell you it was on the 11th of May that you left England with Don Lorenzo de Cortez, will that help you definitely to fix the date?" inquired the Inspector.

It was apparently an innocent question, but Isabel's mind was exceptionally alert, and she realized that if she assented she would be admitting she had fled England the day after the Minglesham Court murder.

"It was two days before I left England, I think," she equivocated, wrinkling her brows as if in an effort to recollect. "Don Lorenzo invited me and my husband—as I then thought Noel Berkeley was—to dinner. Noel said he could not accept the invitation, as he had some official business to attend to, but he insisted on me accepting the invitation, again telling me that I must be nice to Don Lorenzo.

"I dined alone with Don Lorenzo," she continued, forcing herself to meet the detective's calm eyes steadfastly, and praying that he was believing her. "Don Lorenzo made passionate love to me while we were dining and afterwards while we were dancing, and later he accompanied me home to the flat, where again he made fervent love and begged me to elope with him, hinting that my husband was not what he professed to be. I—I almost surrendered then, but oh, I could not believe that Noel was willing to sell me. Must I tell you everything, Mr. Millar?"

"You are under no compulsion to do so, senora, but it would be advisable for your own sake to tell the whole story," the Inspector answered. "Please continue."

"When my husband came home I told him what had happened, told him I was falling in love with Don Lorenzo and should not be able to resist him if he was allowed to go on making love to me," Isabel resumed. "To my horror and amazement, Noel told me then that I was quite at liberty to give myself to Don Lorenzo, told me I was not his wife and that he was going to leave me."

"Why should he have told you that?" queried the Inspector, looking perplexed. "I am not trying to pay you compliments, senora, but you are so beautiful that I cannot imagine any man surrendering you willingly to another and leaving you."

"Perhaps the reason was that he may have found out that Don Lorenzo had been making inquiries about him and had found out that he had victimized other women," responded Isabel, again realizing she was on dangerous ground. "I don't know. I was staggered and shocked."

"What did you mean by saying you did not believe he was willing to sell you? Did he say anything about having sold you?"

"Yes, he said something about having sold me, and told me I need have no scruples about going away with Don Lorenzo," said Isabel, in unaffected agitation, wringing her hands. "He left me, and next day when Don Lorenzo came to see me and begged me to come with him to Spain, I—I—"

Her voice broke, she found the strain too much for her, and buried her face in her hands. Detective Inspector John Millar made no comment, and made no attempt to comfort her. He was too seasoned a veteran to be in the least affected by a woman's tears, and he had learned by experience that an agitated woman will sometimes reveal the very facts she has been attempting to conceal. Therefore he waited, silent and unmoved, until Isabel recovered herself and raised her head to look at him with tearful eyes.

"Tell me," he said then, and his mild voice became suddenly harsh, "was it not because he had committed a crime and the police were on his track that he suddenly decided to leave you?"

"I—I don't know," answered Isabel, tremulously, controlling herself with an effort. "My impression is now that he meant to blackmail Don Lorenzo, found out that Lorenzo knew too much about him, and that he was genuinely in love with me, and that he decided to give me up when I confessed I was falling in love with Lorenzo."

"He left you at once, you say. Have you seen him since?"

"Only once, and then at a distance, and I have no idea where he is now. Are you asking me these questions because he is wanted for some crime, or because you have been told I have committed bigamy?"

"Where was it you last saw him—and when?" inquired the Inspector, without answering her question.

"In Paris—I think it was the second night after I left England with Don Lorenzo," Isabel told him. "He had a woman with him, and that confirmed me in my impression that I had been deceived from the start. I have never seen him since."

"Did he give you any money or jewelry before he left you?"

"No. He left me practically penniless, so I had no alternative but to accept Don Lorenzo's offer. I had no friends and I was frightened and upset. I am still frightened and upset, for I have been accused of having committed bigamy."

"By whom?"

"By Senorita Dorotea Valera, who is jealous of me, and who is probably responsible for your presence here. Tell me, please, that I haven't committed bigamy by marrying Don Lorenzo, and that it is true that Noel Berkeley had a wife living when he left me, and that he was already married when he married me."

✣ Clear Up That Tongue ✣ Fresh Yeast Will Do It ✣ By Correcting Evils Here ✣

AN INFALLIBLE SIGN of a disordered condition within is a white-coated tongue with bad breath, and a bad taste.

FAITHFULNESS IN EATING YEAST tones up digestive organs and brings keen appetite by normal means. Adopt the treatment and see what improvement two months bring.

STOMACH
INTESTINES
© 1934, Standard Brands Incorporated

THIS IS WHERE 90% of our common ills begin. Keep intestines clean with yeast and your whole body benefits.

Look at your TONGUE . . . is it COATED?

That's almost the first symptom of INTESTINAL FATIGUE . . . a serious condition that causes 90% of our commonest ailments

REMEMBER the kindly old family doctor who used to come to see you when you were a youngster? Remember his first words, his first step in finding out what it was kept you from play?

"All right now," he'd boom. "Let's see that tongue of yours!"

We've come a long way from the simple methods of the old family physician. But that simple test still tells its tale. The coated tongue is still a sign of internal disorder.

And the amazing thing is this. Many of us, even when we think we are well, find our tongues white when we look at them in a mirror.

Why? Because of Intestinal Fatigue! Many of us suffer from it. Miss perfect health because of it. Stay "below par" as a result of it.

In Intestinal Fatigue, foodstuffs from which nutritive elements have been extracted clog the intestines. This waste stagnates. Poisons form and flood the system because elimination is irregular. We lose appetite, lack energy.

Science, however, has found an answer. Fresh yeast . . . such as Fleischmann's Yeast . . . loosens and moistens accumulated waste matter. It stimulates both digestion and nutrition. It fosters normal action of the intestines.

Steadily and slowly it brings back clear skin, renewed appetite, fresh vigor . . . as it cleans, tones and revives the sluggish intestinal and digestive tracts. Yeast is neither a cure-all nor a recent fad. It has been in use for 75 years. It is recommended by leading specialists the world over.

They tell patients, "Eat yeast regularly . . . three times a day, before or between meals. Keep at it. Don't expect to correct, overnight, troubles that have been developing for years."

Surely there's sound advice. It's worth trying. Just ask for Fleischmann's Yeast at any grocery, restaurant, soda fountain. Every cake is rich in three vitamins important to health—vitamins B and G and the "sunshine" vitamin D. Directions on label.

Not a "Cure-all" . . Fleischmann's Yeast is a health food thousands eat three times a day

It's Thrifty and Wise.. to use SUNSET SOAP DYES

ECONOMY is the watchword to-day—get the most service from everything you buy. And there's no economy in throwing away an otherwise good dress or coat just because the color is faded. Dye it with Sunset and it will look like new.

The convenient little 15c cakes of Sunset Soap Dye have saved many dollars for thrifty women who keep smart at trifling cost with these wonderful fast dyes.

It's quick and easy, too. Sunset dyes all fabrics the same shade of color in the one dye bath. Cotton, silk, wool, linen, mixed goods—all are alike to Sunset.

The soap combination does more than clean—it opens up the fiber and permits the deep penetration and even distribution of color so necessary if the material is to look like new after redyeing.

22 colors—15c a cake.

Now the inventor of SUNSET has produced for your convenience a new tint—DYTINT. This tint is easy to use, because it does not require boiling. Comes in many beautiful pastel shades. Just the tint to use for lingerie and light fabrics that do not require fast dyeing.

DYTINT is made of the finest materials obtainable. It comes in a full sized package and sells for only 10c. It costs less to make a tint, so we give our customers the benefit of this saving and WE GUARANTEE THE QUALITY.

Remember, use Sunset Soap Dye for fast dyeing. Use Dytint for perfect tinting. Use Dytint Color Remover—10c—to take out color before redyeing fabrics.

If your dealer doesn't stock all these products, write to us for information and list of colors.

Packing the Pick of Harvest Pickles

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency

RECENTLY I was asked to judge a Prize Pickle Contest to which hundreds of women submitted their choicest recipes. Not only were recipes for pickles included, but also unusual fruit marmalades and conserves. Since this is the height of the harvest season, many of my readers may be interested in these prize suggestions.

Even if the housewife does not put up fruits and vegetables on a large scale, she will wish to make a few choice food specialties as relishes for Winter meals. Both marmalade and conserves lend themselves to small quantity work, and several glasses or jars may be put up in a morning. A marmalade, of course, is a smooth and generally strained mixture of thickened fruit juice to which evenly cut or shredded additional pulp is added. A conserve is a marmalade to which minced or cut nut meats are added just before removing from the fire.

Use enamel kettles and wooden spoons. Assemble all needed materials before starting work. Stainless knives are good for fruit paring because they do not discolor fruit or hands. A reliable kitchen scale will help exactness, because a pound measurement is always more exact than a cup, pint or quart measurement. Be sure that the supply of spices is fresh and clean; likewise that vinegar, sugar, etc., are of the best quality and flavor.

A meat grinder, a small and large grater, a couple of glass measuring cups and pint and quart measures should all be handy. Any glasses or jars must be perfectly sterilized and ready with a fresh supply of rubbers or corks. Have a small supply of paraffin for sealing in readiness; likewise a small box of gummed labels.

For the newcomers who may be making preserved fruits for the first time, it is well to remember that sterilizing means washing glasses and jars in clean, sudsy hot water, then rinsing in clear hot water. Pack jars into clean roasting pan, or preserving kettle, cover with water, bring to boiling point and boil 20 minutes.

Prize Nine-Day Sweet Pickles.

Ingredients: ½ bushel 3-inch cucumbers, 5 pounds common salt, 2 gallons white vinegar, 4 level tablespoons powdered alum, 3 ounces cinnamon stick, 3 ounces whole allspice, white sugar and a few grape leaves.

First Day: Place washed pickles in crock, add 2½ pounds salt, cover with water.

Second Day: Drain off water, pour on fresh, add 1¼ pounds salt.

Third Day: Drain off water, pour on fresh, add remaining 1¼ pounds salt.

Fourth to Sixth Day: Every day drain off water and add fresh.

Seventh Day: Drain off water. Prick blossom end of pickles. Into kettle put alum, grape leaves, and vinegar solution made with 1 part vinegar to 3 parts water. Cover pickles with this solution and simmer 1½ hours. Return pickles and liquid into jar and let stand overnight.

Eighth Day: Drain off liquid and weigh pickles. To every 7 pounds of pickles allow 3 pounds of sugar, spices and remaining vinegar. Boil in kettle 5 minutes. Pour boiling liquid over pickles and stand overnight.

Ninth Day: Drain off spiced vinegar, bring to boil, pour back over pickles, let stand till cold. Pack cold in sterilized jars.

This recipe makes a five-gallon jar full of pickles which do not soften or shrivel, and which do not need to be sealed.

The following recipe gives a very simple and easy tomato marmalade, delicious with cold lamb or beef and not at all expensive:

Prize Ripe Tomato Marmalade.

Three cups ripe tomatoes, skinned; 3 cups brown sugar, juice 1 lemon, grated rind 1 orange, cut walnut meats.

Cut tomatoes small, add juice, rind and sugar. Simmer until thick. Just before removing from fire add nut meats. Seal in small, fancy glass jars.

Both Winter pears and the last of the peach crop are plentiful in the market. Here are recipes for spicing both these popular fruit relishes:

Ginger Pears.

Eight pounds hard Winter pears, 5 pounds brown sugar, 6 lemons, thinly sliced, ½ pound crystallized ginger, minced.

Peel pears, leave in half or cut in small pieces. Place in kettle alternately with sugar, lemon slices and minced ginger. Cover and stand overnight. Simmer low fire until syrup is thick and pears are clear. Pack in sterilized jars.

Spiced Peaches.

Seven pounds whole perfect peaches, mace, whole cloves (⅓ cup), ⅔ cup stick cinnamon, 2 cups mild vinegar, 5 pounds sugar, white or brown.

Peel peaches and stick blade of mace and two whole cloves into each. Cover peelings with water and simmer; there should be 1 cup strained liquid. Make syrup of peach liquid, vinegar, sugar, cinnamon and cloves. Place 6 or 8 of the peaches in syrup and cook slowly until tender but firm. Remove carefully to sterilized jars. Cook down syrup until thick and pour boiling hot water over fruit. Use spices in jars if relish is liked dark, but omit for lighter appearance.

Martha's Chili Sauce.

Two dozen large ripe tomatoes, 6 medium red peppers, 6 green peppers, 12 small onions, 7 cups cider vinegar, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon mustard seed, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 tablespoon celery seed.

Peel and chop tomatoes. Seed peppers, peel onions and chop fine. Add vinegar, sugar and spices tied in small bag. Simmer 1½ to 2 hours. Remove bag spices, seal in sterilized bottles or jars.

Harvest Conserve.

Two dozen firm yellow peaches, 1 pound blue grapes, 12 red plums, 1 fresh pineapple, 1 orange, ¼ pound blanched almonds, sugar.

Wash, peel and cut each fruit into small, even pieces, removing seeds from grapes and slicing orange thin as for marmalade. Cook all fruits in an enameled kettle until soft over low fire. Allow ¾ cup sugar to each 1 cup stewed fruit. Return to kettle, simmer 20 minutes. Add chopped nuts, continue cooking [illegible] stirring frequently until mixture is thick and clear [illegible] hours). Seal [illegible] glasses.

YOU MUST GET YOUR HAIR

Clean ...first step toward Beautiful Hair

LITTLE use to mince words about how to make your hair beautiful—unless you understand that it first must be scientifically CLEAN! It is necessary to remove soap curds and other residue after a shampoo before results can equal your desires.

Follow the practice of fastidious women who use the nature formula—"California Lemon Rinse"; then you know that your hair is sweet and clean. No other method is so successful.

The delicate, harmless fresh Lemon Juice not only eliminates greasy, lustre-dulling foreign matter, but frees the hair from stickiness so annoying after the shampoo. As the hair drys, slowly emerges the true, original hair lustre. Dark hair takes on the fascinating glint it should always have expressed. Blonde hair now enjoys its so-much-admired lustre.

This simple formula is so harmless and easy to use—"First, the usual washing and rinsing of the hair. Then, pour the strained fresh juice of two California Sunkist Lemons into four quarts of fresh water. Mix thoroughly, then rinse with this delicate, but effective solution and be certain to rub it well into the scalp. Again, rinse with clear water."

Fresh California Lemon Rinse is a potent dandruff control, if used frequently. Both hair and scalp will be easier to keep clean and their healthier conditions will soon become a delight.

GETS CLOSE ALONG BASEBOARDS
GETS INTO CORNERS
CLEANS AROUND TABLE LEGS

2 million women have proved it!

This self-wringing mop really does work better...

The Betty Bright self-wringing Mop not only cleans floors better, faster and more easily than the old-fashioned way of mopping, it also protects your hands and keeps them soft and white.

Since your hands never touch the mop water, you can use scalding suds—and do the job more thoroughly and quickly. And Betty Bright's firm "nose" scrapes up the stubborn dirt, or gets close to baseboards and into corners without splashing.

Betty Bright is trouble-proof—without a part that can get out of order. When the cloth wears out you can replace it with another head of the same specially-treated, doubly-absorbent cotton.

If your dealer doesn't have Betty Bright Mops and cloths, just mail the coupon below, enclose $1, and we will send you a mop complete. Or send $2, and we will include two extra cloths, one for replacement and one to keep dry for your dust mopping.

"PULLING IN THE SEINE." By George Haquette. This excellent painting of deep sea fishermen pulling in their net hangs in the University Club of Pittsburgh and is owned by Mrs. Edward H. Bindley. Fishing is one of the oldest industries in the world and it is estimated that more than $1,000,000 worth of fish is gathered every day from the oceans and inland waters of the world. The form of net used by these fishermen was likely a "purse net," which had a rope along the bottom by which the lower part could be gathered together, forming a deep bag, out of which the fish could not swim.

"PEONIES." By John W. Alexander. Another painting from the collection of Mrs. Edward H. Bindley which hangs in the University Club. The late John White Alexander was born in Allegheny City in 1856, was an illustrator for many years and studied in Germany and Italy. His murals in the foyer of the Carnegie Museum are well known. He is represented in the Luxembourg, Carnegie Institute and other galleries.

"A CHAT ON THE BEACH." By Charles P. Gruppe. The artist, an American, studied and painted for many years in Holland and many of his canvases show the types of people along the Holland coast. Gruppe is represented in several private collections in this country. He is now painting on the coast of Northern Maine. This canvas hangs in the University Club, the property of Mrs. Edward H. Bindley.

Mountain climbing has its thrills, but none is more exciting than that of jumping across huge glacier crevasses in the Swiss Alps.

THEY LOOK LIKE LONG SHEDS.
Great reserve supplies of tanbark are seen around Kane and Corry, Northwestern Pennsylvania, and motorists, seeing them for the first time, think of the Wall of China.

Until Oct. 11th $10.00 the dozen

Childtraits by Bachrach

We urge you to phone for an appointment for your child now, for after October 11 our $10.00 style will be discontinued on account of our Christmas business.

Bachrach Childtraits at $10.00 the dozen happily solve at least eleven Christmas problems, and at such a saving—less than one dollar each!

A Photograph by Bachrach shows discrimination on the part of the Donor.

Ask to see our leather-covered Childtrait Story Book—a delightful series of Child Portraits.

IT'S THE LAST DIP OF SUMMER SWIMMING.
It's awfu' cold, but it's lots of fun to let the waves dash around, Frances Dee and Rosita Moreno hate to say farewell to the summer splashing.

Shagmoor TOPCOATS

The Coat Pictured, $110

Distinguished by their exclusive fabrics and flawless tailoring both in luxuriously furred models and untrimmed styles of swagger distinction. Rain or shine . . . for travel by auto, train, boat or plane . . . for business, shopping, tea, the theater or football game, there is hardly a demand you can make of a "Shagmoor" that it will not perform with distinction. The photographed model with its youthful Wolf collar and cuffs, at $110, for instance . . . It will look smart and wear well under any circumstances. A wide selection of "Shagmoors," in all sizes for women and misses.

$35 to 198.50

MURAL

Above: The two reproductions at the top of the page are from large murals which are to be placed on the walls of the down-town office of the Sun-Telegraph at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Market Street. They were painted by Robert Lep[illegible] Pitts[illegible]

MURAL

Above: Redecorated and finished in aluminum, the downtown office of the Sun-Telegraph will be given brilliant color by these two murals, depicting, in a conventionalized style, the "Spirit of Pittsburgh." The one showing the Golden Triangle and the other its geographic supremacy at the junction of the two rivers.

"HILLSBORO RIVER, FLORIDA." By Milan Petrovits. The artist lives on Sandy Creek Road, near Oakmont, and has painted here for several years. He has won many awards in the Associated Artists exhibitions. In 1922 he won third honor, in 1923 he was awarded the Art Society prize for most meritorious exhibit, in 1924 he presented the "One Man" show, and in 1926 he was awarded first honor and prize.

"FAST PLAY." By Howard L. Hastings. The exact origin of polo is not known though it is believed to have been played in Persia before the Christian era. It was quite popular in India a long time ago and English army officers introduced the game into England in 1870. Forty-five years ago it was brought to America and there are many clubs throughout this country at the present time.

"THE YANKEE CLIPPER."
By William Steeple Davis.

She comes majestic with her swelling sails,
The gallant Ship; along her watery way,
Homeward she drives before the favouring gales;
Now flirting at their length the streamers play,
And now they ripple with the ruffling breeze.

"STIRLING, THE GATEWAY TO THE HIGHLANDS"—By Maurice Greiffenhagen. Situated about 40 miles northwest of Edinburgh and 30 miles northeast of Glasgow, Stirling was, from as early as the 14th century, literally "the key to the Highlands." Formerly there were two main entrances to the fortress, one being the "auld brig" over the Forth River, a quaint high-pitched structure of four arches. The famous Battle of Stirling Bridge was fought in 1297 and from the death of Alexander I until the union of the crowns in 1603 the city was actively associated with the fortunes of the Scottish monarchs. Greiffenhagen, the English artist, who painted this stirring scene of an early battle, which is used as a poster by the London Midland and Scottish Railway Company, is a member of the Royal Academy and a few years ago was a member of the Jury of Award for the Carnegie Institute International Exhibition of Paintings in Pittsburgh

"THE VALE OF EVESHAM"—By Donald Maxwell. It does not seem possible that in this peaceful and beautiful Vale of Evesham, through which the Avon flows, bloody and savage battles were fought. The famous Battle of Evesham, between the forces of Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, and the royalist army under Prince Edward, occurred on August 4, 1265, resulting in the death of the earl and the utter defeat of his valiant troops. St. Egwin founded a Benedictine house here in the Eighth Century, and, though the abbey was destroyed at the Dissolution, a Norman gateway to the churchyard and a bell-tower dating from 1533 still survive.
